Five Bodies Still Being Checked Out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Medical examiners today ruled out the possibility that one of three dead women found in a suspected Symbionese Liberation Army was newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

The bodies of three women and two men were removed from that police raided yesterday in south Los Angeles. A fire started during a gunbattle between occupants and some 500 police, and the bodies were burned beyond recognition. (See other pictures page 33.)

The Los Angeles County Coroner's office said the bodies were those of three white women, one white man and one black man — all of them young. Medical examiners continued to inspect the other bodies.

"We have definitely ruled out one of the bodies as being that of Patricia Hearst," said Edward Day, the senior medical examiner.

The dead were found in a south Los Angeles house that police raided last night. The house burned down during a shoot-out and the bodies were burned beyond recognition.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office said today the bodies were examined for scars and other identifying marks.

The coroner's office said it had requested dental records on abducted newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst as a "matter of routine."

A spokesman for newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst said the FBI told Hearst one of the dead was SLA leader Donald D. DeFreeze. But the FBI denied that agents identified DeFreeze — who was known as SLA General Field Marshal Cinque. The FBI also denied telling the Hearst family any such thing.

The SLA has said it kidnaped Miss Hearst, 20, who was dragged from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4.

The coroner's spokesman said dental checks on the bodies had begun and autopsies would be conducted later today.

All five persons — at least two of whom were women — perished during a furious hour-long gun battle last night in which some 500 heavily armed police fired tear gas shells. The stucco house in south Los Angeles was sprayed with thousands of rounds of ammunition during the siege and caught fire during the battle.

Authorities said they were unable to positively identify any of the bodies because they were badly disfigured in the fire which was believed to have been touched off by a smouldering tear gas shell.

Acting on a tip, flak-jacketed officers took position around the house at about 5:30 p.m. PDT and then called out to the occupants over bullhorn: "Come out with your hands up. The house is surrounded."

Two minutes later, a policeman fired a tear-gas shell into the house and immediately drew a volley fo fire from semi-automatic weapons inside the yellow building at 1466 E. 54th Street.

"It was a war, no other way to describe it," said Police Commander Peter Hagen, summing up the action that followed.

The siege was televised live in the Los Angeles area.

Miss Hearst's fiance, Steven Weed, was at the scene after police stormed the suspected hideout.

About an hour after the first shots were fired, thin tongues of flame suddenly shot from windows and the eaves of the roof. The shooting stopped 15 minutes later.

Hagen said two of the bodies — both women, one black and one white — were found lying in a hallway. Ammunition in belts strapped to their waists exploded in the intense heat from the

Hearst Family Maintains Vigil

HILLSBOROUGH (AP) — Behind the walls of their white stucco mansion, Randolph and Catherine Hearst waited through the night to learn whether their kidnaped daughter Patricia was among five persons killed in a shoot-out with Los Angeles police.

There was no immediate word from the Hearst family on the latest statement from the Los Angeles Coroner's office.

"The feeling inside the Hearst home is that it's over," family spokesman John Lester said late last night. "Nothing has been confirmed either way, although the Hearsts have a direct line to the FBI and have been in touch all day.

"The family really didn't expect it to end this way," Lester said. "We just hope to God that Patty is somewhere else."

Lester said Charles Bates, special agent in charge of the FBI's San Francisco office, had told the Hearsts by telephone that Donald David DeFreeze, reputed Symbionese Liberation Army leader, was identified as one of the victims.

Bates could not be reached for confirmation, and authorities in Los Angeles denied that the five badly burned bodies were identified.

End to tragedy?

A large group of newsmen gathered in front of the 22-room mansion in this suburb 15 miles south of San Francisco.

Lester said he did not expect Hearst to make any statement until today.

The five bodies were taken from a home in south-central Los Angeles after hundreds of police and FBI agents waged an hour-long gun battle with the occupants hoping to flush out several SLA members. A fire, believed started by tear gas canisters, destroyed much of the dwelling.

Lester said the Hearsts watched much of the shootout and its aftermath on live television. At one point, sobs were heard coming from the home.

San Quentin Remains Under Tight Security

More than two-thirds of San Quentin's 3,500 inmates remain locked in their cells today and will remain there through the weekend, prison officials reported. The tight security measures followed widespread violence Thursday.

Only inmates in the honor block, and members of work crews in C block are being allowed to leave their cells, according to a prison spokesman. Officials are to meet Monday to decide whether or not to lift the lockdown.

Thursday's violence saw seven inmates stabbed, one fatally, and one possibly pushed from a catwalk 50 feet above the yard. All injured are in satisfactory or good condition at the prison hospital.

Prime Minister Takes A Big Lead

SYDNEY (UPI) — Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor Party took a decisive lead today in Australia's big cities and appeared to have won an election test of his government's liberal economic policies and a promise to curb soaring inflation.

Unofficial returns indicated the Labor government would be retained in office with at least the nine-member majority it held in the all-important House of Representatives when it went to the polls.

Mitchell Predicts Big Revenue Loss

Marin County and several other local taxing agencies could lose up to $452,000 in tax revenue during fiscal 1975-76 if Sausalito moves ahead with a citywide redevelopment project.

The figures, released yesterday by County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, shows a $2.7 million loss over five years.

Mitchell, who will present his forecast to county supervisors on Tuesday, said the figures are "conservative estimates" of the impact Sausalito's proposed redevelopment would have on the rest of the county.

As reported earlier, the Sausalito City Council is considering a redevelopment project which initially would cover three areas of the community but eventually could cover the entire city.

Under state law, city redevelopment projects can be financed by siphoning off tax revenues from other taxing agencies. It is done by freezing the assessed valuation at its current level and then diverting tax revenues generated by future increases in assessed valuation to the redevelopment agency.

Sausalito Planning Director Herb Case has proposed using the tax shift to finance municipal improvements — such as city hall remodeling — which otherwise would have to be paid for by the city alone.

According to Mitchell, such action could divert $452,000 from the county, school districts and various special districts in the Sausalito area.

A breakdown shows, for example, that the county would lose $110,905 the first year; the Sausalito School District, $113,012; the Tamalpais High School District, $94,227; the Marin Community College District, $45,394.

Case has proposed that the city council, acting as the redevelopment agency board, return funds to the elementary school district and local sanitary district. They then would not have to increase their tax rates to make up for siphoned off funds.

But the Tamalpais High School District, the community college district, transit district, open space district, flood control district, mosquito abatement district and Marin Hospital District would lose money if redevelopment is forthcoming.

Mitchell, in a letter to county supervisors, said the state redevelopment law is intended for blighted areas.

Sausalito's proposal, he continued, "presumes that the City of Sausaltio is a blighted area which has to be redeveloped. This, indeed, is a bold move."

Since redevelopment involves diverting tax revenues from other agencies, Mitchell said Sausalito's proposal amounts to a "rip-off of the taxpayers of Marin who would have their money spent without their ability to even vote for the people spending it."

He said Case's recommendation to return funds to only the city, elementary school district and sanitary district means "all (Sausalito) city taxpayers would be well taken care of and the redevelopment agency would be 'fat as a cat.' "

Meanwhile, Sausalito Mayor Evert H. Heynneman yesterday branded remarks by Supervisor Michael Wornum critical of Sausalito redevelopment plans as "highly irresponsible" and a stab in the city's back.

Earlier this week, Wornum,

(AP Wirephoto)

Manhunt Is Launched For Dublin Bombing Tragedy

DUBLIN (UPI) — Army troops and police launched a nationwide manhunt today for extremists who set off split-second bomb blasts in downtown Dublin and a quiet rural village, killing 28 persons and wounding more than 100 others.

Police sealed off all streets out of the capital today and issued a stern warning to the nation that "every town and village in the republic must be on the alert for bomb attacks."

Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave went on national television and angrily denounced the attacks as "unforgiveable acts." He said the Irish government did not know who planted the bombs.

The Irish bombings caused the largest number of deaths since Protestant-Roman Catholic violence erupted in the province of Northern Ireland five years ago, surpassing the 15 deaths in a Belfast bar attack in December 1971.

Three bombs planted in abandoned cars exploded in the heart of the Irish capital during the evening rush hour yesterday, all detonating within a five-second time span on the crowded streets.

Police said the Dublin bombings killed 23 persons and wounded scores of others. They said two of the cars had been hijacked in Belfast.

The blasts tore automobiles to pieces and blew out huge display windows, sending chunks of glass through groups of shoppers. Men and women were blasted through a department store window and lay grotesquely among tailors' mannequins.

In the town of Monaghan, 75 miles northwest of the capital near the border with Northern reland, a fourth bomb exploded 90 minutes after the Dublin blasts and killed five persons, police said.

Police described the town as a stronghold of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Both factions of the IRA and the Northern Ireland Ulster Defense Association, a grouping of militant Protestant organizations, disclaimed responsibility for Friday's attacks.

The Dublin victims included 15 women, six men and two babies, both boys, aged 18 months and 2-½ years.

"It's too horrible for words," said Too Driscoll, a police officier. "I saw women lying around clutching their kids to them, blood streaming from them. It was awful."

He said the bombs "were timed to go off when they would kill the most possible."

India Now Member Of Atomic Group

NEW DELHI (API) — India announced today that it has successfully exploded its first nuclear device, joining the superpowers in the atomic age with a pledge never to use the discovery in war.

India's Atomic Energy Commission said the government had carried out a peaceful nuclear explosion experiment using an implosion device 100 yards below the surface of the earth.

A commission spokesman did not say when or where the test took place, nor did he mention whether the country had received any outside aid in carrying out the experiment.

The Press Trust of India reported there were indications the device probably was exploded Thursday in the Rajasthan area, a mostly desert region in Western India near the border with Pakistan.

The explosion made India the sixth nation to explode a nuclear device. The other five nations are the United States, the Soviet Unio, China, France and Great Britain.

The Indian Atomic Energy Commission said the government had no intention of producing nuclear weapons and reiterated the government's strong opposition to military use of nuclear explosions.

The India government has been studying various forms of nuclear technology, particularly possible uses in mining and earth-moving operations.

The United States exploded the firstatomic bomb at Los Alamos, N.M. on July 16, 1945. The only nuclear weapons used in war were dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, Aug. 6, 1945 and Nagasaki, Aug. 9, 1945.

On Sept. 23, 1949' the late President Harry S. Truman announced that the Soviet Union had exploded its own atomic bomb, ending U.S. monopoly of the nuclear weapon.

Area Problems

Landslides and other problems of the area will be discussed at 8 p.m. Thursday at a general membership meeting of the Oak Manor Homeowners Association in the Manor School in Fairfax, according to Scott Alexander, past president.

Magee Plea Questioned By Clark

SAN JOSE (AP) — Former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark has testified Ruchell Magee was under diminished capacity when he pleaded guilty to 4-year-old kidnapping charges.

Calling him a "lonely fighter for freedom," Clark told Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge William A. Ingram yesterday that Magee's capacity to understand the nature and quality of his acts was diminished by a lifetime of being the target of racism and injustice.

Magee changed his plea to guilty May 10 to charges of aggravated kidnapping in the August, 1970 Marin County Hall of Justice escape attempt which killed a judge, two convicts and their accomplice. But Magee later moved to withdraw his guilty plea.

A hearing on the issue was convened Monday, after U.S. District Court Judge Harry Tregerson of Los Angeles had denied Magee's petition to switch the case from the state to the federal courts.

Public defender Frank Katz said Magee entered a plea of guilty "only out of incredible frustration because he had received no kind of justice" from Judge Ingram.

Clark said Magee "was caught up in an incredible event - an event not of his making or control," and called his struggle for freedom "longer, lonelier and nobler" than any he had ever seen.

The hearing continues Monday morning.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Ford Issues Congressional Warning

HONOLULU (UPI) — While a handful of demonstrators picketed and chanted "Jail to the Chief," Vice President Gerald Ford ended a round of political appearances in Honolulu yesterday by warning of a "dictatorial" Congress.

Ford

Ford cited recent predictions of a Democratic landslide in November in an address to 2,500 delegates to the Hawaii state Republican convention.

"Now we are faced with the possibility that Congress will not be balanced, a totally powerful and dictatorial Congress," he said in urging Republican unity.

"The resulting legislative dictatorship will nullify the mandate received when the people elected Richard Nixon over George McGovern," Ford said.

"The people don't want a legislative dictatorship that will reinstate McGovern's platform."

New Dialogue

LISBON (UPI) — The new government of Portugal today began preparations to end more than a decade of guerrilla war in its colonies at a conference table in London instead of on the battlefields of Africa.

Foreign Minister Mario Soares said yesterday his talks in Dakar, Senegal, with the leader of the independence movement in Guinea and the Cape Verde Islands "opened a new day for a dialogue of peace."

Opposes Prop. 9

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has officially declared his opposition to Proposition 9, the political reform initiative on the June 4 primary election ballot.

The governor yesterday also endorsed all eight other propositions on the ballot including Prop. 5, which would permit diversion of gas tax funds for mass transit. Currently gas taxes can be used only for street and highway construction and maintenance.

Prison Riot

CHESTER, Ill. (UPI) — About 60 prisoners seized control of a cellblock at the maximum security Menard Correctional Center yesterday and held four guards hostage before releasing them unharmed and returning peacefully to their cells.

Election Violence

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Terrorists killed an assistant district attorney and soldier yesterday in an eruption of violence following the lopsided election victory of President Joaquin Balaguer.

Police said extermists in two cars attacked a schoolhouse polling place, killing a soldier standing guard in the building while officials counted ballots in Thursday's disputed nation election.

New Offensive

Manhunt Is Launched For Dublin Bombing Tragedy

DUBLIN (UPI) — Army troops and police launched a nationwide manhunt today for extremists who set off split-second bomb blasts in downtown Dublin and a quiet rural village, killing 28 persons and wounding more than 100 others.

Police sealed off all streets out of the capital today and issued a stern warning to the nation that "every town and village in the republic must be on the alert for bomb attacks."

Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave went on national television and angrily denounced the attacks as "unforgiveable acts." He said the Irish government did not know who planted the bombs.

Prisoner's Escape Cancels Out Parole

San Quentin inmate Stephen J. McKim would have been out on parole by now if he hadn't escaped from the prison's fire station Jan. 9.

Instead of freedom, McKim now faces another year behind bars, a Marin Superior Court judge noted yesterday.

"You have to be the dumbest guy I've ever seen," Judge Charles Read Best told the 29-year-old McKim, who pleaded guilty to escape without force and auto theft.

Best declared the theft a misdemeanor and sentenced McKim to one year in county jail. On the escape, he gave the convict one year in prison, to run concurrently with the other sentence.

Another inmate charged with McKim, Donald Herman Gibson, 30, refused today to change his plea and faces a jury trial next week.

The men are said to have escaped from the San Quentin fire house, where they worked, and stole a car from a San Rafael man. They were arrested in Elko, Nev., Jan. 12.

McKim was serving a sentence for armed robbery in San Francisco, while Gibson was in prison on a check forgery conviction from Orange County.

Hair Stylist Convicted Of Slayings

OAKLAND (AP) — A hair stylist has been convicted of the execution-style slayings of a wealthy Piedmont socialite and her 44-year-old son.

An Alameda County Superior Court jury Wednesday found Leroy Breckenridge, 26, of Oakland, guilty of two counts of first degree murder in the kidnaping-deaths of Ellen Eccles Harrison, 57, and her son Warren Merrill.

Their bodies were found in the trunk of her powder-blue Cadillac near the Richmond Golf and Country Club here last Feb. 1.

Detectives said ransom apparently was the motive for the crime.

The jury also found Breckenridge guilty of being an ex-convict in possession of firearms, and of kidnaping.

The jury of 10 women and two men deliberated two hours and 26 minutes. Breckenridge will be sentenced June 5.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Gary Yancey termed the murder-kidnapings "executions".

Dredging Project Wins Final Approval

Synanon Foundation has received final approval to dredge 10,000 cubic yards of gravel from the bed of Walker Creek for use on Synanon Ranch roads near Marshall.

Irving L. Schwartz of the county public works department reported yesterday that the county environmental protections committee approved the foundation request on Thursday — subject to expiration of an appeal period. Environmental hearing officer Joel E. Rubey had set Wednesday as the protest deadling on his decision that no environmental impact report is necessary on the proposed work.

Prisoner's Escape Cancels Out Parole

San Quentin inmate Stephen J. McKim would have been out on parole by now if he hadn't escaped from the prison's fire station Jan. 9.

Instead of freedom, McKim now faces another year behind bars, a Marin Superior Court judge noted yesterday.

"You have to be the dumbest guy I've ever seen," Judge Charles Read Best told the 29-year-old McKim, who pleaded guilty to escape without force and auto theft.

Best declared the theft a misdemeanor and sentenced McKim to one year in county jail. On the escape, he gave the convict one year in prison, to run concurrently with the other sentence.

Another inmate charged with McKim, Donald Herman Gibson, 30, refused today to change his plea and faces a jury trial next week.

The men are said to have escaped from the San Quentin fire house, where they worked, and stole a car from a San Rafael man. They were arrested in Elko, Nev., Jan. 12.

McKim was serving a sentence for armed robbery in San Francisco, while Gibson was in prison on a check forgery conviction from Orange County.

Hair Stylist Convicted Of Slayings

OAKLAND (AP) — A hair stylist has been convicted of the execution-style slayings of a wealthy Piedmont socialite and her 44-year-old son.

An Alameda County Superior Court jury Wednesday found Leroy Breckenridge, 26, of Oakland, guilty of two counts of first degree murder in the kidnaping-deaths of Ellen Eccles Harrison, 57, and her son Warren Merrill.

Their bodies were found in the trunk of her powder-blue Cadillac near the Richmond Golf and Country Club here last Feb. 1.

Detectives said ransom apparently was the motive for the crime.

The jury also found Breckenridge guilty of being an ex-convict in possession of firearms, and of kidnaping.

The jury of 10 women and two men deliberated two hours and 26 minutes. Breckenridge will be sentenced June 5.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Gary Yancey termed the murder-kidnapings "executions".

Dredging Project Wins Final Approval

Synanon Foundation has received final approval to dredge 10,000 cubic yards of gravel from the bed of Walker Creek for use on Synanon Ranch roads near Marshall.

Irving L. Schwartz of the county public works department reported yesterday that the county environmental protections committee approved the foundation request on Thursday — subject to expiration of an appeal period. Environmental hearing officer Joel E. Rubey had set Wednesday as the protest deadling on his decision that no environmental impact report is necessary on the proposed work.

Driver Is Booked On Four Counts

Claresse Eisenberg, 35, of 33 Marquard Avenue, San Rafael, was arrested early today on suspicion of driving under the influence of drugs and possessing dangerous drugs, dangerous drugs for sale and drug paraphernalia, the Highway Patrol reported.

She was held in Marin County jail in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Patrolmen reported that she was stopped southbound on Highway 101 at Rodeo Avenue at 2:30 a.m. after officers ob[illegible] her auto weaving back [illegible] Inside the car patrol[illegible] 10 packages of suspected heroin, a bag thought to contain cocaine, several needles and syringes and a spoon.

blaze, maiming the bodies further and making identification even more difficult.

Three other bodies were found underneath the house near air vents to the outside.

A flak-jacketed officer with a gas mask said: "It was just like Vietnam."

The raid was the second of the day Friday on a suspected SLA hideout. But officers found no one inside the first house they stormed.

During the gunbattle at the second house, a woman ran out of the small dwelling after it caught fire.

"They held me, they held me," the woman was heard to say as she was taken away to an ambulance. She was not identified and appeared to have suffered gunshot wounds.

Mary Carr, 52, told police her daughter lived in the house and allowed five persons who arrived at 2 a.m. Friday to spend the night.

Mrs. Carr said her daughter, Minnie Lewis, 33, told her that she had allowed the five to spend the night after they offered to pay her $100. Mrs. Carr said she went to the house Friday.

"I went back there to see what was going on," Mrs. Carr said. "A white lady had a belt on with a pistol . . . she slapped at the pistol and smiled up at me."

Mrs. Carr said she left and notified police. Police also reported later two vans that may have been used by the SLA members were discovered parked nearby.

It was not known if Mrs. Lewis was the woman who ran from the house.

Officers with lights poked through the debris through the night, finding a few handguns, a shotgun and small pipe-bombs.

Shooting from inside the house continued even as it was engulfed in flames. The firing ceased after the walls collapsed.

One policeman was at first reported to have a leg wound, but officers later said he apparently fell off a roof.

All residents in the area had been ordered out of the area, and in the midst of the gunfight police were still trying to evacuate about a dozen persons who stayed despite the orders.

In one incident, about six members of a family — including a mother dragging one child by the arm as she carried a baby in her other arm — scampered out of a window while a policeman with an M16 rifle guarded their retreat.

Before the raid, the FBI alerted police agencies in Washington state to be on the lookout for a car possibly carrying Miss Hearst and SLA members. Early today they said the alert still stood. A sheriff's office spokesman in Spokane, Wash., said police were still checking out a report that Miss Hearst and four other persons were seen in the car Thursday night.

The raid followed a hunt for three suspected SLA members who fled after a shootout at a sporting goods store in nearby Inglewood Thursday night.

tified as a participant in a $10,690 bank robbery, possibly against her will. Federal officials charge three SLA members with the holdup and name Miss Hearst as a material witness.

Year To Life Term In Greenbrae Case

James William Frisby was sentenced to one year to life in prison yesterday for the robbery of a Greenbrae ice cream store and the shooting of a high school student last October.

The San Rafael man was sentenced by Marin Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr., who presided over Frisby's second trial earlier this month. His first trial in February ended in a hung jury.

Menary ordered Frisby, 24, to serve six months to life for the shooting of 17-year-old H. Eric Newlin and one year to life for the $200 robbery of Swensen's Ice Cream. The sentences will run concurrently.

Another San Rafael man, Raymond McFarland, 31, stood trial with Frisby in February, but pleaded guilty to the armed robbery before the second trial could start. The assault charge then was dismissed.

He has been sent to the California Medical Facility at Vacaville for an evaluation before sentencing, but Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best has warned McFarland he will be sent to prison regardless of the outcome.

Newlin testified during both of Frisby's trials that he saw Frisby, a former Swensen's employee, waiting in a car outside the store. When McFarland ran from the store, which had just been held up, Newlin followed the pair in his own car.

Both autos stopped along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near the Hutchinson Quarry, and McFarland shot Newlin in the chest and heat, the youth testified.

Members Of CHP Talk Of Strike

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Members of the California Highway Patrolmens Association will vote on whether to strike for legislation that would grant a pay raise, the organization announced today.

Ralph Schiavone, executive manager of the association, said the vote of the 6,300-member group was "imminent" but declined to disclose when it actually would be taken.

About 240 off-duty patrolmen and their wives plan to picket CHP headquarters in Los Angeles on Monday, he said, and about that many will do likewise in San Francisco.

Schiavone said the issue revolves around legislation by Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, that would require the state Personnel Board to compute pay raises for patrolmen based on what police receive in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego and Oakland.

Ther personnel Board traditionally had computed patrol pay increases by basing them on earnings of officers in those major cities, he said, but "arbitrarily" expanded the list to include officers in about 20 cities, many of them small.

He noted the personnel board had recommended a 4.5 per cent increase for patrolmen whose current average monthly salary is about $1,660.

He said based on the current method of computing salaries, "it ends up the CHP will be some 15 per cent behind prevailing average pay of officers in the five largest jurisdictions."

The bill (AB3801) is scheduled for its first hearing on Tuesday. Schiavone said the association members, whom he said include virtually all the patrol's uniformed officers, would be asked whether they would strike if the measure was not signed into law.

Schiavone said patrolmen are now 7 per cent behind the salaries of police officers in the five biggest local jurisdictions. He said local officers are expected to receive at least an average 8 per cent pay raise July 1.

$10 Million Claim Filed Over Marsh

A $10 million inverse condemnation claim has been filed against the county by William J. Heerdt, owner of the 74-acre Heerdt Marsh in Corte Madera.

The claim says the county board of supervisors acted to "prevent and frustrate" development of the marsh with it endorsed a Bay Conservation and development commission decision to veto a proposed yacht harbor on the site.

At the time, supervisors also urged the state to purchase the marsh, long sought by conservationists who want to preserve it in its natural state.

The claim covers the land value of the marsh as well as its development value, listed at $5.5 million.

The marsh is at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek, east of the Highway 101 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard interchange.

Such claims are routinely rejected by county supervisors but must be made before a lawsuit can be filed.

whose district includes Sausalito, called the city's redevelopment proposal "purely a rip-off of county funds" and agreed with colleague Peter R. Arrigoni to look into the matter next week.

In a written statement, Heynneman lashed back at Wornum, saying that "as our representative on the board, who is supposed to look after the good of his constituents and the territory he represents, his statement is highly irresponsible. . .

"Mr. Wornum was invited to attend the study session in which the redevelopment process was presented to the council by staff. He had a chance to make his viewpoint known directly to us but he didn't even show up," the mayor said. "The county has the redevelopment process under consideration for the area just north of Sausalto. Apparently, Mr. Wornum is perfectly willing to participate in a big rip-off that will benefit the county but denies the city that same privilege."

The mayor then listed a series of what he called "rip-offs" of the city of Sausalito by the county, including: a low level of county services in comparison to taxes paid; increased tax assessments of 50 per cent in some downtown areas and high taxes paid by Sausalitans to finance a school district serving a population which is 85 per cent county residents.

"Now that we want some of this money back through the redevelopment process, which is a perfectly legal process, our representative on the board is stabbing us in the back and calling it a rip-off," Heynneman wrote. I think Mr. Wornum's stateent is uncalled for and his position on this and the above matters is extremely regretable."

Driver Is Booked On Four Counts

Claresse Eisenberg, 35, of 33 Marquard Avenue, San Rafael, was arrested early today on suspicion of driving under the influence of drugs and possessing dangerous drugs, dangerous drugs for sale and drug paraphernalia, the Highway Patrol reported.

She was held in Marin County jail in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Patrolmen reported that she was stopped southbound on Highway 101 at Rodeo Avenue at 2:30 a.m. after officers observed her auto weaving back [illegible]. Inside the car patrolmen [illegible] 10 packages of suspected heroin, a bag thought to contain cocaine, several needles and syringes and a spoon.

blaze, maiming the bodies further and making identification even more difficult.

Three other bodies were found underneath the house near air vents to the outside.

A flak-jacketed officer with a gas mask said: "It was just like Vietnam."

The raid was the second of the day Friday on a suspected SLA hideout. But officers found no one inside the first house they stormed.

During the gunbattle at the second house, a woman ran out of the small dwelling after it caught fire.

"They held me, they held me," the woman was heard to say as she was taken away to an ambulance. She was not identified and appeared to have suffered gunshot wounds.

Mary Carr, 52, told police her daughter lived in the house and allowed five persons who arrived at 2 a.m. Friday to spend the night.

Mrs. Carr said her daughter, Minnie Lewis, 33, told her that she had allowed the five to spend the night after they offered to pay her $100. Mrs. Carr said she went to the house Friday.

"I went back there to see what was going on," Mrs. Carr said. "A white lady had a belt on with a pistol . . . she slapped at the pistol and smiled up at me."

Mrs. Carr said she left and notified police. Police also reported later two vans that may have been used by the SLA members were discovered parked nearby.

It was not known if Mrs. Lewis was the woman who ran from the house.

Officers with lights poked through the debris through the night, finding a few handguns, a shotgun and small pipe-bombs.

Shooting from inside the house continued even as it was engulfed in flames. The firing ceased after the walls collapsed.

One policeman was at first reported to have a leg wound, but officers later said he apparently fell off a roof.

All residents in the area had been ordered out of the area, and in the midst of the gunfight police were still trying to evacuate about a dozen persons who stayed despite the orders.

In one incident, about six members of a family — including a mother dragging one child by the arm as she carried a baby in her other arm — scampered out of a window while a policeman with an M16 rifle guarded their retreat.

Before the raid, the FBI alerted police agencies in Washington state to be on the lookout for a car possibly carrying Miss Hearst and SLA members. Early today they said the alert still stood. A sheriff's office spokesman in Spokane, Wash., said police were still checking out a report that Miss Hearst and four other persons were seen in the car Thursday night.

The raid followed a hunt for three suspected SLA members who fled after a shootout at a sporting goods store in nearby Inglewood Thursday night.

Year To Life Term In Greenbrae Case

James William Frisby was sentenced to one year to life in prison yesterday for the robbery of a Greenbrae ice cream store and the shooting of a high school student last October.

The San Rafael man was sentenced by Marin Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr., who presided over Frisby's second trial earlier this month. His first trial in February ended in a hung jury.

Menary ordered Frisby, 24, to serve six months to life for the shooting of 17-year-old H. Eric Newlin and one year to life for the $200 robbery of Swensen's Ice Cream. The sentences will run concurrently.

Another San Rafael man, Raymond McFarland, 31, stood trial with Frisby in February, but pleaded guilty to the armed robbery before the second trial could start. The assault charge then was dismissed.

He has been sent to the California Medical Facility at Vacaville for an evaluation before sentencing, but Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best has warned McFarland he will be sent to prison regardless of the outcome.

Newlin testified during both of Frisby's trials that he saw Frisby, a former Swensen's employee, waiting in a car outside the store. When McFarland ran from the store, which had just been held up, Newlin followed the pair in his own car.

Both autos stopped along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near the Hutchinson Quarry, and McFarland shot Newlin in the chest and heat, the youth testified.

Members Of CHP Talk Of Strike

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Members of the California Highway Patrolmens Association will vote on whether to strike for legislation that would grant a pay raise, the organization announced today.

Ralph Schiavone, executive manager of the association, said the vote of the 6,300-member group was "imminent" but declined to disclose when it actually would be taken.

About 240 off-duty patrolmen and their wives plan to picket CHP headquarters in Los Angeles on Monday, he said, and about that many will do likewise in San Francisco.

Schiavone said the issue revolves around legislation by Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, that would require the state Personnel Board to compute pay raises for patrolmen based on what police receive in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego and Oakland.

Ther personnel Board traditionally had computed patrol pay increases by basing them on earnings of officers in those major cities, he said, but "arbitrarily" expanded the list to include officers in about 20 cities, many of them small.

He noted the personnel board had recommended a 4.5 per cent increase for patrolmen whose current average monthly salary is about $1,660.

He said based on the current method of computing salaries, "it ends up the CHP will be some 15 per cent behind prevailing average pay of officers in the five largest jurisdictions."

The bill (AB3801) is scheduled for its first hearing on Tuesday. Schiavone said the association members, whom he said include virtually all the patrol's uniformed officers, would be asked whether they would strike if the measure was not signed into law.

Schiavone said patrolmen are now 7 per cent behind the salaries of police officers in the five biggest local jurisdictions. He said local officers are expected to receive at least an average 8 per cent pay raise July 1.

$10 Million Claim Filed Over Marsh

A $10 million inverse condemnation claim has been filed against the county by William J. Heerdt, owner of the 74-acre Heerdt Marsh in Corte Madera.

The claim says the county board of supervisors acted to "prevent and frustrate" development of the marsh with it endorsed a Bay Conservation and development commission decision to veto a proposed yacht harbor on the site.

At the time, supervisors also urged the state to purchase the marsh, long sought by conservationists who want to preserve it in its natural state.

The claim covers the land value of the marsh as well as its development value, listed at $5.5 million.

The marsh is at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek, east of the Highway 101 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard interchange.

Such claims are routinely rejected by county supervisors but must be made before a lawsuit can be filed.

whose district includes Sausalito, called the city's redevelopment proposal "purely a rip-off of county funds" and agreed with colleague Peter R. Arrigoni to look into the matter next week.

In a written statement, Heynneman lashed back at Wornum, saying that "as our representative on the board, who is supposed to look after the good of his constituents and the territory he represents, his statement is highly irresponsible. . .

"Mr. Wornum was invited to attend the study session in which the redevelopment process was presented to the council by staff. He had a chance to make his viewpoint known directly to us but he didn't even show up," the mayor said. "The county has the redevelopment process under consideration for the area just north of Sausalto. Apparently, Mr. Wornum is perfectly willing to participate in a big rip-off that will benefit the county but denies the city that same privilege."

The mayor then listed a series of what he called "rip-offs" of the city of Sausalito by the county, including: a low level of county services in comparison to taxes paid; increased tax assessments of 50 per cent in some downtown areas and high taxes paid by Sausalitans to finance a school district serving a population which is 85 per cent county residents.

"Now that we want some of this money back through the redevelopment process, which is a perfectly legal process, our representative on the board is stabbing us in the back and calling it a rip-off," Heynneman wrote. I think Mr. Wornum's stateent is uncalled for and his position on this and the above matters is extremely regretable."

Wornum Attacks Present Building Code Policies

Michael Wornum of Mill Valley, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, has urged that the state relax its uniform building code to cut housing construction costs.

Citing the right of people "to build homes to suit their own desires and needs," Wornum said that "if individuals don't want electricity or conventional plumbing they should not be forced to have it. If they want to use a closed compost chamber for toilets they should be allowed to," he added.

People also should have the right to move into their homes "before everything is completed and finish the job while residing in the home," Wornum said. Under current regulations, building inspectors will not permit utilities to be turned on until a home is complete, he noted.

Wornum, a Marin County supervisor, said that enforcement of the code in the county "is far from uniform. Some of the city building inspectors are helpful and reasonable in their demands. Others, including the county building inspector's office, have the reputation of being uptight and unreasonable in demanding absolute conformance with the code under any and all circumstances, thus often creating hardships on the owner, builder and remodeler," he added.

Wornum, an architect and planner, said the code originally was designed "to govern builders of tract houses and to protect the buyer. Now they have become a tool of harassment in many instances," he said, adding that "moderation should be achieved."

Wornum also criticized the state for failing to enforce its laws to assure pure food and beverages. The state has only two inspectors in the nine Bay Area counties to inspect all restaurants, bars and bakeries, he said. As a result, the law "is simply not being enforced."

He also called for a statewide child care program, "adequately financed for women with low earnings." He did not offer an estimate of the cost of such a program. Mothers who work or are the heads of families should be able to deduct child care costs as business expenses, Wornum suggested.

A coffee for Wornum will be held at 8 p.m. Monday at the Larkspur home of Lawrence Lanctot, 47 Meadowood Drive, and a cocktail party at 7 p.m. Friday at the Ross home of Dr. James D. Green, 2 Canyon Road.

McGUIRE — Terrence V. McGuire of San Rafael, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth Congressional District and for election to the same seat for the remainder of this year, has demanded that a fellow candidate, Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, withdraw from the race because he has accepted campaign contributions from labor unions and corporations, both illegal under federal law.

YOUNGER — Evelle J. Younger, candidate for reelection as California's attorney general, will be the speaker at the Marin County Peace Officers Association's monthly meeting Wednesday at Peacock Gap Country Club. Reservations for the event, open to the public, are being handled by Lt. Henry W. Ingwersen of the San Rafael Police Department. No-host cocktails will be at 7 p.m. and the dinner at 8 p.m.

KRUG — Edward M. Krug of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County district attorney, has charged that deputy district attorneys are spending so much vacation time campaigning for reelection of the incumbent, Bruce B. Bales, that the county is short of prosecutors. "It looks as if this election is disrupting the entire operation of the district's attorney's office," Krug said. The lack of prosecutors is bound to mean "deferred trials, court continuances, wasted time and further disruptions," he added.

Krug also urged that police reports be withheld from newspapers "to protect the privacy of the victims." He insisted he was "by no means an advocate for censorship of the press, but in many cases the victims are not only victimized by the lawbreaker, but by unfavorable publicity and information about their possessions or private lives."

GIBSON — A walk for Dorothy Gibson of Sausalito, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 5 seat, will begin at 10 a.m. May 26, from the parking lot of Natalie Coffin Greene Memorial Park at the end of Lagunitas Road in Ross.

CONNICK — Coffees for Harry A. Connick of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County district attorney, all at 8:30 p.m., will be held: Friday at the San Rafael home of Mrs. R. F. Richmond, 78 Scenic Avenue; May 28 at the San Rafael home of Mrs. John M. Sheridan, 25 Mount Whitney Drive, and May 31 at the Santa Venetia home of Mrs. Floyd R. Peterson, 16 Garden Avenue.

CANDIDATES — A candidates' night for hopefuls for Marin County clerk and district attorney will be held by Marin Alternative at 8 p.m. May 29 in the supervisors chambers of the Marin Civic Center.

SASSELLI — Louis J. Sasselli of Corte Madera, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, has proposed expansion of treatment programs for mentally retarded adults. The state has concentrated its funds on mentally retarded youths, "but seems to think that the problem is resolved when they reach 21, as if by some sort of magic," he said.

FILANTE — Dr. William j. Filante of Kentfield, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 3 seat, has named Kenneth Howard of San Rafael as treasurer of his campaign.

BURTON — A coffee for Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco, candidate for his party's nomination in the Ninth Assembly District and for election to the same seat for the remainder of this year, will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato home of Richard Coleman Jr., 38 Drakewood Lane.

SILVESTRI — George J. Silvestri Jr. of Novato, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, has named Olive Lewis of San Rafael as manager of his campaign. She is past executive director of the Campaign Assistance Task Force, a Democratic organization promoting election of Democrats to the Assembly in Northern California.

WALKER — Robert C. Walker of Mill Valley, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 4 seat, has named Alice Wakefield of Sausalito as vice chairman of his campaign.

Tentative Map Before Planners

The Novato Planning Commission will review a tentative map of a 103-lot subdivision on San Marin Drive, at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

The commission also will consider precise plans for the first phase of the 18-unit Sagewood project at the end of Cherry Street.

Judge Rules Against Back Pay Policy

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A federal judge ruled yesterday California could not pay its employes, $83 million in back salary, declaring it would undermine Congressional intent to halt runaway inflation.

In making the ruling, U.S. District Judge Philip Wilkins granted federal attorneys a preliminary injunction halting pay raises to 80,000 state employes until a similar case id decided in the U.S. Supreme Court.

The federal government filed suit against the state to stop back raises between July 1, 1973 to April 1 1974.

State attorneys argued the raises would come after the expiration of the economic stabilization act and the federal government had no say in the matter.

Talmadge R. Jones, assistant state attorney general, said he would appeal the decision to the Temporary Emergency Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., contending the Federal Cost of Living Council's authority stopped April 30 when anti-inflationary measures expired.

Wilkins said he agreed with Federal Attorney William White who said if the state pays the back raises "it would undermine congressional intent and the Economic Stabilization Act."

Wilkins also cited a similar case before the U.S. Supreme Court in which Ohio State employes were testing the federal government's authority to set wage guildlines.

Most of the employees affected by the ruling were earlier paid raises in excess of 5 per cent, but the state still owes them 4.5 per cent. Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the State Budget Act last June 30 which granted state employes a 11.3 per cent raise.

Although the federal decision did not cite the California Supreme Court directly, the order prohibiting the payments in effect overruled an earlier state high court decision to grant the back raises.

The judge said before the ruling that if the state made the payments and they were later deemed illegal California would have a "horrenous problem collecting" the salaries back.

The judge also said since Reagan signed the budget act while the stabilization act was in force, the raises granted during that period came under the guidelines.

Awards Night

Dozens of scholarship and achievement awards will be presented to outstanding students at the Terra Linda High School awards night, 8 p.m. June 5, in the school cafeteria, a spokesman said today.

School Problems To Be Discussed

Problems at the Mill Valley Middle School will be discussed at a Mill Valley School District board meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the school.

The item was scheduled because parents have complained about lack of discipline and scheduling difficulties.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of how the district will pick a new principal for Homestead School. The school's present principal is transferring to the Middle School to serve as a vice principal.

Reservations for the event, open to the public, are being handled by Lt. Henry W. Ingwersen of the San Rafael Police Department. No-host cocktails will be at 7 p.m. and the dinner at 8 p.m.

KRUG — Edward M. Krug of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County district attorney, has charged that deputy district attorneys are spending so much vacation time campaigning for reelection of the incumbent, Bruce B. Bales, that the county is short of prosecutors. "It looks as if this election is disrupting the entire operation of the district's attorney's office," Krug said. The lack of prosecutors is bound to mean "deferred trials, court continuances, wasted time and further disruptions," he added.

Krug also urged that police reports be withheld from newspapers "to protect the privacy of the victims." He insisted he was "by no means an advocate for censorship of the press, but in many cases the victims are not only victimized by the lawbreaker, but by unfavorable publicity and information about their possessions or private lives."

GIBSON — A walk for Dorothy Gibson of Sausalito, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 5 seat, will begin at 10 a.m. May 26, from the parking lot of Natalie Coffin Greene Memorial Park at the end of Lagunitas Road in Ross.

CONNICK — Coffees for Harry A. Connick of San Rafael, candidate for Marin County district attorney, all at 8:30 p.m., will be held: Friday at the San Rafael home of Mrs. R. F. Richmond, 78 Scenic Avenue; May 28 at the San Rafael home of Mrs. John M. Sheridan, 25 Mount Whitney Drive, and May 31 at the Santa Venetia home of Mrs. Floyd R. Peterson, 16 Garden Avenue.

CANDIDATES — A candidates' night for hopefuls for Marin County clerk and district attorney will be held by Marin Alternative at 8 p.m. May 29 in the supervisors chambers of the Marin Civic Center.

SASSELLI — Louis J. Sasselli of Corte Madera, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, has proposed expansion of treatment programs for mentally retarded adults. The state has concentrated its funds on mentally retarded youths, "but seems to think that the problem is resolved when they reach 21, as if by some sort of magic," he said.

FILANTE — Dr. William j. Filante of Kentfield, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 3 seat, has named Kenneth Howard of San Rafael as treasurer of his campaign.

BURTON — A coffee for Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco, candidate for his party's nomination in the Ninth Assembly District and for election to the same seat for the remainder of this year, will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato home of Richard Coleman Jr., 38 Drakewood Lane.

SILVESTRI — George J. Silvestri Jr. of Novato, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, has named Olive Lewis of San Rafael as manager of his campaign. She is past executive director of the Campaign Assistance Task Force, a Democratic organization promoting election of Democrats to the Assembly in Northern California.

WALKER — Robert C. Walker of Mill Valley, candidate for Marin Municipal Water District's Division 4 seat, has named Alice Wakefield of Sausalito as vice chairman of his campaign.

Tentative Map Before Planners

The Novato Planning Commission will review a tentative map of a 103-lot subdivision on San Marin Drive, at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

The commission also will consider precise plans for the first phase of the 18-unit Sagewood project at the end of Cherry Street.

Judge Rules Against Back Pay Policy

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A federal judge ruled yesterday California could not pay its employes, $83 million in back salary, declaring it would undermine Congressional intent to halt runaway inflation.

In making the ruling, U.S. District Judge Philip Wilkins granted federal attorneys a preliminary injunction halting pay raises to 80,000 state employes until a similar case id decided in the U.S. Supreme Court.

The federal government filed suit against the state to stop back raises between July 1, 1973 to April 1 1974.

State attorneys argued the raises would come after the expiration of the economic stabilization act and the federal government had no say in the matter.

Talmadge R. Jones, assistant state attorney general, said he would appeal the decision to the Temporary Emergency Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., contending the Federal Cost of Living Council's authority stopped April 30 when anti-inflationary measures expired.

Wilkins said he agreed with Federal Attorney William White who said if the state pays the back raises "it would undermine congressional intent and the Economic Stabilization Act."

Wilkins also cited a similar case before the U.S. Supreme Court in which Ohio State employes were testing the federal government's authority to set wage guildlines.

Most of the employees affected by the ruling were earlier paid raises in excess of 5 per cent, but the state still owes them 4.5 per cent. Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the State Budget Act last June 30 which granted state employes a 11.3 per cent raise.

Although the federal decision did not cite the California Supreme Court directly, the order prohibiting the payments in effect overruled an earlier state high court decision to grant the back raises.

The judge said before the ruling that if the state made the payments and they were later deemed illegal California would have a "horrenous problem collecting" the salaries back.

The judge also said since Reagan signed the budget act while the stabilization act was in force, the raises granted during that period came under the guidelines.

School Problems To Be Discussed

Problems at the Mill Valley Middle School will be discussed at a Mill Valley School District board meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the school.

The item was scheduled because parents have complained about lack of discipline and scheduling difficulties.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of how the district will pick a new principal for Homestead School. The school's present principal is transferring to the Middle School to serve as a vice principal.

Awards Night

Dozens of scholarship and achievement awards will be presented to outstanding students at the Terra Linda High School awards night, 8 p.m. June 5, in the school cafeteria, a spokesman said today.

MARIN'S ONLY WOMAN BROKER

Stocks Are Kit Cole's Business

By PAT BALMES

Kit Cole of Ross, the only woman stockbroker working in Marin, is in an industry where there are few women. Less than 5 per cent of New York Stock Exchange brokers are women.

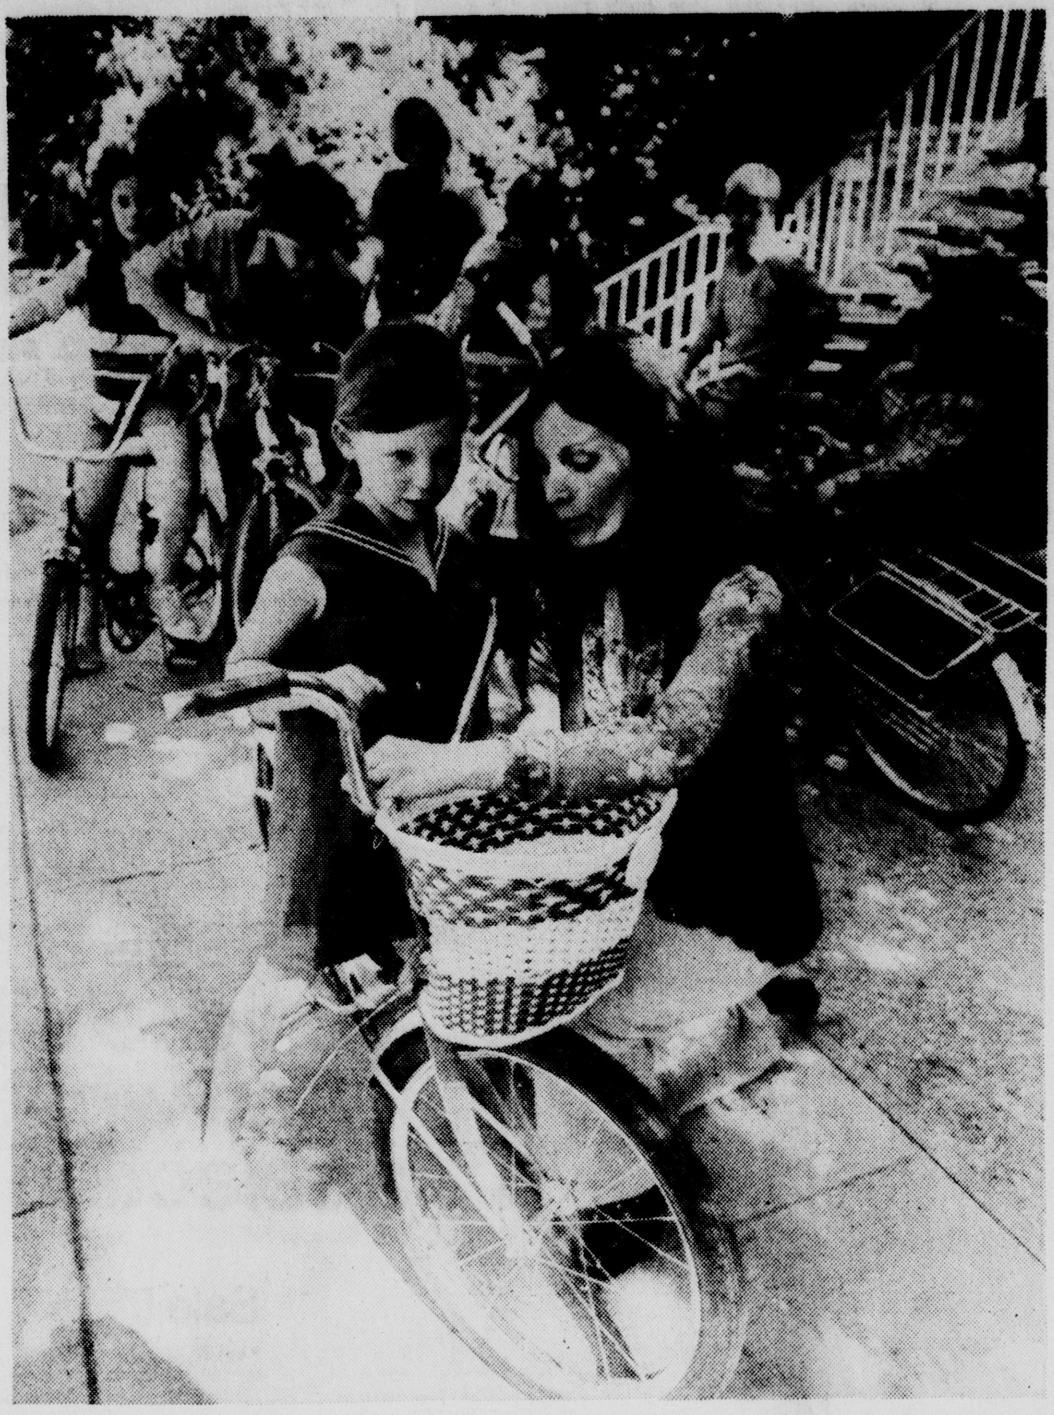
Mrs. Cole knows she doesn't project the image of a typical broker. "I am five feet and less than 100 pounds and I have 10 children," said Mrs. Cole, who works at Dean Witter and Co. in San Rafael.

The 33-year-old Mrs. Jerry Cole said her appearance has its humorous repercussions in Marin's largest brokerage house.

"When I meet new clients, they keep looking beyond my shoulder, thinking I am a secretary and wondering where the broker is," she said.

One man who previously had talked to her only by phone, said on meeting Mrs. Cole, "I don't mind your being a woman, but I did not expect to do business with a midget," she repeated with a laugh.

Being a woman broker is an asset, she believes, because clients do not feel intimidated. They can say, "Listen, I do not know where to start." The only way a broker can help is to find out where a client is in her thinking and show her the alternatives.



STOCK BROKER and mother of 10 children, Kit Cole of Ross ties on a basket for Jamie, 6, and prepares to go cycling with (from left) Kristy, 11; Darren, 14; Jeff, 16; Kim, 12; Brad, 15; and Jeffrey, 9. Her three other children, Jennifer, 12; Alan, 8, and Colin, 11 are not pictured.

TODAY, PEOPLE have to spend all their time being competent in their own fields. A broker has a fulltime job keeping up with changes in the market and money market instruments and updating her financial knowledge, which can become instantly obsolete, she said.

On a typical day, Mrs. Cole leaves her house at 6:30 a.m. to arrive at the office before the Stock Exchange opens in New York. She reads the Wall Street Journal until 7:30 a.m. to find news which will affect market sentiment and to see if interest rates have gone up or down.

She checks earnings reports to see which companies have published their earnings and whether they are more profitable than last quarter. If not, her clients may not want to hold that stock, she said.

She reads the "Heard on the Street" column, which acts as a devil's advocate reporting on some industry or individual stock, she said.

After 8 a.m., Mrs. Cole starts calling clients about news items. Some "traders" want to be appraised daily so they can discuss changes.

"By 8:30 a.m. I start getting calls from other clients, who want to know what is going on. We decide if there is anything we might want to do or if they should come in for a conference," she said.

She hardly puts down the phone all morning, she said, adding that the average broker has about 300 clients.

In the afternoons she reviews clients' portfolios with them, trying to organize their holdings to help solve their problems and accomplish their financial goals.

"MAYBE SOMEBODY has done nothing for two years, or they have received a recent inheritance or have become widowed or divorced and have been too busy to talk about their investments" she explained.

"In a volatile economy it is dangerous to put stocks away. Government regulations change. Consumer sentiment changes. Money markets react frequently to the news. "It seems to me that a woman is more sensitive to people and becomes a little more involved with other people's family situations."

She told of worrying so much about a client who had misplaced a $42,000 bearer's certificate that she dreamed she went to that woman's home to look for it.

To develop and expand her clientele, the broker watches the money market for clients interested in income and notifies them of advantageous changes, she said.

She spends many afternoons and Saturdays in continuing education, attending seminars on subjects such as tax shelters and professional meetings, with groups such as the Society of Financial Women.

Mrs. Cole has taught investment classes at different locations in Marin on a regular basis for the past five years. She uses New York Stock Exchange materials in the afternoon and evening lectures on insurance, stocks and bonds and mutual funds, she said.

She and her husband, who is president of Cole and Associates, which deals in sales and service of office machinery, are both able to work outside their home because their motto is: "Conscript the Children," she said.

THE COUPLE met three years ago at a stockholders' meeting. They each had five children. After they were married, the Cole's had the children each take a turn doing each household task so they would appreciate how much work was involved.

The Coles post a chart each month listing each child's chores. The boys do the pool, yard, scrubbing and washing floors and dinner dishes. The girls cook meals, wash and fold laundry and do general housework. The little children make all the sack lunches every morning and set the table, take out the garbate, vacuum, sweep the stairs and take care of the dog.

"Meal cookers have to plan two weeks ahead so they will know what they will need from the store and what they are going to fix each day. They learn from complaints of the others. Four days of oatmeal without sugar because they didn't plan correctly results in group pressure," the mother said.

A slacker is not allowed to go anywhere the following weekend, she added.

Mrs. Cole has been a girl scout troop leader for 10 years because, she said, "In our society girls do not get a sense of patriotism and morality in their environment."

Asked if they wanted her to stay home, all the children, except the youngest, encouraged her to continue working, she said.

She ventured into the financial industry originally, she said, because her father, Margo Margossian of San Rafael, reared her to be self-reliant.

When Kit was 15 he sent her alone to Egypt to live with relatives, Egyptian citizens, and attend an English school in Cairo. When the Suez Canal crisis erupted, American citizens were evacuated on two-hour notice to Rome, where she was left to her own devices to get back to the United States, she said.

SHE WAS born in East Oakland and was graduated from Golden Gate Academy there and California State University, Long Beach, where she majored in English and mathematics, earning a teaching credential.

"I married while I was in college, moved to Southern California and had five children before I finished college. It took me seven years, but I graduated with honors," she said.

After her divorce in 1967, she found she would not be able to support her children on a teacher's salary, she said.

She had assets to invest but could not find a broker who understood what she was trying to accomplish. She could not find a woman broker. She realized then that a woman stockbroker would have a great advantage and joined a regional brokerage house as an account executive.

In 1970 she became one of the three women in a 90-broker training program, when she was hired by Dean Witter's Southern California Division she said.

After a rigorous six-month course, she passed the tests and was registered with the New York Stock Exchange, the Chicago board of Trade and the National Association of Securities Dealers. She has since been trained for and registered with the California State Insurance Commission and the Chicago Board of Options Exchange, she said.

Her new interest is organizing the Wednesday Morning Dialogue. Membership will be women of responsibility in the community, who find themselves isolated because they work in traditionally male fields. She said.

"We meet at Lyon's restaurant in Greenbrae. It is an organization where we can meet other women in business, art and politics. We exchange dialogue so we can understand one another's worlds. We bring in people from divergent fields to talk to us. Each of us looks to the others as resource people to help us do our jobs more efficiently," the broker said.

THE LAST WORD

Marin Community Roundtable Comes To Life—Goals Are Set

By BARBARA HOSMER

When 30 women gathered on the second floor above an automobile showroom in Corte Madera Monday night, another Marin women's interest organization was a-borning. An hour and a half later found them working their way through the final bylaw after motions and counter motions to select a name.

Then the new Marin Community Roundtable was off to a crackling start. One woman mentioned the need for student loan money for women over 26 returning to school. Another volunteered that her organization had new national funds for that. Still another had handled cases of women being turned down for such bank loans and said at least one bank had changed its nonloan policy. Another woman who works on such loans for a local bank added that some exceptions were made and that the loan policy had been set by her boss because he thought that people should have made up their minds about what to do with their lives by age 26. Such loan policies might be changed, all agreed.

IT WAS a small beginning on the Roundtable's purpose — to create an information exchange among organizations and individuals concerned with women's interests for mutual benefit, a putting together of practical information via the Roundtable to be disseminated back to member groups and individuals in too-often fragmented Marin.

Bylaws call for a minimum of three meetings a year — probably more will be held — a maximum of three delegates, not limited to women, from each member organization; and membership of groups or individuals by nomination by a member. Women at the formational meeting were from American Association of University Women, the Business and Professional Women's Club, National Women's Political Caucus, National Organization for Women, Legal Secretaries, Soroptimist Club, Woman's Way, Negro Business and Professional Women's Club, Single Mothers of Marin, and County Commission on the Status of Women, as well as several individuals.

The Roundtable grew out of the ad hoc committee which had met for the past several months to urge creation of the County Commission on the Status of Women, and was the idea of members of BPW and NOW, which on the state level are members of California Legislative Roundtable. But the Marin Roundtable will not be limited to legislative issues.

Hopefully, the Roundtable will have a refreshing informality to its future meetings, once organizing formalities are over, and it can become a meeting ground of members, information and ideas. One of the intentions is to avoid duplications of effort by member clubs and colliding events by keeping a master calendar.

Hopefully, too, the Roundtable will include a wide spectrum of members, including a large number of minorities. The wider the input, the more valuable the information exchange . . .

The Roundtable will meet again June 27, when its three officers will be elected and nominal dues collected.

LAST WEEK when a teenager asked Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm during her Marin visit how to get her parents to understand her as an individual, Mrs. Chisholm responded that she has the same problem. Her own mother, she said, always wanted the Congresswoman to be a teacher like her parents. "She still says to me, 'Why do you waste yourself with politics? — You could be a professor or dean of a college by now'," Mrs. Chisholm said. And when Shirley Chisholm was campaigning for the 1972 Presidential nomination, her mother wondered why her daughter "didn't stay home instead." "She doesn't think what I'm doing is important," the first black woman elected to Congress related, because it doesn't meet her aspirations for her daughter.

MA BELL'S domain, a major battleground of sex discrimination actions for some five years coast-to-coast, angered a number of Marin feminists and enough telephone employees a couple of weeks ago to get immediate action. It seems that all Bay Area Pacific Telephone employees are supposed to make a daily call to a San Francisco number to hear the company's recorded safety message of the day.

Women employees reacted with anger and shock one morning to hear a San Rafael telephone repairman's message to remember that a repair truck is "like a mistress" and to treat "her" with care and "regularly check her oil and lubrication and she will serve you faithfully," etc.

By 11 a.m. the word had gotten out, and so many employees and other feminists had complained that the offending message was taken off and the line disconnected until a nonbelittling message could be substituted. Since then it's been all "sunburn can cause skin cancer and that horror of horrors-wrinkles!" and "beware of poison oak" when camping, hunting or fishing.

THE LAST WORD

Marin Community Roundtable Comes To Life—Goals Are Set

By BARBARA HOSMER

When 30 women gathered on the second floor above an automobile showroom in Corte Madera Monday night, another Marin women's interest organization was a-borning. An hour and a half later found them working their way through the final bylaw after motions and counter motions to select a name.

Then the new Marin Community Roundtable was off to a crackling start. One woman mentioned the need for student loan money for women over 26 returning to school. Another volunteered that her organization had new national funds for that. Still another had handled cases of women being turned down for such bank loans and said at least one bank had changed its nonloan policy. Another woman who works on such loans for a local bank added that some exceptions were made and that the loan policy had been set by her boss because he thought that people should have made up their minds about what to do with their lives by age 26. Such loan policies might be changed, all agreed.

IT WAS a small beginning on the Roundtable's purpose — to create an information exchange among organizations and individuals concerned with women's interests for mutual benefit, a putting together of practical information via the Roundtable to be disseminated back to member groups and individuals in too-often fragmented Marin.

Bylaws call for a minimum of three meetings a year — probably more will be held — a maximum of three delegates, not limited to women, from each member organization; and membership of groups or individuals by nomination by a member. Women at the formational meeting were from American Association of University Women, the Business and Professional Women's Club, National Women's Political Caucus, National Organization for Women, Legal Secretaries, Soroptimist Club, Woman's Way, Negro Business and Professional Women's Club, Single Mothers of Marin, and County Commission on the Status of Women, as well as several individuals.

The Roundtable grew out of the ad hoc committee which had met for the past several months to urge creation of the County Commission on the Status of Women, and was the idea of members of BPW and NOW, which on the state level are members of California Legislative Roundtable. But the Marin Roundtable will not be limited to legislative issues.

Hopefully, the Roundtable will have a refreshing informality to its future meetings, once organizing formalities are over, and it can become a meeting ground of members, information and ideas. One of the intentions is to avoid duplications of effort by member clubs and colliding events by keeping a master calendar.

Hopefully, too, the Roundtable will include a wide spectrum of members, including a large number of minorities. The wider the input, the more valuable the information exchange . . .

The Roundtable will meet again June 27, when its three officers will be elected and nominal dues collected.

LAST WEEK when a teenager asked Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm during her Marin visit how to get her parents to understand her as an individual, Mrs. Chisholm responded that she has the same problem. Her own mother, she said, always wanted the Congresswoman to be a teacher like her parents. "She still says to me, 'Why do you waste yourself with politics? — You could be a professor or dean of a college by now'," Mrs. Chisholm said. And when Shirley Chisholm was campaigning for the 1972 Presidential nomination, her mother wondered why her daughter "didn't stay home instead." "She doesn't think what I'm doing is important," the first black woman elected to Congress related, because it doesn't meet her aspirations for her daughter.

MA BELL'S domain, a major battleground of sex discrimination actions for some five years coast-to-coast, angered a number of Marin feminists and enough telephone employees a couple of weeks ago to get immediate action. It seems that all Bay Area Pacific Telephone employees are supposed to make a daily call to a San Francisco number to hear the company's recorded safety message of the day.

Women employees reacted with anger and shock one morning to hear a San Rafael telephone repairman's message to remember that a repair truck is "like a mistress" and to treat "her" with care and "regularly check her oil and lubrication and she will serve you faithfully," etc.

By 11 a.m. the word had gotten out, and so many employees and other feminists had complained that the offending message was taken off and the line disconnected until a nonbelittling message could be substituted. Since then it's been all "sunburn can cause skin cancer and that horror of horrors-wrinkles!" and "beware of poison oak" when camping, hunting or fishing.

GENERATION RAP

Her Aunt's Habit Of Hacking About To Drive Her Bananas

RAP:

Last winter my mother, aunt and I moved into a one-family house to save on expenses.

My aunt has this terrible habit of clearing her throat or "hacking," as we call it, for several hours in the morning and evening. The noise shakes the house almost — it's like when a man clears his throat, then spits, only she adds an extra hack afterwards. She wakes me with it, and on weekends when you want to sleep, it's misery.

My mother sits with her fingers in her ears, sighs, and sometimes shakes her fists. I'm getting the brunt at both ends.

My aunt claims she must hack to breathe, but she doesn't do it when other people are around or when she's working or busy. I asked her if she stopped breathing at those times.

She had an operation for her sinus problem some years ago but it evidently didn't help, and she refuses to get more treatment.

I've tried being nice but I'm on the verge of violence. What can we do? — HACKED TO PIECES

DEAR HACKED:

The old tape recorder routine might work here. If your aunt could hear herself as others hear her she may understand why you can't hack those hacks.

When people live close, an annoying habit can drive others up the wall in two ways: repetition is bad enough, but ancitipation is even worse. We'll bet you wake up before the hacks start, then lie there with gritted teeth, waiting.

If your aunt can't see this, then perhaps a suggestion that you split up your housing arrangement may send her to the doctor again. — HELEN AND SUE

DEAR RAP:

This is in answer to the young person who was wishing for the good old depression days so she could make ends meet. Here are the facts:

A grocery clerk earned around $8 a week, working 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. with no coffee breaks, just an hour for lunch. No overtime pay for Saturday nights either.

Yes, those were the days! Potatoes were 15 pounds for 25 cents; you could get 24 pounds of flour for a dollar (and make underwear from the sacks). Hamburger cost 13 cents a pound, beans 5 cents and peanut butter 10 cents a pound. Peaches were 20 cents a bushel if you picked them yourself.

We made ends meet by stretching them around our empty middles. Most of us weren't lucky enough to have even $8 jobs! — FROM TERRE HAUTE, IND.

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

"M.C." who downs nonvirgins as being "prostitutes" would have a hard time getting into Heaven, even though she's so super-pure.

Sure, I'm in favor of waiting for sex until I'm married, and I know everyone isn't doing it (as M.C. seems to think), but I prefer the way my mother talks to me about it.

Mom never preaches or citicizes. She has long talks with me instead. She says sex before marriage is like opening all your Christmas presents before Christmas. She has also taught me that humans are different from animals in that they have a soul and conscience, and sex with just anyone can make a young person hate herself, even maybe subconsciously.

Love your column. — A.L.

A Program On Divorce Is Scheduled

The Family Service Agency of Marin will offer a program for members of families undergoing the process of divorce or separation.

The program, designed to include all family members, will begin June 4 and continue for five weekly sessions at the agency office, 1005 A Street, San Rafael.

Parents and children will be divided into separate groups, according to Ann Jones of the agency, and young persons will work with others in their age group, who are also experiencing family divorces or separations. Th focus will be on helping them adjust to changes occurring in the family as a consequence of the separation or divorce, Miss Jones said.

The immediate aim is to help children and adolescents deal with the immediate crises in the family, and the longer range goal is to prevent future problems around unresolved or unexpressed feelings that they may have about their parents separation, she said.

The concurrent group for parents will provide a forum for parents to discuss ways of helping their children cope with the shift that is occurring in the family, and also to provide a place for them to share their own feelings about the changes they are experiencing.

Registration can be made with Miss Jones at the agency.

Tight Garments Produce Pocket Gaps

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

Whenever I make pants or a skirt with pockets, I have the same problem. When they are completed and pressed they look nice and flat; when I wear the garment, the pockets stand away. In other words, they gap open and don't look nice. Any suggestions? — MARIAN L.

DEAR MARIAN,

It sounds like the problem can be solved very easily by adding a little extra width to the pants or skirt. When pockets gap open, it usually means that your garment is too tight at the pocket area.

DEAR EUNICE,

My son is being married in August, and I am wondering if it would be proper to wear a gown edged at the hem with ostrich feathers. — MRS. M. M.

DEAR MRS. M. M.,

I would say it might depend on several facts. You must be your own judge. First, they are very glamorous and you must have the figure to carry it off. Second, they are very formal. Decide whether the wedding is going to be that formal, since you don't want to outshine the bride.

Discuss it with the bride's mother and be sure it will fit in with the type of gown she is wearing. Also, check your height. If you are short, they will probably make you look shorter. If all of these points check out well, wear them with the flair they demand.

DEAR EUNICE,

I must admit that I don't do as much sewing as I formerly did, but I was intrigued by your suggestion of making a "needle pad" so that all sizes and types of machine needles could be clearly marked and kept where they could be readily found.

When I did most of my sewing, I used the same needle for everything. Why are so many needles necessary today? — MRS. R. T.

DEAR MRS. R. T.,

Perhaps your sewing was done primarily on one weight and type of fabric. It is always advisable to change the size of needles for the weight and type of fabric you are working with.

Today, we have a whole new world of fabrics that are used by everyone, from chiffons to leathers to knits. You must use a fine needle (size 9 or 11) for chiffons and fine silks. There is a special needle designed for leather. Last, and most importnat, you have the ball point needles for knits. They too, come in sizes.

It is most important that you use ball point needles for knits, never for woven fabrics, just as it is important that you use regular straight needles for woven fabrics and never for knits.

So you see, you will be changing needles frequently, and since the numbers and types of needles are almost impossible to distinguish without a magnifying glass, just keep them pinned onto your "needle pad," clearly marked.

DEAR EUNICE,

I love to sew, but the "fitting" of my semi-finished garment is enough to discourage me. I adjust my patterns according to my measurements before they are cut, but still there is always a "nip or a tuck" needed to make my garments fit perfectly. Just to have the hem marked evenly is a challenge. Any suggestions? — MARY T. R.

DEAR MARY,

Yes, I think I do have a solution for your problem. With so many women sewing, surely you can find a few friends or acquaintances who share your hobby. Start a little social sewing club. Discuss and help each other with your sewing problems and help each other with fittings. It's always more fun to work in a group, you can get a good laugh now and then from the mistakes we all make. When you sew, a good sense of humor is of prime importance.

Answers to many sewing problems are found in the booklet, "Twenty Questions." For your copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Couple Will Mark Golden Anniversary

A celebration tomorrow at Peacock Gap Country Club will be given to mark the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Caldwell of Greenbrae.

The couple will celebrate the anniversary with some 55 friends at cocktails and dinner at the club in San Rafael.

"Some are people we have known all our lives," Caldwell said of the guests.

Now retired, he and his wife enjoy cruising the bay and delta rivers aboard their 36 foot Chris Craft power boat and are well known in Marin boating circles. They are active in San Rafael Yacht Club and Caldwell is a charter member of the Grindstone Joe association and enjoys cruising to Grindstone Joe's in the delta.

The couple met in San Francisco, where Mrs. Caldwell was born and reared. Caldwell was born in Oklahoma and "raised in Texas", coming to California with his family as a youngster.

May 20, 1974, they decided to be married in Monterey, "but they didn't do that there then," Caldwell said with a laugh, so the couple was married in Salinas.

The Caldwells lived in San Francisco, and he worked as a shipping clerk with Henry Candy Co. Then he shifted to Bank Auto Works and Garage there and continued for 34 years, becoming a partner in the firm.

The Caldwells moved to Greenbrae in 1948 and have been living in the same house since. Caldwell retired in 1961. His wife is the former president of the Greenbrae Guild of Sunny Hills and Caldwell is a former golfer. They have no children.

A Program On Divorce Is Scheduled

The Family Service Agency of Marin will offer a program for members of families undergoing the process of divorce or separation.

The program, designed to include all family members, will begin June 4 and continue for five weekly sessions at the agency office, 1005 A Street, San Rafael.

Parents and children will be divided into separate groups, according to Ann Jones of the agency, and young persons will work with others in their age group, who are also experiencing family divorces or separations. Th focus will be on helping them adjust to changes occurring in the family as a consequence of the separation or divorce, Miss Jones said.

The immediate aim is to help children and adolescents deal with the immediate crises in the family, and the longer range goal is to prevent future problems around unresolved or unexpressed feelings that they may have about their parents separation, she said.

The concurrent group for parents will provide a forum for parents to discuss ways of helping their children cope with the shift that is occurring in the family, and also to provide a place for them to share their own feelings about the changes they are experiencing.

Registration can be made with Miss Jones at the agency.

Danny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Williams of Santa Rosa and the brother of Randy, Rick and Terry Williams, also of Santa Rosa. He is a graduate of Analy High School in Santa Rosa and U.C. at Davis.

Tight Garments Produce Pocket Gaps

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

Whenever I make pants or a skirt with pockets, I have the same problem. When they are completed and pressed they look nice and flat; when I wear the garment, the pockets stand away. In other words, they gap open and don't look nice. Any suggestions? — MARIAN L.

DEAR MARIAN,

It sounds like the problem can be solved very easily by adding a little extra width to the pants or skirt. When pockets gap open, it usually means that your garment is too tight at the pocket area.

DEAR EUNICE,

My son is being married in August, and I am wondering if it would be proper to wear a gown edged at the hem with ostrich feathers. — MRS. M. M.

DEAR MRS. M. M.,

I would say it might depend on several facts. You must be your own judge. First, they are very glamorous and you must have the figure to carry it off. Second, they are very formal. Decide whether the wedding is going to be that formal, since you don't want to outshine the bride.

Discuss it with the bride's mother and be sure it will fit in with the type of gown she is wearing. Also, check your height. If you are short, they will probably make you look shorter. If all of these points check out well, wear them with the flair they demand.

DEAR EUNICE,

I must admit that I don't do as much sewing as I formerly did, but I was intrigued by your suggestion of making a "needle pad" so that all sizes and types of machine needles could be clearly marked and kept where they could be readily found.

When I did most of my sewing, I used the same needle for everything. Why are so many needles necessary today? — MRS. R. T.

DEAR MRS. R. T.,

Perhaps your sewing was done primarily on one weight and type of fabric. It is always advisable to change the size of needles for the weight and type of fabric you are working with.

Today, we have a whole new world of fabrics that are used by everyone, from chiffons to leathers to knits. You must use a fine needle (size 9 or 11) for chiffons and fine silks. There is a special needle designed for leather. Last, and most importnat, you have the ball point needles for knits. They too, come in sizes.

It is most important that you use ball point needles for knits, never for woven fabrics, just as it is important that you use regular straight needles for woven fabrics and never for knits.

So you see, you will be changing needles frequently, and since the numbers and types of needles are almost impossible to distinguish without a magnifying glass, just keep them pinned onto your "needle pad," clearly marked.

DEAR EUNICE,

I love to sew, but the "fitting" of my semi-finished garment is enough to discourage me. I adjust my patterns according to my measurements before they are cut, but still there is always a "nip or a tuck" needed to make my garments fit perfectly. Just to have the hem marked evenly is a challenge. Any suggestions? — MARY T. R.

DEAR MARY,

Yes, I think I do have a solution for your problem. With so many women sewing, surely you can find a few friends or acquaintances who share your hobby. Start a little social sewing club. Discuss and help each other with your sewing problems and help each other with fittings. It's always more fun to work in a group, you can get a good laugh now and then from the mistakes we all make. When you sew, a good sense of humor is of prime importance.

Answers to many sewing problems are found in the booklet, "Twenty Questions." For your copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Couple Will Mark Golden Anniversary

A celebration tomorrow at Peacock Gap Country Club will be given to mark the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Caldwell of Greenbrae.

The couple will celebrate the anniversary with some 55 friends at cocktails and dinner at the club in San Rafael.

"Some are people we have known all our lives," Caldwell said of the guests.

Now retired, he and his wife enjoy cruising the bay and delta rivers aboard their 36 foot Chris Craft power boat and are well known in Marin boating circles. They are active in San Rafael Yacht Club and Caldwell is a charter member of the Grindstone Joe association and enjoys cruising to Grindstone Joe's in the delta.

The couple met in San Francisco, where Mrs. Caldwell was born and reared. Caldwell was born in Oklahoma and "raised in Texas", coming to California with his family as a youngster.

May 20, 1974, they decided to be married in Monterey, "but they didn't do that there then," Caldwell said with a laugh, so the couple was married in Salinas.

The Caldwells lived in San Francisco, and he worked as a shipping clerk with Henry Candy Co. Then he shifted to Bank Auto Works and Garage there and continued for 34 years, becoming a partner in the firm.

The Caldwells moved to Greenbrae in 1948 and have been living in the same house since. Caldwell retired in 1961. His wife is the former president of the Greenbrae Guild of Sunny Hills and Caldwell is a former golfer. They have no children.

Fox Not The Man To Manage Giants

Billy Martin, manager of the Texas Rangers, said recently that the key to being a successful major league manager "is keeping the five players who hate your guts away from the five players who haven't made up their minds."

This statement, though possibly spoken in jest, has quite a bit of truth in it. There are any number of persons capable of making the proper strategic moves at the correct time. An equal number could be called upon to teach the fundamentals of the game without making so much as a mistake. Both abilities are necessary for a man to be able to manage a baseball team.

THE KEY INGREDIENT to successful managing is an intangible. There are many ways of explaining it. For the sake of this discourse lets call it "leadership."

Last year a member of the San Francisco Giants told me that the quietest he had ever heard the Giants locker room was the night that Horace Stoneham announced that Charley Fox had been rehired to manage the Giants for two more years. The players were stunned, as was most anyone else familiar with the situation.

A key leadership quality is the ability to get along with people. I've seen Charley Fox command the attention and even the admiration of large groups of men at banquets and other social functions. His Irish tenor has enriched many a gathering. If a baseball team that would be competitive in the National League could be chosen from the membership of the Olympic Club then Fox would be the man to manage it. The possibiliy of this happening, however, is slim.

THE GIANTS ARE a group of 25 young men. They are for the most part very talented. They, like all teams today, have a large number of ex-college men on the squad. As recently as 10 years ago this would have been an exception. Today's major league player asks many more questions than his earlier counterpart. He is not as hesitant to voice his disapproval if he thinks something is wrong.

A successful manager is able to handle a question from a player without acting as though his very existence is being questioned. He is also able to foresee a potential problem and handle it quietly before it becomes a page one scandal. Total happiness on behalf of all 25 team members is an impossible order to expect. Relative togetherness is not.

Charley Fox's handling of the Giants personnel this year has been bewildering. Line up changes, batting order changes and pitching rotation changes have been disoriented.

YOUNG JOHN D'ACQUISTO must be the most confused pitcher in the National League. Fox took him out of the starting rotation and then a day later turned around and gave him a starting call. Each recent trip that D'Acquisto has made to the mound has been accompanied by great uncertainty. John must see Fox as a travel agent selling one-way tickets to Phoenix.

The catching situtation seems to be a variation of the old shell game. The player whose name is on the pea gets to start the game. The pressure on Dave Rader, Ken Rudolph and John Boccabella to perform is certainly immediate.

Charley Fox will be a member of the Giant family as long as Horace Stoneham owns the team. He will be a valued public relations man just as soon as he is relieved of his managerial duties.

A replacement, you ask? How about Gene Mauch?

San Rafael Earns North Coast Berth

A day later and many miles away from where it was supposed to, the Marin County Athletic League golf season came to a triumphant end for San Rafael High School yesterday.

The Bulldogs earned a berth in next Wednesday's North Coast Section tournament by outscoring the other two teams who tied for the MCAL championship in yesterday's Rancho Cotate Invitational at Rohnert Park Municipal course.

San Rafael shot a five-man, 18-hole score of 418 to finish sixth in the tourney, but defeated Redwood by two strokes and Novato by seven. The three teams concluded the MCAL season Thursday with 11-3 records.

Ukiah High won the 24-school tournament with 405 and produced the medalist, Bo Strong, who defeated Rancho Cotate's Todd Peterson on the first playoff hole after both shot 77, five over par.

San Rafael freshman Bill Corbett battled the wind for a 78, but lost a playoff for the third-place trophy.

In addition to the championship team, three individual golfers from each league are invited to the NCS, a 36-hole, medal-play event scheduled for Silverado Country Club near Napa. The MCAL coaches chose Tom Poksay of San Marin, Mark Ohrenschall of Redwood and Rick Anderson of Novato.

The North Bay and Sonoma County leagues used yesterday's scores to pick their three. Rancho's Peterson and Don Springer (80) and El Molino's John Wehde (78) qualified from the SCL, while Strong, third-place Bob Morowitz from Montgomery of San Rosa (78) and Vallejo's Jim Ancheta (80) made it from the NBL. FORWARD FLIP REVOLUTION

The long jump will never be the same, and Washington State's John Delamere showed why. He demonstrated his new technique yesterday in the Pacific-8 track and field championships at Los Angeles. Delamere has been doing the forward flip for three weeks and has jumps exceeding 28 feet. His previous best with the conventional method was 25-feet-8½. Olympic champion Randy Williams won the event with a leap of 25-6¾. Somersaulting Delamere also did 25-6¾, but Williams won on the basis of his second effort.

Weiskopf Trails In Colonial But Still Has Confidence

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — It was at the Colonial National Tournament last year that Tom Weiskopf began one of the more stunning stretches of golf ever played and he is getting that feeling again.

"I'm right back in this golf tournament," Weiskopf said yesterday after he moved to within two shots of leader Chuck Courtney. "I'm looking forward to the next two days very much."

THE LEADER — Colonial National golf tournament leader Chuck Courtney yesterday blasted from a trap on the 17th hole in Fort Worth, Tex. He parred the hole and finished the second round with a 4-under-par 66 for a 136 total.

(AP Wirephoto)

Weiskopf was the only one of golf's more famous names to make a charge at the lead yesterday during the second round of the $250,000 Colonial - the first designated tournament in Professional Golfers Association history.

While Lee Trevino, Jack Nicklaus and Billy Casper made charges and fell back, Weiskopf fired a two-under 68 that put him at two-under 138 for two rounds and gave him a good position going into the final 36 holes.

Courtney, a 10-year tour traveler who has not won in five years, moved to the top with a four-under 66 which put him at 136 —four under for two days on the tree and waterlined 7,142-yard, par-70 Colonial Country Coub course —invaded for the second straight day by gusty winds.

One stroke back of Inman and one stroke ahead of Weiskopf were first-round leader Hale Irwin, who had a 72 following his first-round 65, and Wintu Indian Rod Curl, who had the day's second lowest round —a 67.

They were at three-under 137 for two days. Back of Weiskopf came Julius Boros and Dan Sikes at 139 — making only six players below par at the halfway mark.

Jack Nicklaus was at even par after being two under at one point. His downfall was a wedge on the 18th hole that sailed over the green into a lake.

Lee Trevino also made a charge at the lead before faltering to a 141. Billy Casper jumped to within two shots of the lead after nine holes, but then played the six holes in five over par to shoot a 76.

Gary Player improved with a 68 to be at 142, Arnold Palmer missed the cut by a shot, shooting a 73 for a 147, and leading money winner Johnny Miller withdrew after his first round 78.

College of Marin swimming coach Bob Justice has said his star diver John Summerfield was All-American timber. Yesterday, Summerfield was named to the All-American Junior College swimming team as a three-meter diver. He is the school's first diver to win such recognition.

"I'm not surprised," Justice said. "I said before he had the potential. It shows what he could do."

Summerfield, who became Marin's first state J.C. diving champion in three meters May 4 at Los Angeles, said "I certainly am happy about it."

Fosse Detonates Explosion By A's

Oakland's Production Is Biggest

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ray Fosse tripled home three runs during a four-run first inning and hit a sacrifice fly during a six-run second inning Friday night, leading the Oakland A's to a 10-4 rout of the Chicago White Sox despite a pair of homers by Dick Allen.

The A's run production was their biggest of the season, and the victory put Oakland only three percentage points behind the White Sox in the American League West.

Jim Kaat, who took his third loss of the year against four wins, pitched to just one man in the second inning and his relief, Stan Perzanowski, gave up three hits and a walk before Ken Tatum came in to retire the side.

A double by Bert Campaneris, a walk to Joe Rudi and a hit batsman preceded Fosse's triple. In chasing Fosse's hit, Chicago's Buddy Bradford suffered a broken collarbone after crashing into the wall and was carried off the field on a stretcher. Angel Mangual's single scored Fosse.

Gaylen Pitts led off the second inning with a single against Kaat and Perzanowski then gave up singles to Bill North, Campaneris and Rudi for two more runs. After Gene Tenace walked to fill the bases, Tatum replaced Perzanowski. John Summers grounded to third baseman Bill Melton who fumbled the ball and then threw wildly to first, allowing two more runs to score. Another run scored on a wild pitch.

Allen crashed his sixth homer of the year in the first inning and hit a two-run shot in the eighth for Chicago's only offense against Dave Hamilton, . who received credit for his second win of the year against no losses.

Padre Boss Sympathetic In Victory Over Giants

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

SAN FRANCISCO —Manager John McNamara of the San Diego Padres has a little sympathy for the San Francisco Giants but not much.

"It was the kind of game that we usually lose," he said after the Padres scored five runs in the first inning and went on to beat the Giants 7-3 last night.

"We usually are the team that uses all the pitchers," McNamara said. The Padres worked over six San Francisco Pitchers but won the game with one swing of the bat by Nate Colbert.

Colbert crashed a grand slam off Giants starter Ron Bryant in the first inning. Bryant, a 24-game winner for the Giants last season, failed to retire any of six batters he faced before leaving the game.

The grand slam was the fifth of Colbert's career but his first since the 1972 season.

"I'm a first ball hitter and the pitch was a high strike," he said. The homer followed an error a walk and a single by Dave Winfield that loaded the bases.

Bryant gave up another walk and a hit before Charlie Williams took over.

The victory snapped a nine-game losing streak for the Padres.

Bobby Bonds had four of the Giants 11 hits and drove in two runs. Bonds said a friend noticed a flaw in his swing while watching a game on tv earlier this week.

Fox Not The Man To Manage Giants

Billy Martin, manager of the Texas Rangers, said recently that the key to being a successful major league manager "is keeping the five players who hate your guts away from the five players who haven't made up their minds."

This statement, though possibly spoken in jest, has quite a bit of truth in it. There are any number of persons capable of making the proper strategic moves at the correct time. An equal number could be called upon to teach the fundamentals of the game without making so much as a mistake. Both abilities are necessary for a man to be able to manage a baseball team.

THE KEY INGREDIENT to successful managing is an intangible. There are many ways of explaining it. For the sake of this discourse lets call it "leadership."

Last year a member of the San Francisco Giants told me that the quietest he had ever heard the Giants locker room was the night that Horace Stoneham announced that Charley Fox had been rehired to manage the Giants for two more years. The players were stunned, as was most anyone else familiar with the situation.

A key leadership quality is the ability to get along with people. I've seen Charley Fox command the attention and even the admiration of large groups of men at banquets and other social functions. His Irish tenor has enriched many a gathering. If a baseball team that would be competitive in the National League could be chosen from the membership of the Olympic Club then Fox would be the man to manage it. The possibiliy of this happening, however, is slim.

THE GIANTS ARE a group of 25 young men. They are for the most part very talented. They, like all teams today, have a large number of ex-college men on the squad. As recently as 10 years ago this would have been an exception. Today's major league player asks many more questions than his earlier counterpart. He is not as hesitant to voice his disapproval if he thinks something is wrong.

A successful manager is able to handle a question from a player without acting as though his very existence is being questioned. He is also able to foresee a potential problem and handle it quietly before it becomes a page one scandal. Total happiness on behalf of all 25 team members is an impossible order to expect. Relative togetherness is not.

Charley Fox's handling of the Giants personnel this year has been bewildering. Line up changes, batting order changes and pitching rotation changes have been disoriented.

YOUNG JOHN D'ACQUISTO must be the most confused pitcher in the National League. Fox took him out of the starting rotation and then a day later turned around and gave him a starting call. Each recent trip that D'Acquisto has made to the mound has been accompanied by great uncertainty. John must see Fox as a travel agent selling one-way tickets to Phoenix.

The catching situtation seems to be a variation of the old shell game. The player whose name is on the pea gets to start the game. The pressure on Dave Rader, Ken Rudolph and John Boccabella to perform is certainly immediate.

Charley Fox will be a member of the Giant family as long as Horace Stoneham owns the team. He will be a valued public relations man just as soon as he is relieved of his managerial duties.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Davis Shows Why He's Top Designated Hitter

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Tommy Davis is to designated hitters what Frank Sinatra is to song stylists—pure perfection.

The 35-year-old Davis, a two-time National League batting champion who boasts a lifetime batting average of .296, can't run that well anymore and was never the best of fielders even in his prime. But when it comes to swinging the bat there are few around who can match the Baltimore Orioles' slugger.

Davis, beginning his second year as the Orioles' DH, belted a pair of two-run homers last night and led Baltimore to a 6-0 rain-shortened victory over the Boston Red Sox. Davis hit his first homer over the 380- foot mark in left-center in the third inning following a triple by Mark Belanger and delivered his second two innings later with Paul Blair on base.

Davis' two blasts made things easy for southpaw Mike Cuellar to register his third straight win. Cuellar scattered six singles in the six innings he worked before a recurring thundershower forced the umpires to call the game in the top of the seventh.

In other American League games, New York edged Milwaukee 3-2, Minnesota nipped California 2-1, Detroit topped Cleveland 4-3, Oakland routed Chicago 10-4 and Kansas City beat Texas 6-4.

New York blanked Montreal 5-0, Cincinnati downed Houston 4-2, St. Louis nipped Chicago 9-8, San Diego topped San Francisco 7-3 and Atlanta edged Los Angeles 5-3 in 11 innings. Philadelphia at Pittsburgh was postponed by rain.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2

George Medich and Sparky Lyle combined on a six-hitter in helping the Yankees snap a five-game losing streak. Medich worked 8 1-3 innings to gain his sixth win in eight decisions while Lyle notched his sixth save.

Twins 2, Angels 1

Larry Hisle's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave the Twins a victory over the Angels.

Tigers 4, Indians 3

Gary Sutherland's double triggered a three-run sixth inning that carried the Tigers past the Indians.

Royals 6, Rangers 4

George Brett drove in three runs for the Royals, who won their 10th game in their last 13 outings.

40 Marin Teams In Keg Tourney

The bowling invasion on Oxnard continues this weekend.

More than 14,000 bowlers are entered in the 18-week California State Men's Bowling Tournament. The tourney, which runs through Aug. 25, includes some 40, five-man Marin County teams.

"They will be going down by plane and by car," said Walt Smith, a Marin competitor. However, Smith's aggregation will take a different route. He heads a group of 21 Marin teams venturing by bus. They chartered a Napa Transit Company vehicle which left yesterday.

Marinites will be among those bowling today at 4 p.m. in the Team event at Wagon Wheel Bowl. Singles and Doubles will be held tomorrow at 9 and 11 a.m. in Tournament Bowl.

Last year, Marin sent 45 teams to Alameda for the tourney sponsored by the California Men's Bowling Association.

SAN RAFAEL'S Nancy McPherson, 17, last weekend won the Graduating Girl Scratch Division in the All American Youth Bowling Association Championships at Walnut Creek. Hertwo-game score was 404.

She will join three others for the national regionals July 5-7 in Denver. If Nancy wins in Denver, she would advance to the televised National Finals in Irving, Tex. July 19-21.

Sharon In Crucial Cup Net Match

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — It was all up to Sharon Walsh today.

The San Rafael tennis player was to take the court this afternoon for the deciding doubles match in the semi-final round of the Federation Cup tournament, the women's equivalent of the Davis Cup.

She and Julie Heldman were to confront the West German team in doubles after the two nations split their singles matches. Helga Masthoff defeated Heldman, 6-2, 6-2, but Jeanne Evert evened things with a 6-4, 6-2 win over Helga Hoesl.

In the other semi-final, Australia held a 1-0 lead over Great Britain following Evonne Goolagong's 6-4, 6-2 victory over Virginia Wade.

Australia and Britain reached the semis with victories yesterday. Australia swept Italy, 3-0, while Britain edged South Africa, 2-1. The U.S. and Germany qualified with victories Thursday.

OAKLAND — The Oakland A's are no longer the only major league team without a television outlet.

It was announced last night that KPIX Channel 5, a CBS affiliate, will carry 20 live broadcasts of A's road games this season being June 7 at Milwaukee. The remainder of the schedule and game announcers will be determined early next week, a KPIX spokesman said.

Rentzel Is Happy Back With Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — For the first time in 10 months, Lance Rentzel knew today he would be able to resume his football career.

Rentzel, 30, an eight-year veteran and a former all-pro wide receiver, has been reinstated by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"I'm just as happy as I can be," Rentzel said.

Rozelle made the announcement in New York yesterday after notifying Rentzel in person at his Beverly Hills, Calif. apartment the previous night.

Rentzel was suspended last July 24 following his guilty plea to a marijuana possession charge.

A court fined him and gave him a suspended jail sentence, but Rozelle suspended him indefinitely from playing in the NFL for violating probation.

Rentzel had been on probation for his 1971 arrest and conviction on an indecent exposure charge in Dallas while he was with the Cowboys. He pleaded guilty to a similar charge in Minnesota in 1966.

"I went down to Long Beach and got my playbook," said a jubilant Rentzel who announced he was turning down three "very good offers" from World Football League clubs to rejoin the Los Angeles Rams.

The Rams' training camp is located in Long Beach.

"I'm anxious to rejoin the Rams," he said. "They are my football team. I think the Rams are going to the Super Bowl and I want to be a part of that."

No-Hitter For Minor League Pitcher Todd

VICTORIA, Tex. (UPI) — Larry Todd of the Victoria Toros tossed a no-hitter last night in the Texas League, stopping Arkansas 3-0.

The right-hander walked the first two Arkansas batters in the first inning but struck out the next two and another runner was erased on an attempted steal.

The triumph was Todd's first of the season after three straight losses.

Ron Diggle hit his eighth homer of the year—one in each of the last five games—to give Todd the only run he needed in the second inning.

Improved Glovework Helps Tars

Fielding, the apparently simple act of picking the baseball up off the ground and doing the right thing with it, was the major reason for College of Marin's improvement this year.

The Tars finished second in the Northern Division of the Camino Norte Conference with an 11-9 record and were 17-11 overall, better than last year's 9-12 and 13-16.

"It appears that our defense was the biggest factor in our success," said coach Vic Petreshene, and statistics back him up.

Although the Tars had the same batting average as last year, .256, and their extra-base hits declined from 58 to 38, they shut off the opposition by cutting their errors in half and quadrupling their double plays.

They made 35 bobbles in 1974 compared to 72 the year before, and 16 double plays to four.

Marin's leading hitter in conference play was outfielder John Billings, at .370, (27 for 72), fourth in the league. Second-baseman Steve Sherry, who did not make an error in conference play, hit .286 and tied outfielder Pete Arbios for the runs-batted-in lead with 16. Billings and Greg Mazeres had 11. Mazeres walked 26 times in league play, a team record.

Arbios hit three home runs. Billings had the only other homer.

Don Bianchini was the leading pitcher with a 4-3 record and 3.00 earned run average. He also led in innings pitched (75) and strikeouts (77).

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Davis Shows Why He's Top Designated Hitter

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Tommy Davis is to designated hitters what Frank Sinatra is to song stylists—pure perfection.

The 35-year-old Davis, a two-time National League batting champion who boasts a lifetime batting average of .296, can't run that well anymore and was never the best of fielders even in his prime. But when it comes to swinging the bat there are few around who can match the Baltimore Orioles' slugger.

Davis, beginning his second year as the Orioles' DH, belted a pair of two-run homers last night and led Baltimore to a 6-0 rain-shortened victory over the Boston Red Sox. Davis hit his first homer over the 380- foot mark in left-center in the third inning following a triple by Mark Belanger and delivered his second two innings later with Paul Blair on base.

Davis' two blasts made things easy for southpaw Mike Cuellar to register his third straight win. Cuellar scattered six singles in the six innings he worked before a recurring thundershower forced the umpires to call the game in the top of the seventh.

In other American League games, New York edged Milwaukee 3-2, Minnesota nipped California 2-1, Detroit topped Cleveland 4-3, Oakland routed Chicago 10-4 and Kansas City beat Texas 6-4.

New York blanked Montreal 5-0, Cincinnati downed Houston 4-2, St. Louis nipped Chicago 9-8, San Diego topped San Francisco 7-3 and Atlanta edged Los Angeles 5-3 in 11 innings. Philadelphia at Pittsburgh was postponed by rain.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2

George Medich and Sparky Lyle combined on a six-hitter in helping the Yankees snap a five-game losing streak. Medich worked 8 1-3 innings to gain his sixth win in eight decisions while Lyle notched his sixth save.

Twins 2, Angels 1

Larry Hisle's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave the Twins a victory over the Angels.

Tigers 4, Indians 3

Gary Sutherland's double triggered a three-run sixth inning that carried the Tigers past the Indians.

Royals 6, Rangers 4

George Brett drove in three runs for the Royals, who won their 10th game in their last 13 outings.

40 Marin Teams In Keg Tourney

The bowling invasion on Oxnard continues this weekend.

More than 14,000 bowlers are entered in the 18-week California State Men's Bowling Tournament. The tourney, which runs through Aug. 25, includes some 40, five-man Marin County teams.

"They will be going down by plane and by car," said Walt Smith, a Marin competitor. However, Smith's aggregation will take a different route. He heads a group of 21 Marin teams venturing by bus. They chartered a Napa Transit Company vehicle which left yesterday.

Marinites will be among those bowling today at 4 p.m. in the Team event at Wagon Wheel Bowl. Singles and Doubles will be held tomorrow at 9 and 11 a.m. in Tournament Bowl.

Last year, Marin sent 45 teams to Alameda for the tourney sponsored by the California Men's Bowling Association.

SAN RAFAEL'S Nancy McPherson, 17, last weekend won the Graduating Girl Scratch Division in the All American Youth Bowling Association Championships at Walnut Creek. Hertwo-game score was 404.

She will join three others for the national regionals July 5-7 in Denver. If Nancy wins in Denver, she would advance to the televised National Finals in Irving, Tex. July 19-21.

LYNN WOOD of Novato Tuesday bowled a 133 triplicate in he Early Mixed League at Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

Sharon In Crucial Cup Net Match

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — It was all up to Sharon Walsh today.

The San Rafael tennis player was to take the court this afternoon for the deciding doubles match in the semi-final round of the Federation Cup tournament, the women's equivalent of the Davis Cup.

She and Julie Heldman were to confront the West German team in doubles after the two nations split their singles matches. Helga Masthoff defeated Heldman, 6-2, 6-2, but Jeanne Evert evened things with a 6-4, 6-2 win over Helga Hoesl.

In the other semi-final, Australia held a 1-0 lead over Great Britain following Evonne Goolagong's 6-4, 6-2 victory over Virginia Wade.

Australia and Britain reached the semis with victories yesterday. Australia swept Italy, 3-0, while Britain edged South Africa, 2-1. The U.S. and Germany qualified with victories Thursday.

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Storm of the World Football League yesterday signed Houston Oiler offensive tackle Levert Carr to a contract starting in 1975.

Rentzel Is Happy Back With Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — For the first time in 10 months, Lance Rentzel knew today he would be able to resume his football career.

Rentzel, 30, an eight-year veteran and a former all-pro wide receiver, has been reinstated by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"I'm just as happy as I can be," Rentzel said.

Rozelle made the announcement in New York yesterday after notifying Rentzel in person at his Beverly Hills, Calif. apartment the previous night.

Rentzel was suspended last July 24 following his guilty plea to a marijuana possession charge.

A court fined him and gave him a suspended jail sentence, but Rozelle suspended him indefinitely from playing in the NFL for violating probation.

Rentzel had been on probation for his 1971 arrest and conviction on an indecent exposure charge in Dallas while he was with the Cowboys. He pleaded guilty to a similar charge in Minnesota in 1966.

"I went down to Long Beach and got my playbook," said a jubilant Rentzel who announced he was turning down three "very good offers" from World Football League clubs to rejoin the Los Angeles Rams.

The Rams' training camp is located in Long Beach.

"I'm anxious to rejoin the Rams," he said. "They are my football team. I think the Rams are going to the Super Bowl and I want to be a part of that."

No-Hitter For Minor League Pitcher Todd

VICTORIA, Tex. (UPI) — Larry Todd of the Victoria Toros tossed a no-hitter last night in the Texas League, stopping Arkansas 3-0.

The right-hander walked the first two Arkansas batters in the first inning but struck out the next two and another runner was erased on an attempted steal.

The triumph was Todd's first of the season after three straight losses.

Ron Diggle hit his eighth homer of the year—one in each of the last five games—to give Todd the only run he needed in the second inning.

Improved Glovework Helps Tars

Fielding, the apparently simple act of picking the baseball up off the ground and doing the right thing with it, was the major reason for College of Marin's improvement this year.

The Tars finished second in the Northern Division of the Camino Norte Conference with an 11-9 record and were 17-11 overall, better than last year's 9-12 and 13-16.

"It appears that our defense was the biggest factor in our success," said coach Vic Petreshene, and statistics back him up.

Although the Tars had the same batting average as last year, .256, and their extra-base hits declined from 58 to 38, they shut off the opposition by cutting their errors in half and quadrupling their double plays.

They made 35 bobbles in 1974 compared to 72 the year before, and 16 double plays to four.

Marin's leading hitter in conference play was outfielder John Billings, at .370, (27 for 72), fourth in the league. Second-baseman Steve Sherry, who did not make an error in conference play, hit .286 and tied outfielder Pete Arbios for the runs-batted-in lead with 16. Billings and Greg Mazeres had 11. Mazeres walked 26 times in league play, a team record.

Arbios hit three home runs. Billings had the only other homer.

Don Bianchini was the leading pitcher with a 4-3 record and 3.00 earned run average. He also led in innings pitched (75) and strikeouts (77).

Package Deal In NFL Rule Changes

The Tipoff:

The NFL's competition committee — the four moguls responsible for the sweeping changes in rules — were far from unanimous on the revisions, even splitting down the middle on some, but felt the only way they could get them past the disapproving coaches was to present them in a single package.

Q. Is Henry Aaron a real student of hitting, like Ted Williams was, or is he just doing what comes naturally? — Carl Youmans, Savannah, Ga.

I keep reading how Henry keeps a mental log of opposing pitchers, and there has to be some thought behind the more than 3,500 hits he has collected. But I also remember that when Henry was a kid playing with Jacksonville 21 years ago, a writer noticed that he was hitting with the label on his bat facing down, which was supposed to be a no-no, and when he was asked about it, Henry just shrugged, "It's all wood, ain't it?"

Q. I once read that Mickey Mantle of New York Yankee fame drove a golf ball 398 yards with a No. 3 wood. Is there any way you can confirm Mantle's distant drive for me? — Bill Land, Denver, Colo.

Yes, straight from Mickey's desk at the Metropolitan Bank of Dallas, where he's a special consultant, the Mick confirms that three years ago, on the 14th hole at Preston Trails, Byron Nelson's course, he almost drove the green with a 3-wood on the par-4, 400-yard-plus hole. A fellow named Murphy Martin stepped it off to peg the distance at 398 yards. "There was," admits Mickey, "a trailing wind." Mickey, who's also a vice-president of an insurance firm and runs a baseball camp, gets out to play golf almost every day.

Q. Can you tell me who Ingemar Johansson from Sweden fought in this country and was it for any title? — F.L.S., Elizabeth, N.J.

Have 15 years already passed since Ingo came in with his bevy of beauties and the "toonder and lightning" in his right fist to flatten Floyd Patterson for the heavyweight championship of the world? That was in New York's extinct Polo Grounds June 26, 1959. A year later, Ingemar himself was decked for the count by Floyd and lost again in '61 in Miami to Patterson — those were his only fights in this country, and he fled to a tax haven in Switzerland.

Q. What constitutes an error in major league baseball? Is it necessary for a player to touch the ball? — P.J. O'Brien, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Not as elementary as it sounds, dear Watson. There are 13 paragraphs outlining errors under Section 10.13 of the rule books, which defines an error as a "misplay (fumble, muff or wild throw) which prolongs the time at bat of a batter or which prolongs the life of a runner, or which permits a runner to advance one or more bases. You don't have to touch the ball to get an error if, in the opinion of the scorer, you "could have handled the ball with ordinary effort" (i.e., muffed pop fly).

Q. Since Dick Williams quit the Oakland A's, who will manage the American League All-Stars in July? Would Dick come out of retirement for one game, or would Earl Weaver of the Orioles take over since Baltimore was the Eastern Division champion? — Doug Schmidt, Westminster, Calif.

New president Lee MacPhail of the American League says in direct answer, "I'm aware of the situation, but we're not ready to announce anything at the present time." Precedent would indicate it'll be Weaver since when Casey Stengel, in 1961, and Yogi Berra, in 1965, no longer managed the defending Yankee champions, second place skippers Paul Richards (Baltimore) and Al Lopez (Chicago) took over, respectively, in the All-Star games.

Q. If a baseball player gets up to the plate batting either left or right, can he at any time switch his stance at the plate and bat the other way. — Albert Rocha, Berkeley, Calif.

Only between pitches unless he wants to risk a trip to the hospital. There is nothing that prevents a switch hitter from choosing either side of the plate for any pitch during his time at bat. But invariably, they follow the percentages — right handed against a southpaw, from the left side against a right hand pitcher — so they can pick up the curve ball coming into them.

Can Mrs. Finley Find Happiness On $100 Week?

VALPARAISO, Ind. (UPI) — Can Mrs. Charles O. Finley, estranged wife of the sports and insurance magnate, find happiness on $100 a week?

Sure she can, Finley says.

Circuit Court Judge Alfred J. Pivarnik has before him counterclaims from Finley and Shirley, his wife of 32 years.

Mrs. Finley, who is seeking a divorce, asked that her weekly payments be raised from $1,250 to $1,750.

Finley retorted his wife used to run their 250-acre spread near LaPorte, Ind., for about $100 a week. The owner of the Oakland Athletics and other sports teams suggested she should get by on that now, along with a little extra for "reasonable" household expenses.

Drug Charge Ires Chargers' Deacon

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran defensive end David "Deacon" Jones denied accusations of drug use yesterday and said he didn't expect to play for the San Diego Chargers next season.

"I don't think that I'll play another down of pre football in San Diego," the 13-year National Football League veteran said on a radio talk show.

"But I will play another year of football, because I want to prove to the people that Deacon is a football player and not a drug addict." He said he thought he would be traded.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle fined Jones, seven other Chargers, General Manager Harland Svare and owner Eugene Klein a total of $40,000 last month for alleged violations of the league's drug policy.

"The only thing I'm guilty of is being on a 2-11 team," Jones said, referring to the Chargers' 2-11-1 record. "I will not pay the $3,000 fine because I'm not guilty."

Package Deal In NFL Rule Changes

The Tipoff:

The NFL's competition committee — the four moguls responsible for the sweeping changes in rules — were far from unanimous on the revisions, even splitting down the middle on some, but felt the only way they could get them past the disapproving coaches was to present them in a single package.

Q. Is Henry Aaron a real student of hitting, like Ted Williams was, or is he just doing what comes naturally? — Carl Youmans, Savannah, Ga.

I keep reading how Henry keeps a mental log of opposing pitchers, and there has to be some thought behind the more than 3,500 hits he has collected. But I also remember that when Henry was a kid playing with Jacksonville 21 years ago, a writer noticed that he was hitting with the label on his bat facing down, which was supposed to be a no-no, and when he was asked about it, Henry just shrugged, "It's all wood, ain't it?"

Q. I once read that Mickey Mantle of New York Yankee fame drove a golf ball 398 yards with a No. 3 wood. Is there any way you can confirm Mantle's distant drive for me? — Bill Land, Denver, Colo.

Yes, straight from Mickey's desk at the Metropolitan Bank of Dallas, where he's a special consultant, the Mick confirms that three years ago, on the 14th hole at Preston Trails, Byron Nelson's course, he almost drove the green with a 3-wood on the par-4, 400-yard-plus hole. A fellow named Murphy Martin stepped it off to peg the distance at 398 yards. "There was," admits Mickey, "a trailing wind." Mickey, who's also a vice-president of an insurance firm and runs a baseball camp, gets out to play golf almost every day.

Q. Can you tell me who Ingemar Johansson from Sweden fought in this country and was it for any title? — F.L.S., Elizabeth, N.J.

Have 15 years already passed since Ingo came in with his bevy of beauties and the "toonder and lightning" in his right fist to flatten Floyd Patterson for the heavyweight championship of the world? That was in New York's extinct Polo Grounds June 26, 1959. A year later, Ingemar himself was decked for the count by Floyd and lost again in '61 in Miami to Patterson — those were his only fights in this country, and he fled to a tax haven in Switzerland.

Q. What constitutes an error in major league baseball? Is it necessary for a player to touch the ball? — P.J. O'Brien, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Not as elementary as it sounds, dear Watson. There are 13 paragraphs outlining errors under Section 10.13 of the rule books, which defines an error as a "misplay (fumble, muff or wild throw) which prolongs the time at bat of a batter or which prolongs the life of a runner, or which permits a runner to advance one or more bases. You don't have to touch the ball to get an error if, in the opinion of the scorer, you "could have handled the ball with ordinary effort" (i.e., muffed pop fly).

Q. Since Dick Williams quit the Oakland A's, who will manage the American League All-Stars in July? Would Dick come out of retirement for one game, or would Earl Weaver of the Orioles take over since Baltimore was the Eastern Division champion? — Doug Schmidt, Westminster, Calif.

New president Lee MacPhail of the American League says in direct answer, "I'm aware of the situation, but we're not ready to announce anything at the present time." Precedent would indicate it'll be Weaver since when Casey Stengel, in 1961, and Yogi Berra, in 1965, no longer managed the defending Yankee champions, second place skippers Paul Richards (Baltimore) and Al Lopez (Chicago) took over, respectively, in the All-Star games.

Q. If a baseball player gets up to the plate batting either left or right, can he at any time switch his stance at the plate and bat the other way. — Albert Rocha, Berkeley, Calif.

Only between pitches unless he wants to risk a trip to the hospital. There is nothing that prevents a switch hitter from choosing either side of the plate for any pitch during his time at bat. But invariably, they follow the percentages — right handed against a southpaw, from the left side against a right hand pitcher — so they can pick up the curve ball coming into them.

Parting shot:

Team tennis is a symptom of the over-exploitation of sports. Tennis teams never paid the bill) at the varsity level — why should they suddenly become a hot item with the pros?

Can Mrs. Finley Find Happiness On $100 Week?

VALPARAISO, Ind. (UPI) — Can Mrs. Charles O. Finley, estranged wife of the sports and insurance magnate, find happiness on $100 a week?

Sure she can, Finley says.

Circuit Court Judge Alfred J. Pivarnik has before him counterclaims from Finley and Shirley, his wife of 32 years.

Mrs. Finley, who is seeking a divorce, asked that her weekly payments be raised from $1,250 to $1,750.

Finley retorted his wife used to run their 250-acre spread near LaPorte, Ind., for about $100 a week. The owner of the Oakland Athletics and other sports teams suggested she should get by on that now, along with a little extra for "reasonable" household expenses.

Prime Rate Plays Major Market Role

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices fell sharply in sluggish trading on the New York Stock Exchange as investors were faced this week with further rises in the prime lending rate, and a stream of unfavorable economic news.

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 31.60 to 818.84. More than 27 points of that loss occurred in the final two sessions.

While the Dow indicated weakness in the blue chip sector of the market, the real trouble was, and has been since the beginning of the year, in the outskirts of the list. The less-publicized issues, with little if any institutional backing, have suffered from neglect for months.

Illustrating this, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, a broad barometer, fell 3.26 to a 1974-

low of 88.21. The NYSE index sank 1.73 to 46.56.

Virtually the entire list lost ground. Declines heavily outnumbered advances, 1,549 to 248, among the 1,974 issues traded. There were 649 new lows set, only 21 new highs.

Further demonstrating that the stock market is suffering not from heavy selling, but from lack of investor conviction, volume figures remained light. The week's sales totaled 59,369,720 shares, compared with 61,986,925 a week ago, and with 75,963,520 the year before.

While the decline this week reflected a mosaic of troubling economic developments, the key depressant remained climbing interest rates. On Friday, many major banks adopted a record 11 ½ per cent prime lending rate —that charged on loans to top-rated business borrowers.

This came as no surprise on Wall Street. The speed with which banks moved to that rate, however, was a deep disappointment to traders, since it showed the upward pressure on interest rates remains intense. In particular, business loan demand continued to climb.

Inflation, naturally, has been a factor in forcing interest rates to historic heights, and Wall Street received bad news on that front. The Commerce Department Friday reported inflation climbed at an annual rate of 11.5 per cent in the first quarter of the year.

The government also said the Gross National Produce declined at a revised 6.3 per cent annual rate in the first three months of 1974 —the largest drop since the 1958 recession. Wall Street has been counting heavily on some sort of economic recovery in the second half of the year. But analysts felt the latest government figures make that recovery less probable.

With that burden of bad news yesterday, the Dow suffered its worst loss of the week.

Two other lingering problems — Watergate and the Middle East — both moved into the headlines this week, and cast a shadow on the stock market. In particular, many traders had hoped against hope President Nixon would resign, sparing the nation, and the market, the drawn-out impeachment process. Nixon appeared to rule that possibility out.

Aluminum stocks became selling targets. On Thursday, Jamaica, the world's leading source of bauxite, a major ingredient in the manufacture of aluminum, broke off talks to renew bauxite contracts with American companies, and now appears set to raise sharply its taxes and royalties on the ore.

Alcoa, one of the 30 stocks in the Dow industrial average, dropped 5 ¼ to 44 ¾. Alcan Aluminium declined 4 ⅞, Kaiser Aluminum 4 and Reynolds Metals 3 ½.

Westinghouse Electric was the week's volume leader, dropping ⅛ to 15 ⅞ on 829,200 shares. International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., a firm whose name is now closely identified with Watergate, was second, off 3 ⅜, to 17 ⅝ on 757,500 shares.

Con Edison was third, ahead ⅞ to 8 ½ on 699,600 shares. The stock received a lift after the New York State Legislature approved substantial aid to the troubled power utility.

Pennzoil declined 5 ⅛ to 19 ⅜ in heavy turnover. On Wednesday, the Federal Power Commission said it is investigating the recent spinoff of United Gas Pipe Line, a Pennzoil subsidiary, for possible violation of the Natural Gas Act. United Gas Pipe Line fell ⅜ to 4 ¾.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

low of 88.21. The NYSE index sank 1.73 to 46.56.

Virtually the entire list lost ground. Declines heavily outnumbered advances, 1,549 to 248, among the 1,974 issues traded. There were 649 new lows set, only 21 new highs.

Further demonstrating that the stock market is suffering not from heavy selling, but from lack of investor conviction, volume figures remained light. The week's sales totaled 59,369,720 shares, compared with 61,986,925 a week ago, and with 75,963,520 the year before.

While the decline this week reflected a mosaic of troubling economic developments, the key depressant remained climbing interest rates. On Friday, many major banks adopted a record 11 ½ per cent prime lending rate —that charged on loans to top-rated business borrowers.

This came as no surprise on Wall Street. The speed with which banks moved to that rate, however, was a deep disappointment to traders, since it showed the upward pressure on interest rates remains intense. In particular, business loan demand continued to climb.

Inflation, naturally, has been a factor in forcing interest rates to historic heights, and Wall Street received bad news on that front. The Commerce Department Friday reported inflation climbed at an annual rate of 11.5 per cent in the first quarter of the year.

The government also said the Gross National Produce declined at a revised 6.3 per cent annual rate in the first three months of 1974 —the largest drop since the 1958 recession. Wall Street has been counting heavily on some sort of economic recovery in the second half of the year. But analysts felt the latest government figures make that recovery less probable.

With that burden of bad news yesterday, the Dow suffered its worst loss of the week.

Two other lingering problems — Watergate and the Middle East — both moved into the headlines this week, and cast a shadow on the stock market. In particular, many traders had hoped against hope President Nixon would resign, sparing the nation, and the market, the drawn-out impeachment process. Nixon appeared to rule that possibility out.

Aluminum stocks became selling targets. On Thursday, Jamaica, the world's leading source of bauxite, a major ingredient in the manufacture of aluminum, broke off talks to renew bauxite contracts with American companies, and now appears set to raise sharply its taxes and royalties on the ore.

Alcoa, one of the 30 stocks in the Dow industrial average, dropped 5 ¼ to 44 ¾. Alcan Aluminium declined 4 ⅞, Kaiser Aluminum 4 and Reynolds Metals 3 ½.

Westinghouse Electric was the week's volume leader, dropping ⅛ to 15 ⅞ on 829,200 shares. International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., a firm whose name is now closely identified with Watergate, was second, off 3 ⅜, to 17 ⅝ on 757,500 shares.

Con Edison was third, ahead ⅞ to 8 ½ on 699,600 shares. The stock received a lift after the New York State Legislature approved substantial aid to the troubled power utility.

Pennzoil declined 5 ⅛ to 19 ⅜ in heavy turnover. On Wednesday, the Federal Power Commission said it is investigating the recent spinoff of United Gas Pipe Line, a Pennzoil subsidiary, for possible violation of the Natural Gas Act. United Gas Pipe Line fell ⅜ to 4 ¾.

Church College In A Turnaround

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

The plight of the private, church-related liberal arts school is no secret —faculty, administrators, and trustees are all crying the blues over skyrocketing costs and declining enrolments and edging their voices with gloomy predictions of impending closings.

But at least one administrator, Dr. David K. Winter, vice president and academic dean of Presbyterian-related Whitworth College in Spokane, Wash., has quite another tale to tell.

Four years ago, Whitworth was like most other church-related schools with a declining enrollment and a red-ink bottom line on the financial ledger.

Today, enrollment is up to nearly 1,400 students from about 940 three years and the school's financial office now uses black ink instead of red.

According to Winter, the difference between Whitworth and other schools is that at Whitworth, the traditional models —both in academic and student life —of what it means to be a Christian or church-related school have been "junked."

That means, he said, that such things as compulsory chapel have been ended, student living has been turned over to the students and the academic curriculum has been radically overhauled to stress "competency" rather than traditional academic learning.

But this does not mean, he added, that the school has been secularized and the spiritual life of the campus thrust underground.

"The Christian college is not our model," he said. "The Christian college has generally been a mountain top retreat, like a commune, where people sat around and held each other's hand.

"Our model is that we let the students know we take Jesus Christ seriously ... but there is no proselytizing on campus. It is quite a change to have an emphasis on the Christian faith while there is absolute freedom for the student."

In what is probably the most radical difference from other schools that Whitworth has instituted to provide that environment is the scrapping of all the "Mickey Mouse" rules of student life.

Students, for example, are placed in charge of defining what rules, if any, will govern life in the residence halls or dorms. These rules or norms are arrived at after a process that involves questionnaires, hearings and group meetings.

"Freshman have a hard time believing us," Winter said of the freedom to make their own rules. "There is, for example, a lot of promiscuity among the freshmen."

But, he added, this changes as the student learns that he is taken seriously, that relationship is what counts and that the process of making rules is part of the process of value-defining.

In the academic classroom situation, Winter said, the school is trying to move away from the traditional model of the liberal arts school.

"I'm critical of the whole liberal arts tradition which says let's go up to the mountain top and read Shakespeare and I don't think the public is going to put up with that model much longer," Winter said.

He said the school stresses competencies such as being able to communicate, being able to locate information, problem solving and making judgments.

"It isn't good enough just to become exam passers," he said. The meaning of a college education is that "the graduate is a competent person."

Youth Sunday Service Is Set

The 7-Up Group of the Sausalito Presbyterian Church will present a special youth Sunday worship service at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

The worship service will include music, dance, and a short drama written by the pastor, Rev. David C. Jacobsen.

The 7-Up Group is comprised of the young people of the church. They meet regularly at 6 p.m. each Thursday at the church for supper and then hold their meeting which includes a rap session.

Unitarians Plan Hike And Outing

An afternoon outing and hike at the Audubon Canyon Ranch, followed by a weiner roast at Stinson Beach, will be held tomorrow by the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians.

Car pools will leave the Fellowship at 240 Channing Way, San Rafael, at noon. Others will meet at the ranch at 1 p.m.

The group will study the life patterns of the great blue heron and white common egret.

Catholic Charities Appeal Tomorrow

The annual Catholic Charities Appeal will be held in all Catholic Churches tomorrow in Marin, San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

A goal of $450,000 has been set by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken. The money is needed not only to help support the on-going Archdiocesan programs of social service but to help alleviate the problems which burden troubled communities.

Oratorio Choir Slates Friday Presentation

The Oratorio "Elijah" by Mendelssohn will be presented at 8 p.m., Friday (May 24) by the Oratorio Choir of the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in John A. Broadus Hall on the Strawberry Point Campus.

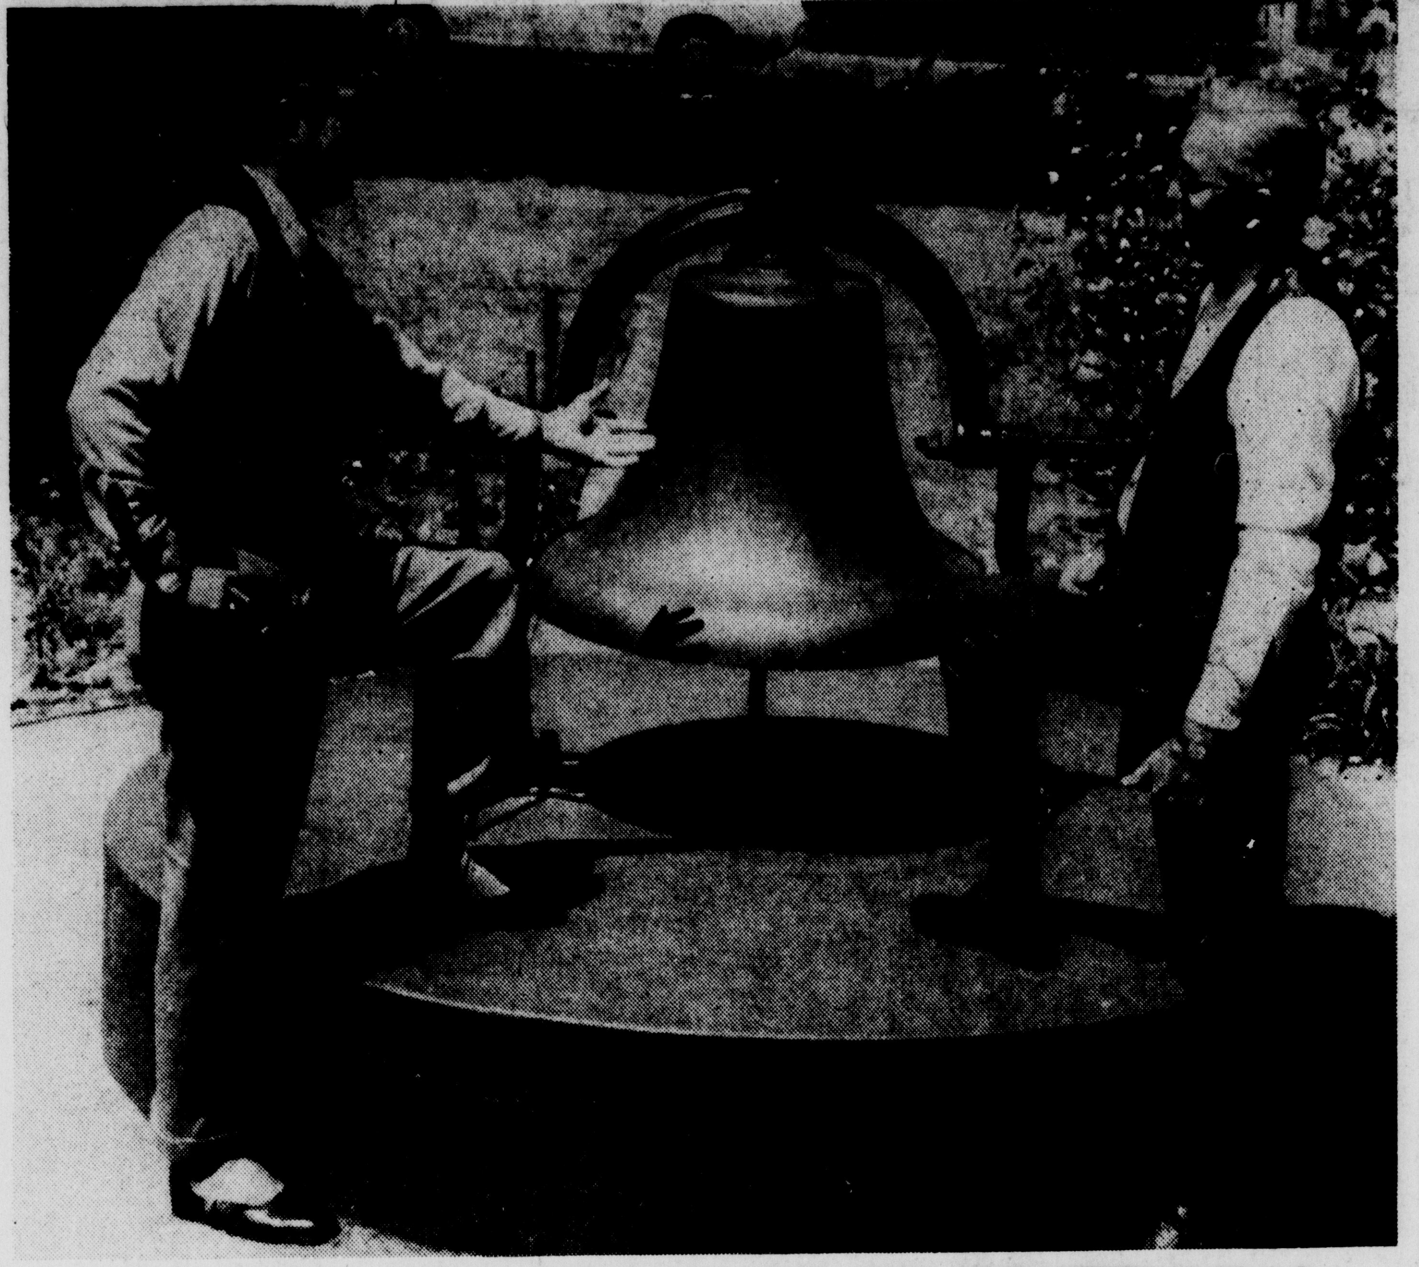
Joshua Law, instructor in voice at the seminary, will sing the role of Elijah, a bass.

Other soloists are Carole Hester and Cheryl Lancaster, sopranos; Nancy Bridgewater, contralto, and Carlton Burille, tenor.

Mrs. Orine Suffern, instructor in organ, piano and music history, will be organist for the free public concert.

The choir is made up of students and residents of Bay Area communities.

"Elijah" is a series of dramatic events, similar to an opera, according to Dr. John Johnson, director of the church music program at the seminary and conductor of the concert.



CENTURY-OLD BELL PART OF CENTENNIAL

Showing off the large cast iron bell which was brought by clipper ship around the Horn a century ago, Rev. Ralph Fellersen, minister of San Rafael's First United Methodist Church, explains to Jack Rittenhouse, chairman of the Council of Ministries the reason that the bell is mounted on a concrete platform in the church gardens. The bell formerly hung in the belfry of the First Methodist Church when it was located at B Street and Fifth Avenue, San Rafael. When the new Methodist Church building was completed at 9 Ross Valley Drive, it was found that the bell was too large for the belfry.

Lawyer Has His Own 'Holy Land'

By JAMES V. HEALION

WATERBURY, Conn. (UPI) — John Baptist Greco is a lawyer by profession but he also is a 20th Century herald, gently exhorting those who visit his "Holy Land, U.S.A." to love one another.

"We're not trying to convert people. We're trying to bring them closer to Christianity. We're trying to inspire goodwill and better understanding," he said in an interview in his downtown law office.

He was referring to his hilltop religious museum, the weather-beaten 17-acre Holy Land atop a crag of brush and ledge overlooking the industrial city of Waterbury. He gets about 40,000 visitors a year.

And he explains Holy Land, with its miniature village of Bethlehem and its multiplicity of biblical exhibits which tell Christ's story, saying:

"People come here to see the scriptures. As one man said, 'You open the Bible to us,'" Greco said.

His displays include professional sculptures, exhibits from the Vatician Pavilion of the 1964 World's Fair, and crudely fashioned pictorials, a chapel and information centers.

Greco, 79, makes no bones about the artistic eccentricity of the place — it seems to exude the aura of an amusement park. He says he uses anything he can get to mold an exhibit.

The white and black hands in one display stressing brotherhood, for example, were obviously those of castoff store dummies.

The Holy Land is supported by Greco's earnings as a lawyer and donations from visitors who are given hour-long tours of the exhibits.

They include a replica of the catacombs, where the first Christians lived underground, now threatened by highway expansion; the crucifixion, Mount Zion, the Gardens of Eden and Gethsemane, and dozens of other displays.

Greco, who to this day attends Mass twice daily and observes a holy hour, became an altar boy in a nearby church and served morning Mass.

While other youngsters attended school and received a formal education, Greco spent his time in the church sacristy, studying the classics. His scholarship eventually won his acceptance at Yale University Law School.

Greco wanted to be a priest, but he says "circumstance" made him turn to the law.

His idea for Holy Land was inspired by what he saw in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps of the Roosevelt era in the 1930s. Greco visited the camps as a lay preacher and saw the way the federal government used films or visual aids as part of its educational process.

He began using them. "Every time I used to go to the camps — as soon as the boys found out I had a film, they would all flock in: Catholics, Protestants, everybody," he said.

Greco tells visitors to his hilltop religious museum the strongest argument for the existence of Christ is the solar system. "It's like a clock, the only reading we have toward the correct time," and he asks:

"Who set that clock in he Heavens?"

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

The plight of the private, church-related liberal arts school is no secret —faculty, administrators, and trustees are all crying the blues over skyrocketing costs and declining enrolments and edging their voices with gloomy predictions of impending closings.

But at least one administrator, Dr. David K. Winter, vice president and academic dean of Presbyterian-related Whitworth College in Spokane, Wash., has quite another tale to tell.

Four years ago, Whitworth was like most other church-related schools with a declining enrollment and a red-ink bottom line on the financial ledger.

Today, enrollment is up to nearly 1,400 students from about 940 three years and the school's financial office now uses black ink instead of red.

According to Winter, the difference between Whitworth and other schools is that at Whitworth, the traditional models —both in academic and student life —of what it means to be a Christian or church-related school have been "junked."

That means, he said, that such things as compulsory chapel have been ended, student living has been turned over to the students and the academic curriculum has been radically overhauled to stress "competency" rather than traditional academic learning.

But this does not mean, he added, that the school has been secularized and the spiritual life of the campus thrust underground.

"The Christian college is not our model," he said. "The Christian college has generally been a mountain top retreat, like a commune, where people sat around and held each other's hand.

"Our model is that we let the students know we take Jesus Christ seriously ... but there is no proselytizing on campus. It is quite a change to have an emphasis on the Christian faith while there is absolute freedom for the student."

In what is probably the most radical difference from other schools that Whitworth has instituted to provide that environment is the scrapping of all the "Mickey Mouse" rules of student life.

Students, for example, are placed in charge of defining what rules, if any, will govern life in the residence halls or dorms. These rules or norms are arrived at after a process that involves questionnaires, hearings and group meetings.

"Freshman have a hard time believing us," Winter said of the freedom to make their own rules. "There is, for example, a lot of promiscuity among the freshmen."

But, he added, this changes as the student learns that he is taken seriously, that relationship is what counts and that the process of making rules is part of the process of value-defining.

In the academic classroom situation, Winter said, the school is trying to move away from the traditional model of the liberal arts school.

"I'm critical of the whole liberal arts tradition which says let's go up to the mountain top and read Shakespeare and I don't think the public is going to put up with that model much longer," Winter said.

He said the school stresses competencies such as being able to communicate, being able to locate information, problem solving and making judgments.

"It isn't good enough just to become exam passers," he said. The meaning of a college education is that "the graduate is a competent person."

Youth Sunday Service Is Set

The 7-Up Group of the Sausalito Presbyterian Church will present a special youth Sunday worship service at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

The worship service will include music, dance, and a short drama written by the pastor, Rev. David C. Jacobsen.

The 7-Up Group is comprised of the young people of the church. They meet regularly at 6 p.m. each Thursday at the church for supper and then hold their meeting which includes a rap session.

Unitarians Plan Hike And Outing

An afternoon outing and hike at the Audubon Canyon Ranch, followed by a weiner roast at Stinson Beach, will be held tomorrow by the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians.

Car pools will leave the Fellowship at 240 Channing Way, San Rafael, at noon. Others will meet at the ranch at 1 p.m.

The group will study the life patterns of the great blue heron and white common egret.

Catholic Charities Appeal Tomorrow

The annual Catholic Charities Appeal will be held in all Catholic Churches tomorrow in Marin, San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

A goal of $450,000 has been set by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken. The money is needed not only to help support the on-going Archdiocesan programs of social service but to help alleviate the problems which burden troubled communities.

Oratorio Choir Slates Friday Presentation

The Oratorio "Elijah" by Mendelssohn will be presented at 8 p.m., Friday (May 24) by the Oratorio Choir of the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in John A. Broadus Hall on the Strawberry Point Campus.

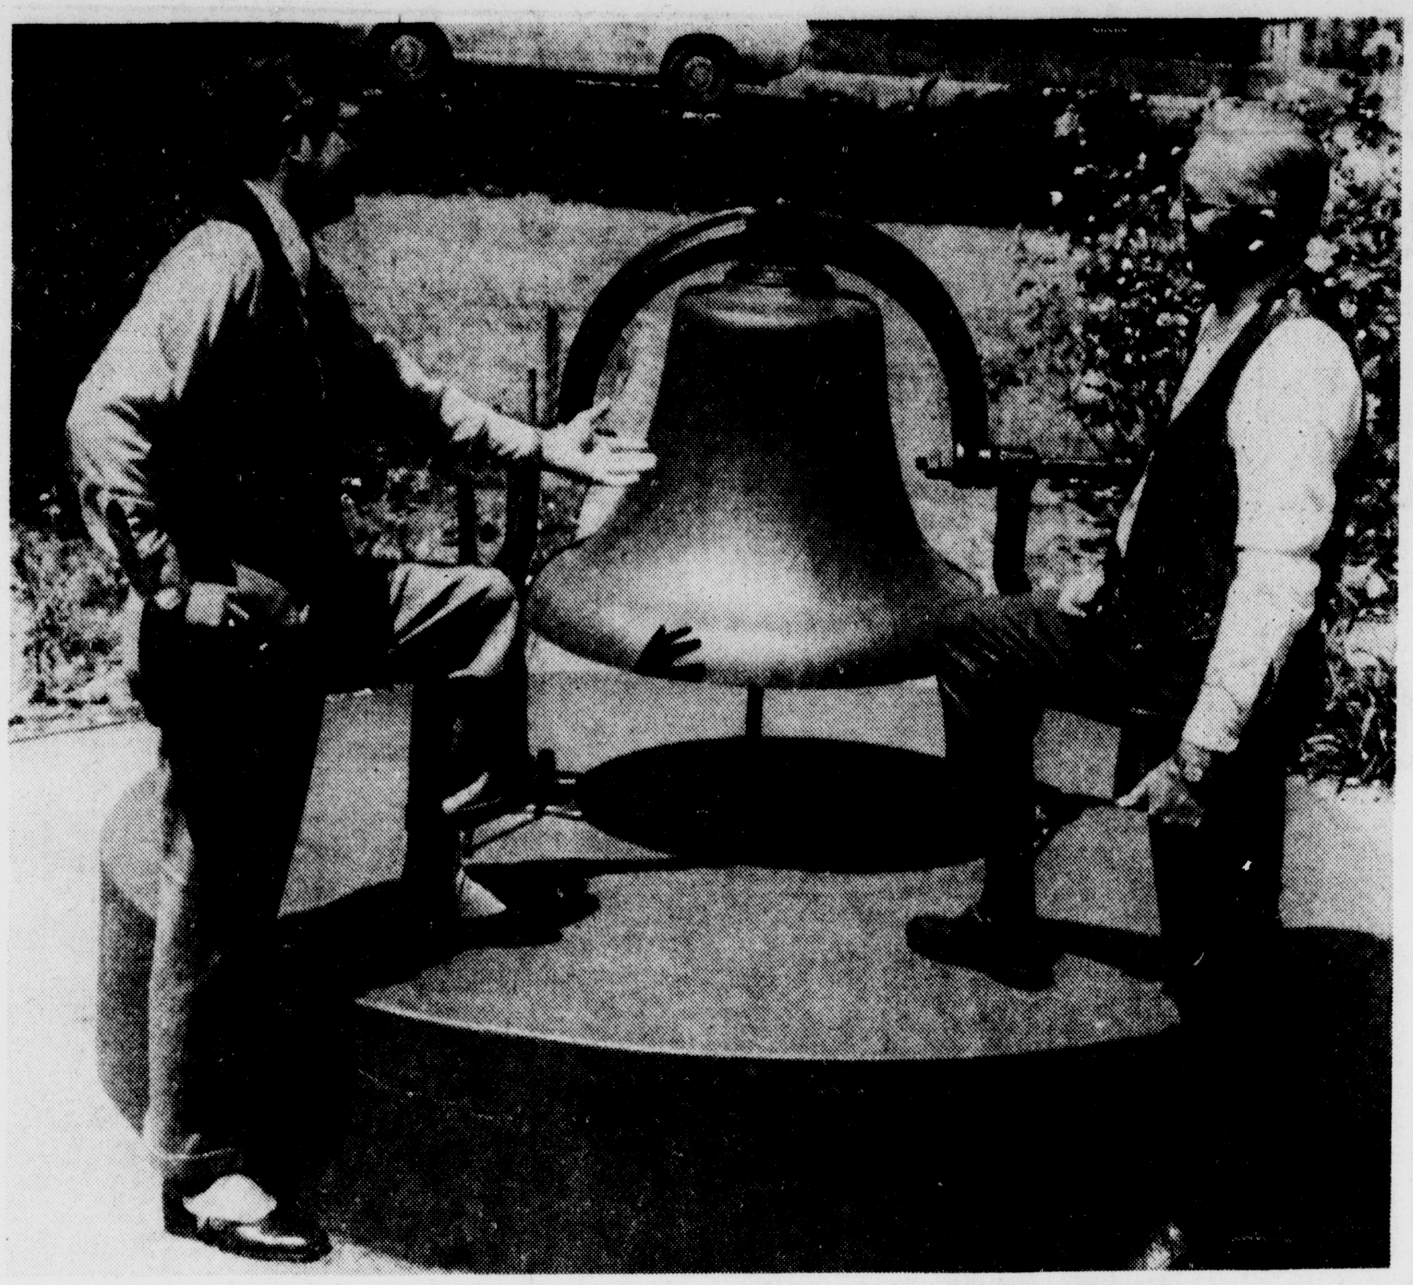
Joshua Law, instructor in voice at the seminary, will sing the role of Elijah, a bass.

Other soloists are Carole Hester and Cheryl Lancaster, sopranos; Nancy Bridgewater, contralto, and Carlton Burille, tenor.

Mrs. Orine Suffern, instructor in organ, piano and music history, will be organist for the free public concert.

The choir is made up of students and residents of Bay Area communities.

"Elijah" is a series of dramatic events, similar to an opera, according to Dr. John Johnson, director of the church music program at the seminary and conductor of the concert.



CENTURY-OLD BELL PART OF CENTENNIAL

Showing off the large cast iron bell which was brought by clipper ship around the Horn a century ago, Rev. Ralph Fellersen, minister of San Rafael's First United Methodist Church, explains to Jack Rittenhouse, chairman of the Council of Ministries the reason that the bell is mounted on a concrete platform in the church gardens. The bell formerly hung in the belfry of the First Methodist Church when it was located at B Street and Fifth Avenue, San Rafael. When the new Methodist Church building was completed at 9 Ross Valley Drive, it was found that the bell was too large for the belfry.

Lawyer Has His Own 'Holy Land'

By JAMES V. HEALION

WATERBURY, Conn. (UPI) — John Baptist Greco is a lawyer by profession but he also is a 20th Century herald, gently exhorting those who visit his "Holy Land, U.S.A." to love one another.

"We're not trying to convert people. We're trying to bring them closer to Christianity. We're trying to inspire goodwill and better understanding," he said in an interview in his downtown law office.

He was referring to his hilltop religious museum, the weather-beaten 17-acre Holy Land atop a crag of brush and ledge overlooking the industrial city of Waterbury. He gets about 40,000 visitors a year.

And he explains Holy Land, with its miniature village of Bethlehem and its multiplicity of biblical exhibits which tell Christ's story, saying:

"People come here to see the scriptures. As one man said, 'You open the Bible to us,'" Greco said.

His displays include professional sculptures, exhibits from the Vatician Pavilion of the 1964 World's Fair, and crudely fashioned pictorials, a chapel and information centers.

Greco, 79, makes no bones about the artistic eccentricity of the place — it seems to exude the aura of an amusement park. He says he uses anything he can get to mold an exhibit.

The white and black hands in one display stressing brotherhood, for example, were obviously those of castoff store dummies.

The Holy Land is supported by Greco's earnings as a lawyer and donations from visitors who are given hour-long tours of the exhibits.

They include a replica of the catacombs, where the first Christians lived underground, now threatened by highway expansion; the crucifixion, Mount Zion, the Gardens of Eden and Gethsemane, and dozens of other displays.

Greco, who to this day attends Mass twice daily and observes a holy hour, became an altar boy in a nearby church and served morning Mass.

While other youngsters attended school and received a formal education, Greco spent his time in the church sacristy, studying the classics. His scholarship eventually won his acceptance at Yale University Law School.

Greco wanted to be a priest, but he says "circumstance" made him turn to the law.

His idea for Holy Land was inspired by what he saw in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps of the Roosevelt era in the 1930s. Greco visited the camps as a lay preacher and saw the way the federal government used films or visual aids as part of its educational process.

He began using them. "Every time I used to go to the camps — as soon as the boys found out I had a film, they would all flock in: Catholics, Protestants, everybody," he said.

Greco tells visitors to his hilltop religious museum the strongest argument for the existence of Christ is the solar system. "It's like a clock, the only reading we have toward the correct time," and he asks:

"Who set that clock in he Heavens?"

The First Baptist Church of San Anselmo has been without a permanent pastor since the resignation of Dr. Ralph J. Fortune in July 1973. Since then, Rev. Orvil T. Unger of Novato has been interim pastor and John M. Foreman of San Rafael, the minister of youth.

Max Lyall Is Named To Seminary's Staff

Max Lyall, concert pianist and assistant professor of music at Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn., has been named to the faculty of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary.

The new faculty member has an associate of arts degree from Northern Oklahoma College at Tonkawa, a bachelor of music from Oklahoma Baptist University; master of music from the University of Oklahoma. He is a candidate for the doctor of musical arts degree from Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, Md.

He worked for three years at the Southern Baptist Sunday School's Church Music Department and taught at Okalhoma Baptist University for one year.

Lyall has written for the "Church Musician," "Junior Musician" and "Youth Musician" published by the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board.

Proposition 9 Leader Blasts Mail Subsidy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state of California has spent $628,900 to subsidize the June primary election campaigns of state legislators, Harold Willens, chairman of the California Coalition for Proposition 9, said yesterday.

He was referring to a law which permits incumbents to mail material to their constitutents at state expense. Most legislators exercise the privilege close to their election campaigns.

"This is another blatant abuse of legislative privilege which Proposition 9 will end when it is approved by the voters on June 4," Willens said.

In 1972, he said the value of the mailings to incumbents exceeded the average total expenditures in the general election of their opponents.

The law, which is intended to help lawmakers communicate with their constituents, allows assemblymen to send mailings up to 55 days before an election. Senatorial mailings can go out 45 days before an election.

"However, because the newsletters are mailed third class, many arrive just before election day and must be considered as campaign literature," Willens said.

Proposition 9 would prohibit mailings by incumbents seeking reelection from the time they file for office in March until after the November election.

In 1972, an average of $18,000 is spent each year per assemblyman on a total of three mailings. An average of $32,000 was spent annually for mailings for each senator.

Willens said it was scandalous that the Senate Rules Committee has refused to issue data about mailings this year.

The opening lead made it clear that East held the ace and queen of clubs. East could not also hold the top hearts since he had never entered the bidding. And if West had held both top hearts he would have opened the king of hearts.

South wasn't a bit happy to discover that the top hearts were split, since this meant that his contract could not be made unless the opponents made a mistake in the play of the hearts.

CUNNING PLAY

There is a cunning play to use in this situation: you must persuade the opponents that you want to take a finesse that is going to lose. They will open the doors for you, only to discover that you have stolen a trick.

In this case, South ruffed the second club, drew trumps with the ace and queen and then led the jack of hearts from dummy. East thought that South had hearts headed by the K-10 and that he was going to lose a finesse to a queen in the West hand. East therefore played a low heart, and the jack forced out West's king of hearts.

SIMPLE MATTER

It was a simple matter to return to dummy with the queen of diamonds and lead another heart toward the queen to set up the vital tenth trick.

ART REVIEW

Photography Expresses Simple Things In Life

By ADA GARFINKEL

A gentle sensitivity to the poetical and dramatic potential inherent in simple things characterizes the photographs of Robert B. Miller at the Social Security Gallery in San Rafael.

Miller, who has been taking pictures for only the past three years and lives in Portland, Ore. and is one of several allied photographers from that city whose works have been shown at the gallery in the past year.

His black and white photos range from whitest white to subtle grays to black. His subject matter includes the world of people and nature and the labyrinthian mazes of underground tunnels and other architectural intricacies.

Meticulous mounting adds to the pleasure of the exhibit.

Pictorial balance — weight, scale, placement — and textural and tonal sensitivity make even his standard scenic shots seem special.

Miller's close attention to detail is seen in his highly reflective shots of swiss chard leaves glistening like jewels in a weathered log suspended above a brittle, rocky ledge, and in a spidery network of delicate branches.

Among his finest shots is the interior of a home, focussing on a bent-wood rocker and several houseplants caught within the beam of sunlight streaming through an open window.

Another striking one is his fine character study of a slender grandmother surrounded by portraits of children and grandchildren, objets d'art, and memorabilia of a rich and active life.

This exhibit will continue through June 7 and may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Gallery, 549 Northgate Drive.

'Jubilee' — A Sparkling History Of San Rafael

By GERALD GENES

The 10-day San Rafael Centennial celebration began last night with, "Jubilee", an historical musical written and supervised by Paul and Val McMullen and staged at the San Rafael High School auditorium.

"Jubilee," recounts the beginnings, struggles, and growth of the city, its triumphs and tragedies and is sprinkled with a bit of philosophy. "We made our mistakes," Paul McMullen says as Don Timoteo Murphy, the lusty, fun loving Irishman of the early California; "now it's your turn."

"Jubilee" is kept light and lively and fast-paced, although it is almost two and a half hours long.

We are taken on a journey through time, from 1830 when Steven Drown who does a fine job of singing, dancing and acting and his shipmates arrived at Yerba Buena to the present, when the ghost of Don Timoteo bequeaths the future to the living.

The time travelers pause at Murphy's Hacienda in the year 1840. It is here that the robust bachelor has his discreet liaisons with the ladyies.

One of his lady loves is Julia, played by Carolyn Caton. Miss Caton sang a lovely version of, "When I Dance With the Person I Love." She has a marvelous voice and excellent state presence, but unfortunately, sings only two solo numbers.

The gold rush days of 1849 rush by with Eyrle Asceves singing a nice rendition of "I'm on My Way" from the play "Paint Your Wagon".

The packed auditorium was delighted with Jessie Diffley as Susan B. Anthony, the suffragette, who visited the womenfolk of San Rafael in 1872. Miss Diffley swooped down on the stage from the rear of the auditorium and took command immediatley, leading her chorus through a rollicking version of, "Chin Up Ladies," which almost brought down the house donwn.

"Jubilee", is a huge undertaking, with twenty three musical numbers and 100 cast members. It has an amazing array of talent, from skilled professionals to the young boys and girls who performed admirably. It is a nice way to begin the Centennial Celebration. "Jubilee" will be performed today and tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. and Tuesday through Friday next week.

"Jubilee" — Historical music review in two acts, written and supervised by Paul and Val McMullen. Directed by Valda Carter; musical director, Hugo Rinaldi; costumes designed by Ron Giambastiani and Gay Fahrner; set designed by Sam Posner; lights designed by Sally Rupp. The cast: Fred, Bob Knox; Emily, Kathryn McGeorge; Edna, Jessie Diffley; Tom, Brian Bettini; Don Timoteo, Paul McMullen; sailors, Steven Drown, Richard Pisani; Steve Brown; Captain Johnson, Jim Porter; Julia, Carolyn Caton; Josh, Eyrle Asceves; Bill, Ed Hanley; Helen, Patti Newman, and a very large cast.

New Policy On Rentals Due Study

A proposal to allow "mother-in-law apartments" in single-family residential areas — provided the landlord agrees to rent controls — will be discussed Monday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

According to county planners, many illegal second units which now exist in Marin could provide a valuable source of low and moderate-income housing if legalized.

Planning officials have proposed that landlors who will rent to low and moderate-income families be given a use permit to legalize their second units, many of which were built without building permits.

Under the proposal, new second units would be permitted in some areas on condition they are rented to families of moderate means.

The commission, meeting at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will discuss various ways of enforcing rent control.

Four Months In Assault

Steven Halber Tadt, 30, of San Francisco, was given four months in Marin County Jail yesterday after he pleaded guilty to sex perversion.

A second count of rape was dismissed by Marin Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best.

Halberstadt admitted picking up an 18-year-old San Francisco woman at a Mill Valley bus stop last July, promising her a ride home, but instead taking her to a bunker on the Marin Headlands and assaulting her.

Marriage Of Aide Is Ended

The marriage of Judy Gail Ainsworth of San Anselmo, administrative assistant to Marin County Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini was dissolved yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

She and her husband, David, married in 1960 and moved to Marin seven years ago. They have two children.

Mrs. Ainsworth served as Giacomini's aid from the time he took office in January of 1973. She was paid by him until supervisors voted her a $10,500-a-year salary in July of last year.

ART REVIEW

Photography Expresses Simple Things In Life

By ADA GARFINKEL

A gentle sensitivity to the poetical and dramatic potential inherent in simple things characterizes the photographs of Robert B. Miller at the Social Security Gallery in San Rafael.

Miller, who has been taking pictures for only the past three years and lives in Portland, Ore. and is one of several allied photographers from that city whose works have been shown at the gallery in the past year.

His black and white photos range from whitest white to subtle grays to black. His subject matter includes the world of people and nature and the labyrinthian mazes of underground tunnels and other architectural intricacies.

Meticulous mounting adds to the pleasure of the exhibit.

Pictorial balance — weight, scale, placement — and textural and tonal sensitivity make even his standard scenic shots seem special.

Miller's close attention to detail is seen in his highly reflective shots of swiss chard leaves glistening like jewels in a weathered log suspended above a brittle, rocky ledge, and in a spidery network of delicate branches.

Among his finest shots is the interior of a home, focussing on a bent-wood rocker and several houseplants caught within the beam of sunlight streaming through an open window.

Another striking one is his fine character study of a slender grandmother surrounded by portraits of children and grandchildren, objets d'art, and memorabilia of a rich and active life.

This exhibit will continue through June 7 and may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Gallery, 549 Northgate Drive.

Magic Ingredient Can Change People

A MISSISSIPPI fertilizer man had some things to say in Marin this week which deserve to be more widely heard and considered.

The fertilizer man is Owen Cooper, recently retired president of Mississippi Chemical Co.

As a fertilizer man, Owen Cooper knows that the first foot of top soil on an acre of ground weighs altogether around 3,000 tons. Feed a mere 500 pounds of fertilizer into that top foot, and miracles of change can take place.

He visited Marin in his official capacity as president of the Southern Baptist Convention, spending two days at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary on church business.

Like the rest of us, he is deeply concerned about the tribulations we face on every side — Watergate, crime in the streets, inflation, drug abuse, etc.

OUR PARENTS and our grandparents, he observes, regarded public education as the panacea. Make it possible for anyone and everyone to obtain a good education and, presto, the social ills of the nation will dissolve. Trouble is, an educated crook is still a crook, Cooper notes. In fact, some of the best educated ones are involved in Watergate.

Sub-standard housing is a problem. When people are crowded into hovels, you cannot expect them to be altogether good citizens. Cooper stumped the state of Mississippi advocating improved housing for those who needed it. Some areas provided it. Trouble is, "they are just the same people after they move into the new housing. They don't seem to change."

Mississippi is a poor state. Poverty means hunger and disease for many. Cooper has long been, as today's youth like to put it, "involved" in helping to secure a better standard of living for the poor and helping through voluntary health agencies to improve the state of public health. Again, Mississippi has made some strides ahead. "I thought," said Cooper, "that strong healthy bodies would mean better people, but the people haven't changed in moral outlook. Thieves are still thieves."

OBVIOUSLY WHAT'S needed, as Cooper sees it, is to work a bit of magic ingredient into our society which will bring much-needed changes in the hearts and minds of men.

The Christian message can do that. Cooper now devotes himself largely to working for such institutions as the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary which prepare workers to go forth into the fields to spread the miracle ingredient so much needed by contemporary society.

IS ALL THIS a foolish dream?

Both Cooper and Dr. Harold Graves, seminary president, cite evidence to the contrary.

Golden Gate Baptist Seminary has never had more serious nor better qualified students than it is attracting right now, Doctor Graves declares.

Cooper explains it thus:

The parents of today's college age young people were themselves children of the Great Depression. "We spent our lives seeing that our children never would have to go through the depression experience. We provided for them, everything.

"Now we have seen our children rebel against what they saw as our materialistic society. This has been most healthy. They are right.

"Now many of them are seeing that spiritual matters — the truth of God — is really the most important thing. They are coming to our seminaries in increasing numbers" and for the right reasons.

Understandably, Cooper views the future optimistically. Temporal problems beset us on every side. Traditional institutions are under attack. Are we about to see wholesale destruction all about us?

No matter what, "the Truth of God will prevail," says Cooper confidently.

To which all of us can say Amen.

The Japanese Example

Some Marinites could learn a thing or two about dog care from the Japanese. Their Oriental sense of family loyalty extends to their pets, so there is no big problem in Japan of abandoned dogs — which are rapidly becoming a national shame in this country. And it is not uncommon to see a Japanese man walking his dog, leash in one hand and a can or other receptacle in the other. The latter is to clean up the dog's mess. It is paradoxical that in our supposedly advanced country, we permit our dogs to mess freely where we would never consider throwing a gum wrapper.

Both Endorse 'Academic Option'

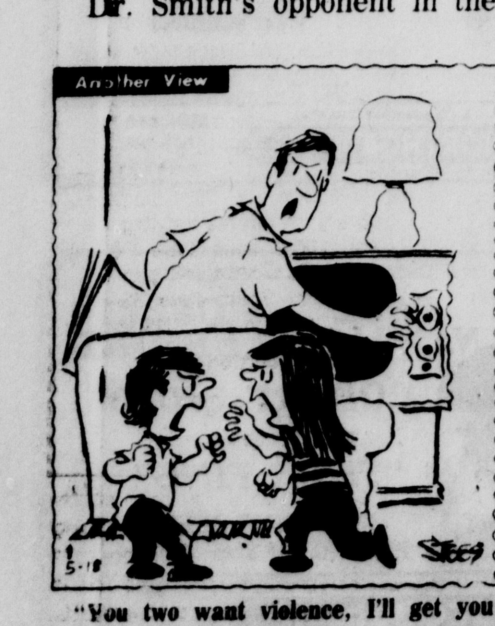
Recently we commented approvingly on the proposal of Dr. Darrell F. Smith, candidate for the Tamalpais High School District board, for introduction of an "academic option" program in the district's three schools.

Dr. Smith's opponent in the election, Elaine Brockbank, says that she also favors such a program, and has done so for some time. As evidence, she presented the "Report on Alternative Education" submitted to the district board last year, of which she was co-author. Among a list of recommendations contained in it is this:

"Tamalpais district alternatives should also include more structured or academically basic programs for those students and parents who feel this need."

We are pleased that both candidates endorse this concept. This should mean that, whether Dr. Smith or Mrs. Brockbank is elected, the "academic option" will not be overlooked.

Dr. Smith, however, has put greater stress on the need for such an option.



"You two want violence, I'll get you some real violence."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Years Of Involvement Qualify Candidate

It seems to me your editorial on the Tamalpais Union High School District trustee election fails to deal with the most important issues.

I am sure both candidates favor alternatives in educational programs. But in a time when the district is wrestling with an unprecedented financial crisis, and teachers are becoming increasingly militant in their demands, the community will best be served by a candidate who is not a newcomer to school affairs but someone who, through years of dedicated involvement and service to the district, has earned the necessary knowledge and widespread trust to be an effective trustee. That candidate is Elaine Brockbank.

John Glenn Viewed As 'Political Messiah'

Ever since John Glenn made since John Glenn made his first attempt to become an Ohio senator, I have wanted to express my thoughts about him. Because of his high moral character, I felt that if he won the election, "the lamb would be tossed to the wolves." I feared the erosion of his character by close association with some of the characters we have been reading about since "Watergate"!

But now, after seeing the destruction of many of the evil forces who were a threat to the fine young men desiring political careers, I now feel John Glenn may prove to be an inspiration to all good men with political ambitions.

We need a political Messiah, one who can restore honor, dignity and respect to our nation's capitol.

'Antedeluvian Solutions To School Problems'

In these Watergate days when integrity in high office and integrity in the media are both questioned, editorial writers need more than ever to be cautious about facts.

Your editorial, "Candidate Offers Unusual Proposal", of May 10, presented Tamalpais Union High School Board candidates, Elaine Brockbank and Dr. Darrell Smith, as having had the same degrees of past involvement in the district's activities.

In checking the record, I find that Dr. Darrell Smith is not a member of the citizen's advisory committee. Subsequent to his membership in the ad hoc committee for the program for human sexuality, he attended some board meetings; since filing for the board as a candidate he has frequently been in the audience at board meetings. Mrs. Brockbank served on the first Tam citizens' committee and last fall was selected to be the permanent leader of the present citizens' committee. She has long been a Redwood PTA member and for 10 years a leader in the Redwood international exchange programs. Her attendance at board meetings has been steady over the years.

I would be hopeful the Independent Jouranl in its future educational endorsements could avoid using a candidate as a ploy for its own sometimes antedeluvian and simplistic solutions for school problems.

Could Not Be That Much Ado About Nothing

While the nation writhes in the agony of Watergate, the Nixon press, in an effort that verges on the baroque, is frantically flailing the air to protect a man who seems already irreparably discredited.

Here at home the Nixon administration has lost traction. Abroad the political fortunes are shaping themselves to be in position for all opportunities should America fail to act in a decisive manner. Guilty or not, the image of Mr. Nixon will never again emerge intact enough to lead this nation.

There just could not have been that much ado about nothing.

'Dear Dick' Letter Accepting Resignation Of The President

WASHINGTON — A man in Leonia, N.J., writes, "If Richard Nixon did resign, whom would he resign to?"

It's a good question, and my legal counsel informs me that the president would send his letter of resignation to the secretary of state, who happens at this point in time to be Henry Kissinger.

Mr. Kissinger could acknowledge the resignation with a formal receipt, but I hope he would enclose a letter of a more personal nature.

IT COULD GO something like this:

Dear Dick,

All of us at good old USA, Inc., were saddened to hear that you were resigning. There is no doubt that you are going to leave a big hole in the government which even someone like Gerry Ford can't fill. But we understand your reasons for wanting to go. As you put it so succinctly in your letter, you would like to find something more challenging than just being President of the United States. Although we hate to lose you, we can't stand in your way of climbing up the ladder to success.

We're going to miss your beaming smile, your warm sympathy for your fellow workers, and your earthy language. I don't know anyone who called a spade a spade the way you did.

We're also going to miss the prayer breakfasts, the great state dinners, the trips to China and Moscow and San Clemente, not to mention those fun sessions in the Oval Office when you let down your hair and regaled us with stories about the Washington Post, the New York Times, the television networks and Chuck Colson.

I WANT YOU TO KNOW, Dick, that thanks to you the good old USA has never been in better shape. Our stock is at an all-time high, and although we've had to pass up a dividend this year, no one blames you. You didn't know about the oil crisis and you certainly couldn't guess the rate of inflation, and surely it isn't your fault that the dollar is in trouble abroad. I don't think anyone could have foreseen the events, and I believe it was very unfair that a few disgruntled stockholders called for your resignation.

We also admired you for the way you handled your personal tax problems and real estate deals.

The feeling here at USA is that you did the right thing in taking the deductions, and they still haven't been able to prove that any of your real estate investments weren't on the up and up. I know they keep harping about the milk thing and the payments Howard Hughes made to your friends, but this is just jealousy on the part of people who wanted your job. You were smart to ignore them.

The gang would also like to thank you for hanging tough over the subpoena from Congress for your records. Heaven knows where USA would be today it they ever got hold of them.

AS A SMALL TOKEN of appreciation, the boys and girls in the office chipped in together and bought you a little gift which I'm sending over by messenger.

It's a brand-new Sony recording machine, self-activating, which we're sure will give you lots of pleasure. You could dictate your memoirs or use it to record conversations with your friends. (Heh, heh.)

In any case, every time you turn it on, we hope you'll think of your long-suffering buddies here in Washington.

Nancy sends her best. Keep in touch, huh?

Sincerely,
Henry Kissinger

Kissinger-Gromyko Talks Proceed Despite Watergate

There have of late been so many pessimistic headlines about what Watergate may or may not do to the progress of SALT II that we have been asking questions among those who should know the answers. We come up with the following:

It is out of the question now for President Nixon to bring back from Moscow in June a complete SALT II agreement. If getting it done by that time was ever possible (which is highly doubtful) it has been washed out by intervening events. It isn't even certain that Mr. Nixon will be going to Moscow in June. He might be preoccupied at that time with domestic problems. And there seems to be some willingness on the part of the Russians to let the trip be postponed until Mr. Nixon's tenure is more certain than it is right now.

However, Watergate has not prevented Secy. of State Henry Kissinger from pushing ahead in talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko about what really matters most in nuclear weaponry.

THE ONE GREAT BIG question of the moment is whether the race in nuclear weapons can be cut off short of the time when the Soviet Union catches up with the United States in MIRVs. A MIRV is a "multiple independently targetable reentry vehicle." In layman's terms it is a missile with a nose cone which has inside it more than one warhead, each of which can be aimed separately.

At present the U.S. has a total monopoly of deployed MIRVs. But that American monopoly is about to be broken. The Russians flight-tested their first MIRV sometime during last midsummer. They are nearly a year now into the testing phase. Their deployment of such weapons will presumably soon begin. And, they have more tubes to which they can fit such warheads because SALT I gave them that compensation for their backwardness in MIRVs.

If nothing is done about this new situation SALT I itself will become hopelessly obsolete and the arms race will spiral upward. Dr. Kissinger is directing his efforts now to finding a cut-off level short of the time when both Russians and Americans will have MIRVed warheads on all of their missiles.

He has proposed to them a new measuring stick for relative equality. The two superpowers would agree on a specific and equal amount of "payload" or "throw weight." It would mean full equality for both in quantity of destructive material. But each would be free to divide that up as it chose between fewer heavy-hit blows or more less-heavy blows.

The Russians have turned this down, presumably because they lack the American technology for producing the small, but more precise blows. They don't like to be outnumbered in anything. To buy Kissinger's formula would force them into inferiority in numbers of blows, although having heavier individual blows.

THE SOVIET counterproposal was for equality in numbers of missiles, leaving each side free to mount as big or little as "payload" on each one as it liked. This would give the Russians a big advantage in "payload" which in turn would be politically unacceptable in Washington — as it was. The Senate is in no mood for anything which sounds like "inferiority."

Kissinger and Gromyko are now exploring the possibility of a blend of these two formulas which could be politically tolerable in both capitals. "Inferiority" is as bad a word in Moscow as in Washington.

Some halfway point between the two formulae is conceivable, and indeed possible. Nor does Mr. Nixon have to go to Moscow to conclude the arrangement. A Kissinger-Gromyko deal is possible and may well be achieved. It would not be a true SALT II. It would rather be a sort of codicil to SALT I. But if it put a ceiling on the MIRV race short of full deployment of MIRVs for both superpowers — well, both of them would save a lot of money on new weapons.

Arrogance In White House Behind Desertion Of Senators

WASHINGTON — As one Republican leader after another calls for the president's resignation, we are seeing the penalties of the arrogance of power assessed against the beleaguered occupant occupant of the White House.

That arrogance, to the point of complete insensitivity to anyone outside the inner circle, is illustrated ad nauseam in the transcripts of the conversations released by the White House.

Defenders of the Nixon faith seek at times to give the impression of a president victimized by a little group of highbinders responsible to no one. But it was the president himself who picked these men and who expressed his complete loyalty to them until he was forced by circumstances to remove them.

SEN. HUGH SCOTT, the minority leader, had a sharper experience of the White House arrogance than perhaps any other Republican leader. A reasonable, moderate man, Scott made several valiant efforts to help the president out of the pit and was slapped down for his pains. Like all politicians he has a long memory that, in this instance, goes back to a well-nigh incredible example of the arrogance of power.

A day or two before the first session of the 93rd Congress was to open in January, 1973, Scott got a call from H. R. Haldeman. We want to replace you as minority leader, Haldeman told Scott. We don't think you're up to the job.

Scott was astounded. Here was the second or third most powerful man in the executive branch telling the leader of his party in the legislative branch that he meant to shove him aside. Where was the separation of powers that so much has been heard about since Watergate broke?

Scott demanded to know for whom Haldeman was speaking. Was it the president? The answer was that John Ehrlichman concurred in the decision. That seemed to Haldeman to certify the fact that Scott was to be hustled off stage.

The minority leader then demanded to see the president to ask him directly if this represented his view. Not until 10 days later was he given an appointment. By that time Republicans in the Senate had re-elected Scott and so, as the lawyers say, the question was moot. But the sting remained.

ONE OF THE CHARACTERIZATIONS deleted from the transcript, it has been widely reported, was of Scott as a snivelling S.O.B. Small wonder that after having so long given his loyalty he should have come out with his denunciation of "a shabby, disgusting, immoral performance" by all concerned as revealed in the transcripts released by the White House.

Scott is no run-of-the-mine politician. The mean, self-centered conspiratorial nature of the conversations deeply offended him, as it did thousands of others across the country.

Such is the strange nature of this moment in history that three days after he made his statement, Scott went down to the White House for a leadership meeting. He sat on the president's right for a discussion of the economy and what to do about it. In a session of at least two hours, not a word was said about Watergate or Scott's statement.

Scott's colleague from Pennsylvania, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, also called for the president's resignation. Up for reelection this year, Schweiker, with Scott taking the lead, was trying to get clear of the Watergate ruin. Schweiker is regarded by both Democrats and Republicans as one of the abler young senators serving his first term.

TALK ON CAPITOL HILL is of the crescendo effect should others in a similar bind decide the time has come to cut loose from any involvement with a president so deeply mired in Watergate and the related charges.

Sen. Peter Dominick of Colorado, for example, faces a serious challenge in a state that two years ago repudiated former Sen. Gordon Allott. But whether such consistent Nixon loyalists and hardliners as Dominick can change their spots at this late date is questionable.

Repeated statements from the White House that Nixon will neither resign nor take advantage of the provision in the 25th Amendment allowing him to step aside temporarily seem only to increase the doubts among Republicans in Congress. So often he has said that he was committed beyond any question to one course, only to follow the directly opposite course a little later.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

May 18, 1974

About 200 Marin City pupils boycotted Sausalito public schools, instead attending "freedom schools" set up in churches.

Acoross the nation, teacher strikes accompanied school boycotts by black pupils, but a survey showed few schools were closed.

20 YEARS AGO

May 18, 1954

The federal government upped the price of Marin City to the Marin County Housing Authority to $785,000. It had been expected the price would be $250,000.

Richard A. McGee, director of the State Department of Corrections, said that San Quentin Prison, with 4,769 inmates, was the most crowded institution in the state system.

Magic Ingredient Can Change People

IS ALL THIS a foolish dream?

Both Cooper and Dr. Harold Graves, seminary president, cite evidence to the contrary.

Both Endorse 'Academic Option'

Recently we commented approvingly on the proposal of Dr. Darrell F. Smith, candidate for the Tamalpais High School District board, for introduction of an "academic option" program in the district's three schools.

Dr. Smith's opponent in the election, Elaine Brockbank, says that she also favors such a program, and has done so for some time. As evidence, she presented the "Report on Alternative Education" submitted to the district board last year, of which she was co-author. Among a list of recommendations contained in it is this:

"Tamalpais district alternatives should also include more structured or academically basic programs for those students and parents who feel this need."

We are pleased that both candidates endorse this concept. This should mean that, whether Dr. Smith or Mrs. Brockbank is elected, the "academic option" will not be overlooked.

Dr. Smith, however, has put greater stress on the need for such an option.

Kissinger-Gromyko Talks Proceed Despite Watergate

There have of late been so many pessimistic headlines about what Watergate may or may not do to the progress of SALT II that we have been asking questions among those who should know the answers. We come up with the following:

It is out of the question now for President Nixon to bring back from Moscow in June a complete SALT II agreement. If getting it done by that time was ever possible (which is highly doubtful) it has been washed out by intervening events. It isn't even certain that Mr. Nixon will be going to Moscow in June. He might be preoccupied at that time with domestic problems. And there seems to be some willingness on the part of the Russians to let the trip be postponed until Mr. Nixon's tenure is more certain than it is right now.

However, Watergate has not prevented Secy. of State Henry Kissinger from pushing ahead in talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko about what really matters most in nuclear weaponry.

THE ONE GREAT BIG question of the moment is whether the race in nuclear weapons can be cut off short of the time when the Soviet Union catches up with the United States in MIRVs. A MIRV is a "multiple independently targetable reentry vehicle." In layman's terms it is a missile with a nose cone which has inside it more than one warhead, each of which can be aimed separately.

To buy Kissinger's formula would force them into inferiority in numbers of blows, although having heavier individual blows.

THE SOVIET counterproposal was for equality in numbers of missiles, leaving each side free to mount as big or little as "payload" on each one as it liked. This would give the Russians a big advantage in "payload" which in turn would be politically unacceptable in Washington — as it was. The Senate is in no mood for anything which sounds like "inferiority."

Kissinger and Gromyko are now exploring the possibility of a blend of these two formulas which could be politically tolerable in both capitals. "Inferiority" is as bad a word in Moscow as in Washington.

Some halfway point between the two formulae is conceivable, and indeed possible. Nor does Mr. Nixon have to go to Moscow to conclude the arrangement. A Kissinger-Gromyko deal is possible and may well be achieved. It would not be a true SALT II. It would rather be a sort of codicil to SALT I. But if it put a ceiling on the MIRV race short of full deployment of MIRVs for both superpowers — well, both of them would save a lot of money on new weapons.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Arrogance In White House Behind Desertion Of Senators

WASHINGTON — As one Republican leader after another calls for the president's resignation, we are seeing the penalties of the arrogance of power assessed against the beleaguered occupant occupant of the White House.

That arrogance, to the point of complete insensitivity to anyone outside the inner circle, is illustrated ad nauseam in the transcripts of the conversations released by the White House.

Defenders of the Nixon faith seek at times to give the impression of a president victimized by a little group of highbinders responsible to no one. But it was the president himself who picked these men and who expressed his complete loyalty to them until he was forced by circumstances to remove them.

SEN. HUGH SCOTT, the minority leader, had a sharper experience of the White House arrogance than perhaps any other Republican leader. A reasonable, moderate man, Scott made several valiant efforts to help the president out of the pit and was slapped down for his pains. Like all politicians he has a long memory that, in this instance, goes back to a well-nigh incredible example of the arrogance of power.

A day or two before the first session of the 93rd Congress was to open in January, 1973, Scott got a call from H. R. Haldeman. We want to replace you as minority leader, Haldeman told Scott. We don't think you're up to the job.

Scott was astounded. Here was the second or third most powerful man in the executive branch telling the leader of his party in the legislative branch that he meant to shove him aside. Where was the separation of powers that so much has been heard about since Watergate broke?

Scott demanded to know for whom Haldeman was speaking. Was it the president? The answer was that John Ehrlichman concurred in the decision. That seemed to Haldeman to certify the fact that Scott was to be hustled off stage.

The minority leader then demanded to see the president to ask him directly if this represented his view. Not until 10 days later was he given an appointment. By that time Republicans in the Senate had re-elected Scott and so, as the lawyers say, the question was moot. But the sting remained.

ONE OF THE CHARACTERIZATIONS deleted from the transcript, it has been widely reported, was of Scott as a snivelling S.O.B. Small wonder that after having so long given his loyalty he should have come out with his denunciation of "a shabby, disgusting, immoral performance" by all concerned as revealed in the transcripts released by the White House.

Scott is no run-of-the-mine politician. The mean, self-centered conspiratorial nature of the conversations deeply offended him, as it did thousands of others across the country.

Such is the strange nature of this moment in history that three days after he made his statement, Scott went down to the White House for a leadership meeting. He sat on the president's right for a discussion of the economy and what to do about it. In a session of at least two hours, not a word was said about Watergate or Scott's statement.

Scott's colleague from Pennsylvania, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, also called for the president's resignation. Up for reelection this year, Schweiker, with Scott taking the lead, was trying to get clear of the Watergate ruin. Schweiker is regarded by both Democrats and Republicans as one of the abler young senators serving his first term.

TALK ON CAPITOL HILL is of the crescendo effect should others in a similar bind decide the time has come to cut loose from any involvement with a president so deeply mired in Watergate and the related charges.

Sen. Peter Dominick of Colorado, for example, faces a serious challenge in a state that two years ago repudiated former Sen. Gordon Allott. But whether such consistent Nixon loyalists and hardliners as Dominick can change their spots at this late date is questionable.

Repeated statements from the White House that Nixon will neither resign nor take advantage of the provision in the 25th Amendment allowing him to step aside temporarily seem only to increase the doubts among Republicans in Congress. So often he has said that he was committed beyond any question to one course, only to follow the directly opposite course a little later.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

May 18, 1974

About 200 Marin City pupils boycotted Sausalito public schools, instead attending "freedom schools" set up in churches.

Acoross the nation, teacher strikes accompanied school boycotts by black pupils, but a survey showed few schools were closed.

20 YEARS AGO

May 18, 1954

The federal government upped the price of Marin City to the Marin County Housing Authority to $785,000. It had been expected the price would be $250,000.

Richard A. McGee, director of the State Department of Corrections, said that San Quentin Prison, with 4,769 inmates, was the most crowded institution in the state system.

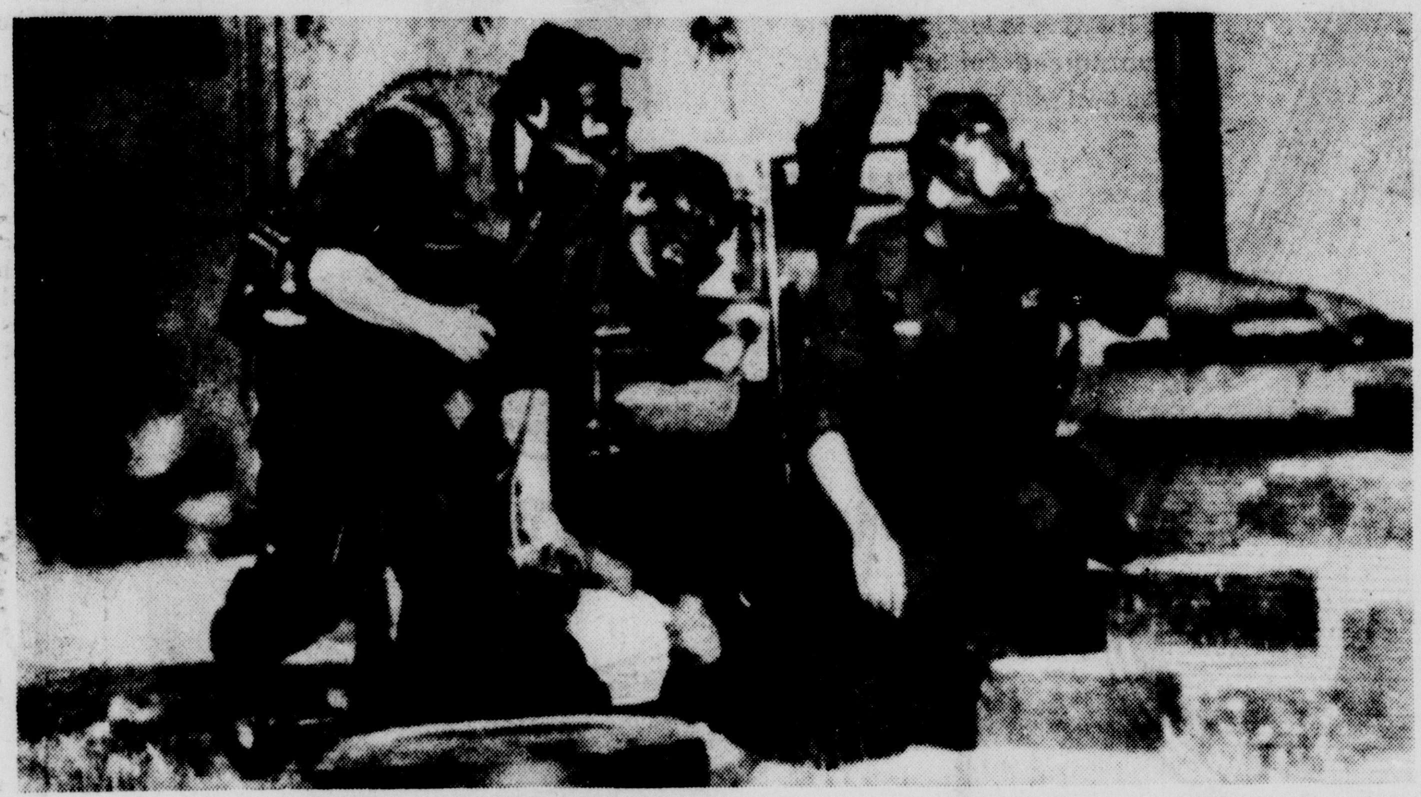
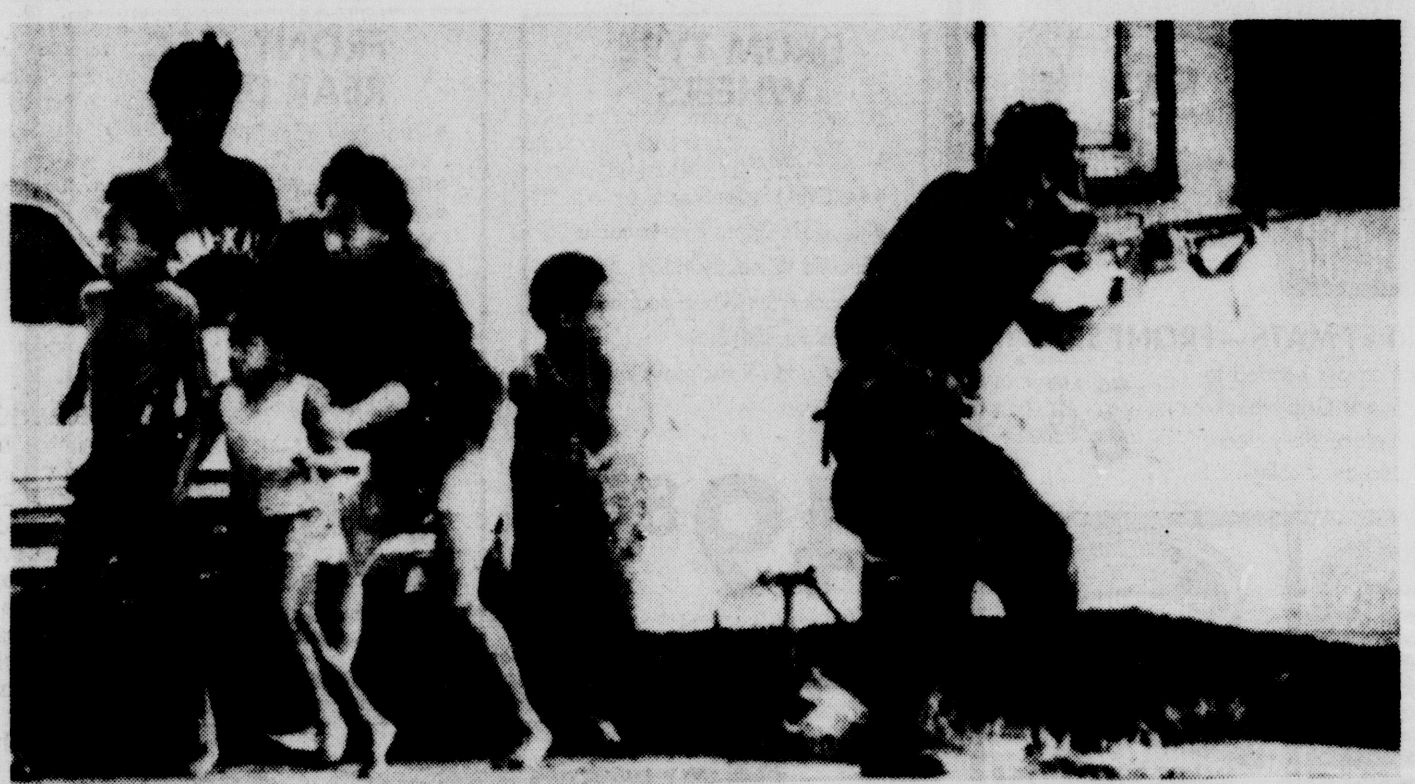
SCENE OF FIERY DEATH FOR FIVE

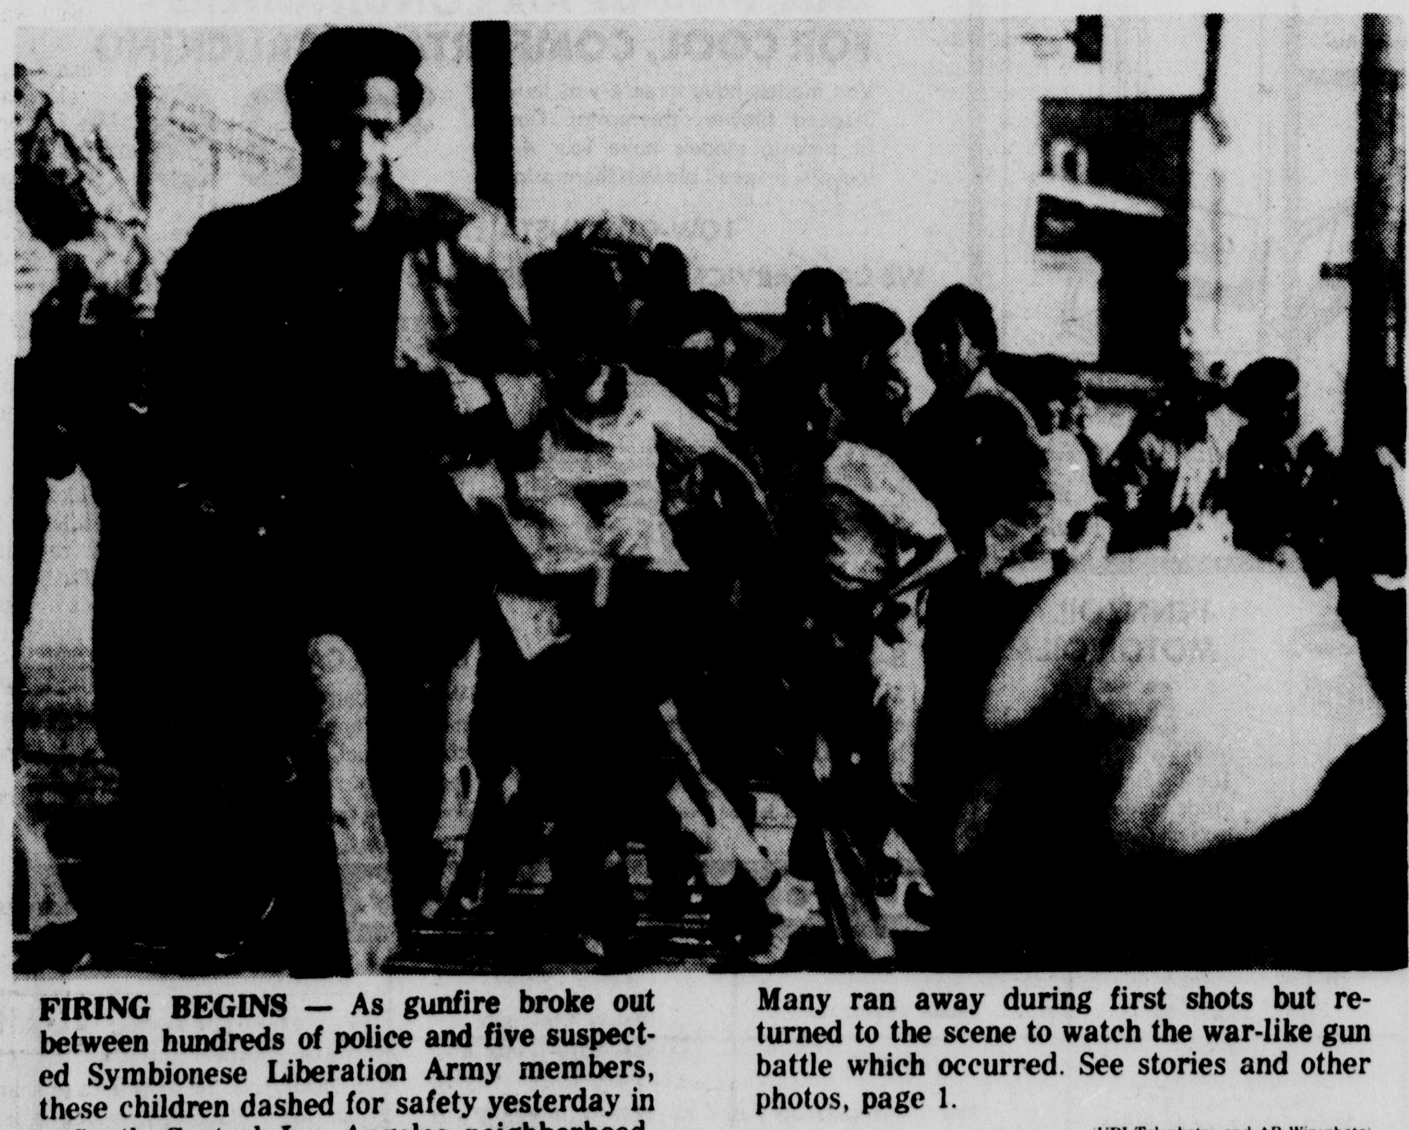
A machine gun carrying Los Angeles policeman moved into position yesterday to protect firemen as flames leap from the building in which a group of people carried on a running gun battle with hundreds of police. Five persons died in the burning house which was thought to be a hideout for the Symbionese Liberation Army.



ROUGH TREATMENT — Heavily armed Los Angeles policemen, first believing this woman was one of five persons who waged a fierce gun battle with police, yesterday delt her some rough treatment before it was determined she had been a hostage of suspected Symbionese Liberation Army members. She ran from a home into which police poured tear gas and gunfire as fire broke out within the home.



FAMILY FLEES — A mother herded her children to safety yesterday as a heavily armed Los Angeles policeman returned fire to an adjoining home in which suspected Symbionese Liberation Army members were carrying on a gun battle with hundreds of policemen. Police attempted to clear the neighborhood during the battle but many residents remained as spectators rather than seeking safety.



FIRING BEGINS — As gunfire broke out between hundreds of police and five suspected Symbionese Liberation Army members, these children dashed for safety yesterday in a South Central Los Angeles neighborhood. Many ran away during first shots but returned to the scene to watch the war-like gun battle which occurred. See stories and other photos, page 1.

Petalumans Burned In Auto Crash

Three Petaluma men were severely burned early today when the car in which they were riding plowed into a parked car on D Street in Petaluma and burst into flames.

Reported in critical condition today in the intensive care unit of Hillcrest Hospital were James Fulkerson, 21, of 2427 Magnolia Avenue, and James Phelps, 25, of 229 Douglas Street. Each had extensive facial and hand burns, a hospital spokesman said.

The two were passengers in a car driven by William Baxman, 23, of 808 Keokuk Street. Baxman was reported in critical condition at the burn unit of St. Francis Hospital, San Francisco.

Police said the eastbound car veered off the roadway about 1:30 a.m. and struck a parked, unoccupied car belonging to Thomas Agius of 1102 D Street. Police said flames engulfed Baxman's auto and destroyed both cars.

Baxman and Fulkerson were pulled from the car by passers-by, according to police. Phelps was thrown through the car windshield on impact.

Judge To Rule On Executive Secrecy Cloak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart says he — and not President Nixon —will decide whether a cloak of executive secrecy can be thrown over campaign donors who get federal government jobs.

Hart ordered yesterday that files on that subject, now in the custody of Nixon's former commerce secretary and campaign fund-raiser Maurice H. Stans, be brought to him Monday. He will review them and rule whether they should remain secret.

A federal grand jury is investigating whether ambassadorships or other jobs were traded for donations to Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski subpoenaed from Stans, who was Nixon's chief fund raiser in both 1968 and 1972, records showing what advice Stans gave the President on personnel selections and nominations.

Stans objected that the records were his own —and therefore covered by the Fifth Amendment —and that they also were covered by "executive privilege." That brought lawyers for everyone involved into court for a 3 ½-hour hearing yesterday.

Stans' lawyer, Robert J. Barker, produced a letter from presidential counsel J. Fred Buzhardt in which Buzhardt said Nixon had directed him to impose executive privilege on the documents.

But at the conclusion of the hearing, Judge Hart barked, "Get 'em here, get 'em here. Not today. Monday will do."

Nixon, however, allowed Buzhardt to waive executive privilege on records involving four persons already identified in public as being connected with both contributions and ambassadorships. They were Ruth Farcas, a $200,000 Nixon contributor and ambassador to Luxembourg; Vincent De Roulet, former ambassador to Jamaica and a $50,000 contributor: Cornelius V. Whitney, who madea $250,000 cotribution that was returnedamid controversy whether it was part of a deal involving the ambassadorship to Spain; and J. Fyfe Symington, a Maryland Republican who gave $100,000 and was promised a European ambassadorship by Nixon's lawyer Herbert W. Kalmbach.

Kalmbach pleaded guilty early this year to a misdemeanor for offering the ambassaorship to Symington. Later, in a Feb. 25, 1974, news conference, President Nixon declared that: "Ambassadorships are not for sale."

Kalmbach was a witness at the Friday hearing and said he had discussed the Symington matter with Stans. "I advised Mr. Stans of my meetings with Mr. Symington and told him of the fact ... I had been authorized to commit to Mr. Symington a future ambassadorial European post," Kalmbach testified.

White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler said the House impeachment hearings should be opened to the public "so the American people can judge whether they are fair."

Brown Rides Down 'Doomed' River

JACKSON (UPI) — After taking a raft ride down nine miles of the Stanislaus River, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Edmund G. Brown Jr. has expressed doubts about construction of the new Melones Dam on the river.

The raft ride highlighted a day-long campaign swing through the Mother Lode which culminated last night with a reception here for the secretary of state.

Accompanying Brown on the two-hour raft trip were proponents of an initiative to make portions of the Stanislaus River part of the state's wild and scenic rivers system which would bar construction of the dam.

Brown called for an independent study of whether the huge dam should be constructed.

He said he opposed construction "unless it were proven that it was absolutely necessary to the economy of the state."

Raft enthusiasts say the nine-mile stretch of the river is one of the best in the state for white-water activities and it would be ruined if water is stored behind the dam.

Brown noted the state Water Quality Control Board said the dam's reservoir could not be fully filled until it was proven there would be a need for the stored water.

"If you can't put water behind it, then why build it?" Brown said.

At the reception in the National Hotel here, Brown warned Democrats against overconvidence which could bring defeat in this year's elections.

"Some Democrats believe the Watergate scandal will lead to virtually certain Democratic victories this year," he told supporters. "But history has shown that overconfident candidates — dangerously underestimating the strength of their opponents—very often lose elections."

Prior to the raft trip, Brown criticized his leading opponents for their positions on Proposition 9, the political reform initiative,

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto opposes Proposition 9 and Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti supports it but has not actively campaigned for its passage.

"The lines are now drawn," Brown said. "and the first major public distinction has arisen between the three leading candidates.

A Bit Of Japan In Marin County

Back in 1951, the half dozen or so women of Japanese descent who met so casually over tea at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Mae Murata to exchange recipes and small talk had no idea their gathering would be remembered as the beginning of the Marin Nakayoshi Club.

As time went on the women met more and more frequently, and often their husbands, families and friends joined them for more varied discussions. An idea took root and flourished, and in 1958 articles of incorporation were drawn that made the Nakayoshi Club a full fledged non-profit organization that elected Wat Takeshita of San Anselmo as its first president.

IN THOSE EARLY club days, parties and picnics were the major events along with the traditional New Year get-together and the Obon Odori or the Dance and Festival of Souls.

As the club grew in number and stature, so did the activities. The theme changed more and more from simply social gatherings to a real effort to teach the young Nisei (second generation Japanese-Americans) and Sansei (third generation) appreciation for their cultural heritage as well as to promote the culture within Marin County generally.

When the Frank Lloyd Wright-designed Marin Civic Center was built, the club donated cherry trees similar to those in Washington, D.C., that had been given by the Japanese government.

NEW YEARS PARTIES grew into full scale cultural events with classical dance and song and traditional foods. Decorations transformed the setting into one with real Japanese atmosphere and feeling.

The Obon Odori, a Buddhist memorial festival and dance, originally performed indoors before a small gathering, expanded into an outdoor event in the old College of Marin football field, drawing hundreds of spectators. The club was joined in the Obon festivities by the Marin Buddhist Church, which still participates in this traditional event at San Francisco's Japanese Cultural Center each summer.

Potluck feasts and picnics still abound, but so also do shigin (classical singing) clsses taught first by Kiyoshi Kuwatani of Mill Valley and now by Hardie Honda of Tiburon; bonsai classes led by Kenneth Osaki of Mill Valley, ningyo (dollmaking) taught by Mrs. Yoshi Kawai of San Rafael, and ikebana (flower arrangement) classes taught both by Mrs. Kawai and Hardie Honda.

MANY MEMBERS are also skilled in tea ceremony and classical dance and some are able to play classical instruments of feudal Japan and demonstrate ancient arts and crafts.

The club often receives requests for demonstrations and performances from schools. Nisei (second generation) speakers are also sought after to explain the hardships and feelings of the Japanese-Americans during World War II.

Hillis and Joanne Newcomb of Woodacre, one of the few Hakujin (Caucasian) couples in the club, often invite his San Rafael middle school students to their home to sit on the floor of their tatami-matted, shoji-screened Japanese-style living room, sip ocha (green tea) and watch Nakayoshi Club members perform.

THE CLUB HOLDS at least one fund-raising event each year, beginning with an annual bazaar and street dance in Mill Valley in 1966-68. Members sell hand-made goods, prepare chicken teriyaki dinners and stage events to earn money for a multi-purpose community building and cultural center.

Teriyaki restaurants were staffed at the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross for several years and most recently at the Larkspur-Corte Madera 4th of July celebration. The club plans to have a Japanese Country Inn at the San Rafael Centennial observance this year, picking up the theme of 100 years ago.

As the high cost of land and other complications forced the temporary abandonment of a cultural building, the Nakayoshi Club turned its thoughts toward youth and initiated a scholarship fund which presents a $500 college scholarship to a deserving high school senior of Japanese ancestry. Now in its fifth year, the fund is financed primarily by a

THE ELEMENTARY radicals that go to make up the characters of "Nakayoshi" mean, literally, "that which is good among men" — a concept covering the ground between friendship and goodwill that club members try to emulate. These are in the first two characters. The last three shown form a phonetic pronunciation of "club."

DEBRA SHIMAMOTO OF Larkspur, a student of 15 years in the Hanayagi Hidemi School of Dance in San Francisco and a third generation sansei who is a 19-year-old sophomore at the University of California at Berkeley, performs a classical dance, the Matsu no Midori, or Green Pine, for a Marin Nakayoshi Club party. Classical Japanese dance is a postured dance with slow body movements, performed with an expressionless face, and using fans, sprays of blossoms, flags and other accessories, depending on the story being interpreted. Many of the dances are adapted from 16th century Noh dramas. Debra will go to Japan this summer as a one-year exchange student to the International Christian University in Tokyo, and will continue her study of dance in Japan.

Radio's Dave Niles Works Hard To Build A Store Of Knowledge On Many Subjects

For a study in contrasts, consider Dave Niles, radio station KNBR personality and long-time Marin resident.

Part of Niles' appeal to KNBR listeners lies in his ability to merge into the background and not intrude upon the music over which he is presiding — when it pleases him to do so.

Yet the same "disc jockey" can be opinionated and controversial. One recent impulsive act attracted more negative mail to KNBR than any previous incident in the San Francisco station's history.

The active Dave Niles can be caught jogging alone in an empty high school football stadium at midnight. But at other times, the passive Dave Niles sits quietly for long periods in Yoga postures and exercises.

He's a top skier, who enjoys the solitude of paintings.

He's a backpacker who spends days alone in the wilds, but who also spends many hours in the midst of throngs, arranging and supervising special shows for teen-agers in various state rehabilitation facilities.

HIS RADIO CAREER began as a student at the University of Pacific in Stockton where Don Chamberlain, also to achieve fame as a San Francisco radio figure, persuaded him to take part in a radio production.

> "Being on the air isn't as easy as it sounds," says Dave Niles of KNBR. "Some people think I just sit back and listen to records. I don't even hear the records. My job really consists of doing something between the records."

"That triggered my interest in radio," Niles explains. "I promptly switched my major in radio. I decided that it was through radio I could satisfy my desires to act and to find self-expression, and perhaps find fame and fortune as well. It didn't seem as big a gamble as the theater."

It wasn't quite fame and fortune that Niles encountered after graduation. Rather it was a series of demanding jobs with various stations from Reno to Redding.

"TALK ABOUT JOB experience, at Redding I was simultaneously manager of the station, sales manager, copy writer, spot seller, music librarian and relief announcer," he says. Evidence of Niles' early radio "know how" is the fact that

Back in 1951, the half dozen or so women of Japanese descent who met so casually over tea at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Mae Murata to exchange recipes and small talk had no idea their gathering would be remembered as the beginning of the Marin Nakayoshi Club.

As time went on the women met more and more frequently, and often their husbands, families and friends joined them for more varied discussions. An idea took root and flourished, and in 1958 articles of incorporation were drawn that made the Nakayoshi Club a full fledged non-profit organization that elected Wat Takeshita of San Anselmo as its first president.

IN THOSE EARLY club days, parties and picnics were the major events along with the traditional New Year get-together and the Obon Odori or the Dance and Festival of Souls.

As the club grew in number and stature, so did the activities. The theme changed more and more from simply social gatherings to a real effort to teach the young Nisei (second generation Japanese-Americans) and Sansei (third generation) appreciation for their cultural heritage as well as to promote the culture within Marin County generally.

When the Frank Lloyd Wright-designed Marin Civic Center was built, the club donated cherry trees similar to those in Washington, D.C., that had been given by the Japanese government.

NEW YEARS PARTIES grew into full scale cultural events with classical dance and song and traditional foods. Decorations transformed the setting into one with real Japanese atmosphere and feeling.

The Obon Odori, a Buddhist memorial festival and dance, originally performed indoors before a small gathering, expanded into an outdoor event in the old College of Marin football field, drawing hundreds of spectators. The club was joined in the Obon festivities by the Marin Buddhist Church, which still participates in this traditional event at San Francisco's Japanese Cultural Center each summer.

Potluck feasts and picnics still abound, but so also do shigin (classical singing) clsses taught first by Kiyoshi Kuwatani of Mill Valley and now by Hardie Honda of Tiburon; bonsai classes led by Kenneth Osaki of Mill Valley, ningyo (doll-making) taught by Mrs. Yoshi Kawai of San Rafael, and ikebana (flower arrangement) classes taught both by Mrs. Kawai and Hardie Honda.

MANY MEMBERS are also skilled in tea ceremony and classical dance and some are able to play classical instruments of feudal Japan and demonstrate ancient arts and crafts.

The club often receives requests for demonstrations and performances from schools. Nisei (second generation) speakers are also sought after to explain the hardships and feelings of the Japanese-Americans during World War II.

Hillis and Joanne Newcomb of Woodacre, one of the few Hakujin (Caucasian) couples in the club, often invite his San Rafael middle school students to their home to sit on the floor of their tatami-matted, shoji-screened Japanese-style living room, sip ocha (green tea) and watch Nakayoshi Club members perform.

THE CLUB HOLDS at least one fund-raising event each year, beginning with an annual bazaar and street dance in Mill Valley in 1966-68. Members sell hand-made goods, prepare chicken teriyaki dinners and stage events to earn money for a multi-purpose community building and cultural center.

Teriyaki restaurants were staffed at the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross for several years and most recently at the Larkspur-Corte Madera 4th of July celebration. The club plans to have a Japanese Country Inn at the San Rafael Centennial observance this year, picking up the theme of 100 years ago.

As the high cost of land and other complications forced the temporary abandonment of a cultural building, the Nakayoshi Club turned its thoughts toward youth and initiated a scholarship fund which presents a $500 college scholarship to a deserving high school senior of Japanese ancestry. Now in its fifth year, the fund is financed primarily by a

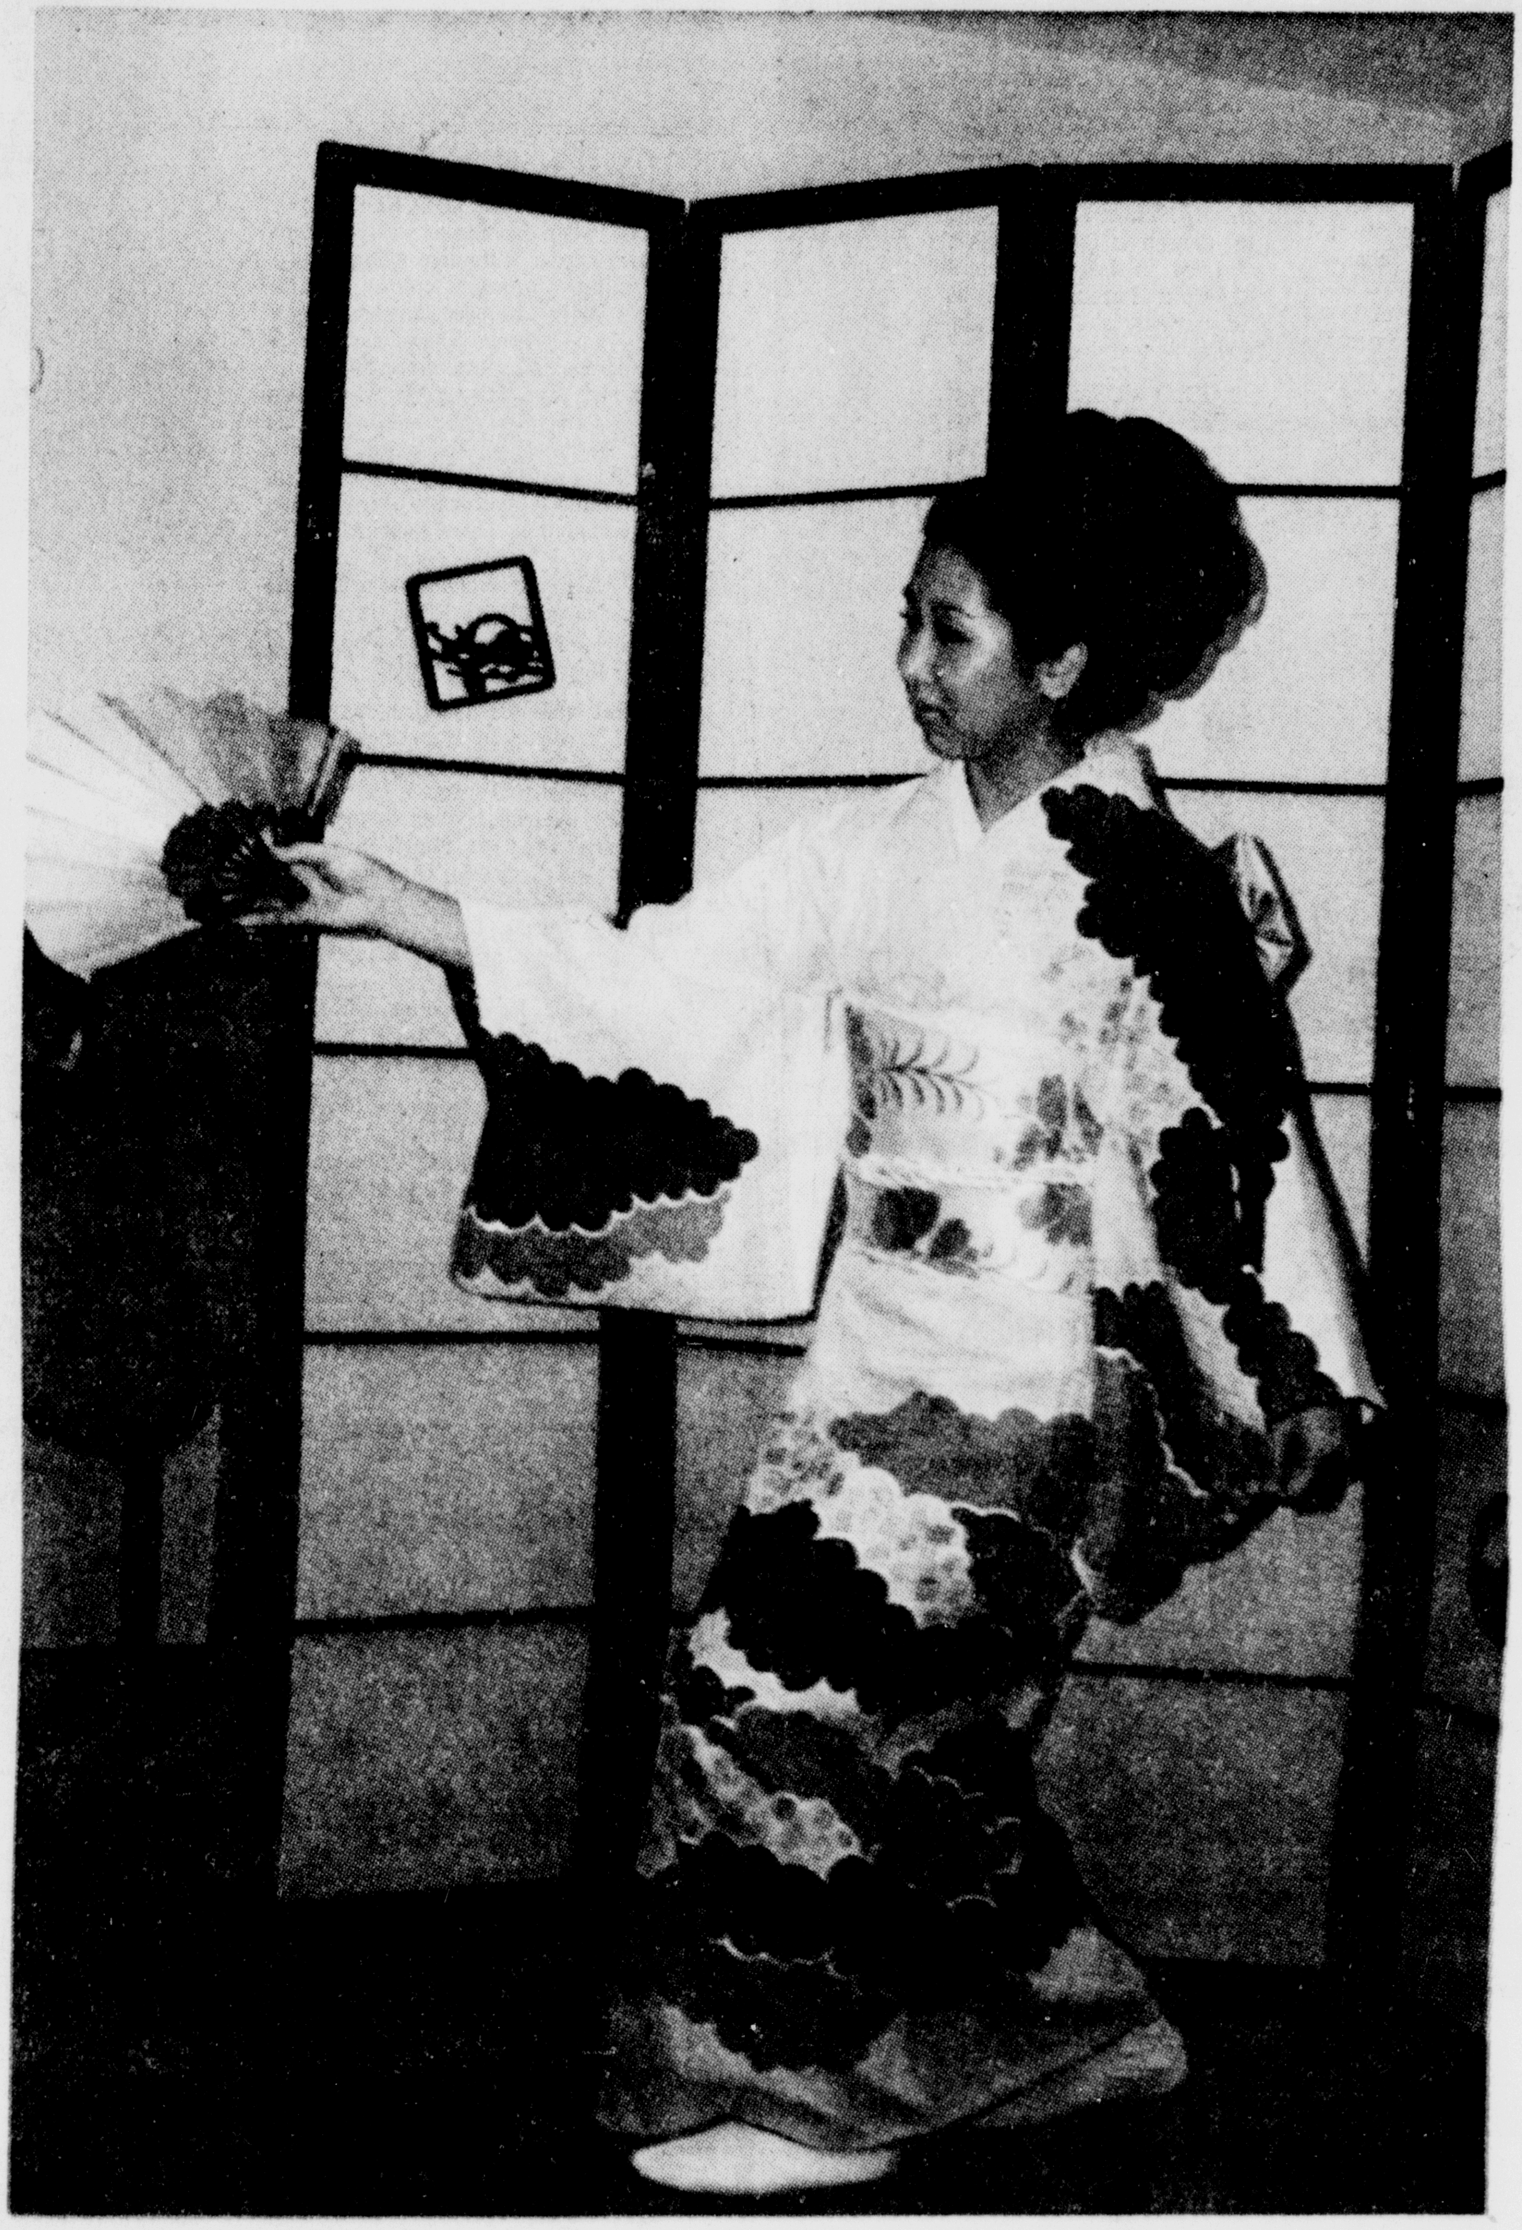
THE ELEMENTARY radicals that go to make up the characters of "Nakayoshi" mean, literally, "that which is good among men" — a concept covering the ground between friendship and goodwill that club members try to emulate. These are in the first two characters. The last three shown form a phonetic pronunciation of "club."



DEBRA SHIMAMOTO OF Larkspur, a student of 15 years in the Hanayagi Hidemi School of Dance in San Francisco and a third generation sansei who is a 19-year-old sophomore at the University of California at Berkeley, performs a classical dance, the Matsu no Midori, or Green Pine, for a Marin Nakayoshi Club party. Classical Japanese dance is a postured dance with slow body movements, performed with an expressionless face, and using fans, sprays of blossoms, flags and other accessories, depending on the story being interpreted. Many of the dances are adapted from 16th century Noh dramas. Debra will go to Japan this summer as a one-year exchange student to the International Christian University in Tokyo, and will continue her study of dance in Japan.

Radio's Dave Niles Works Hard To Build A Store Of Knowledge On Many Subjects

For a study in contrasts, consider Dave Niles, radio station KNBR personality and long-time Marin resident.

Part of Niles' appeal to KNBR listeners lies in his ability to merge into the background and not intrude upon the music over which he is presiding — when it pleases him to do so.

Yet the same "disc jockey" can be opinionated and controversial. One recent impulsive act attracted more negative mail to KNBR than any previous incident in the San Francisco station's history.

The active Dave Niles can be caught jogging alone in an empty high school football stadium at midnight. But at other times, the passive Dave Niles sits quietly for long periods in Yoga postures and exercises.

He's a top skier, who enjoys the solitude of paintings.

He's a backpacker who spends days alone in the wilds, but who also spends many hours in the midst of throngs, arranging and supervising special shows for teen-agers in various state rehabilitation facilities.

HIS RADIO CAREER began as a student at the University of Pacific in Stockton where Don Chamberlain, also to achieve fame as a San Francisco radio figure, persuaded him to take part in a radio production.

> "Being on the air isn't as easy as it sounds," says Dave Niles of KNBR. "Some people think I just sit back and listen to records. I don't even hear the records. My job really consists of doing something between the records."

"That triggered my interest in radio," Niles explains. "I promptly switched my major in radio. I decided that it was through radio I could satisfy my desires to act and to find self-expression, and perhaps find fame and fortune as well. It didn't seem as big a gamble as the theater."

It wasn't quite fame and fortune that Niles encountered after graduation. Rather it was a series of demanding jobs with various stations from Reno to Redding.

"TALK ABOUT JOB experience, at Redding I was simultaneously manager of the station, sales manager, copy writer, spot seller, music librarian and relief announcer," he says. Evidence of Niles' early radio "know how" is the fact that

For 96 Years, A San Rafael Resident

MARIE FRANCES PETER
Posing before the house where she was born in 1878

Miss Peter Saw Her City Grow

By MARY LEYDECKER

In 1878, when San Rafael was beginning to emerge from a frontier village into a fashionable summer colony, Marie Frances Peter was born in a house on C Street — a location where she was to spend the next 95 years of her life.

Only last year, Miss Peter was forced to go to a convalescent home because of failing health. At 96, she is San Rafael's oldest living native found by the centennial committee — and one whose life span has been only four years shorter than the city's.

Miss Peter, whose childhood arithmetic and classic schoolbooks show she went by the name of Mary, was the daughter of pioneer merchant Louis Peter.

PETER HAD ARRIVED in San Rafael in 1875, having been in business first in Los Angeles and San Francisco after leaving his native France in 1858.

A tailor by trade, Peter stayed in the old Central Hotel on Fourth Street between C and B streets while looking for place to establish his business. He then bought the Merchanics' Institute Building on C Street and converted it into both a shop and a home.

In the home, Peter and his wife reared their three children, Marie Frances, Louis J. and Harry.

DECIDING TO expand his business, Peter acquired the property at Fourth and C streets at a sheriff's auction, and in 1893, he built the two-story building that still stands there on its northeast corner.

Some years ago, Independent-Journal historian Florence Donnelly wrote that the new building "was one of the finest buildings in town and the offices were particularly in demand because of their splendid location and fine lighting."

Downstairs, Peter opened a dry goods store, branching out from the tailoring business, and the store continued to operate until the 1930s. Peter died at the age of 91 in 1932.

MISS PETER AND her brothers, one of whom later became an artist, while the other, Louis Jr., went into his father's business, grew up in the house behind the store, where they had been born.

Miss Peter went to the Fourth Street Grammar School, where a class picture shows her to have been a pretty little girl whose especially fancy lace collar almost certainly came from her father's store.

When she graduated from the new San Rafael High School, she was the only girl in a class of five, her family remembers her recounting.

(HER BROTHER Louis did not go to high school, his daughter, Marie Irwin said, because by the time the new school opened, he had worked in the family store for a time and considered himself, at 16, too old to go to high school.)

Pictures of Miss Peter as a young woman give some clue as to how she and her friends spent their days. A fading series of photos shows her as the middle of three young women, lifting their skirts almost to their knees in a moment of exuberance at a picnic at Phoenix Lake in Ross.

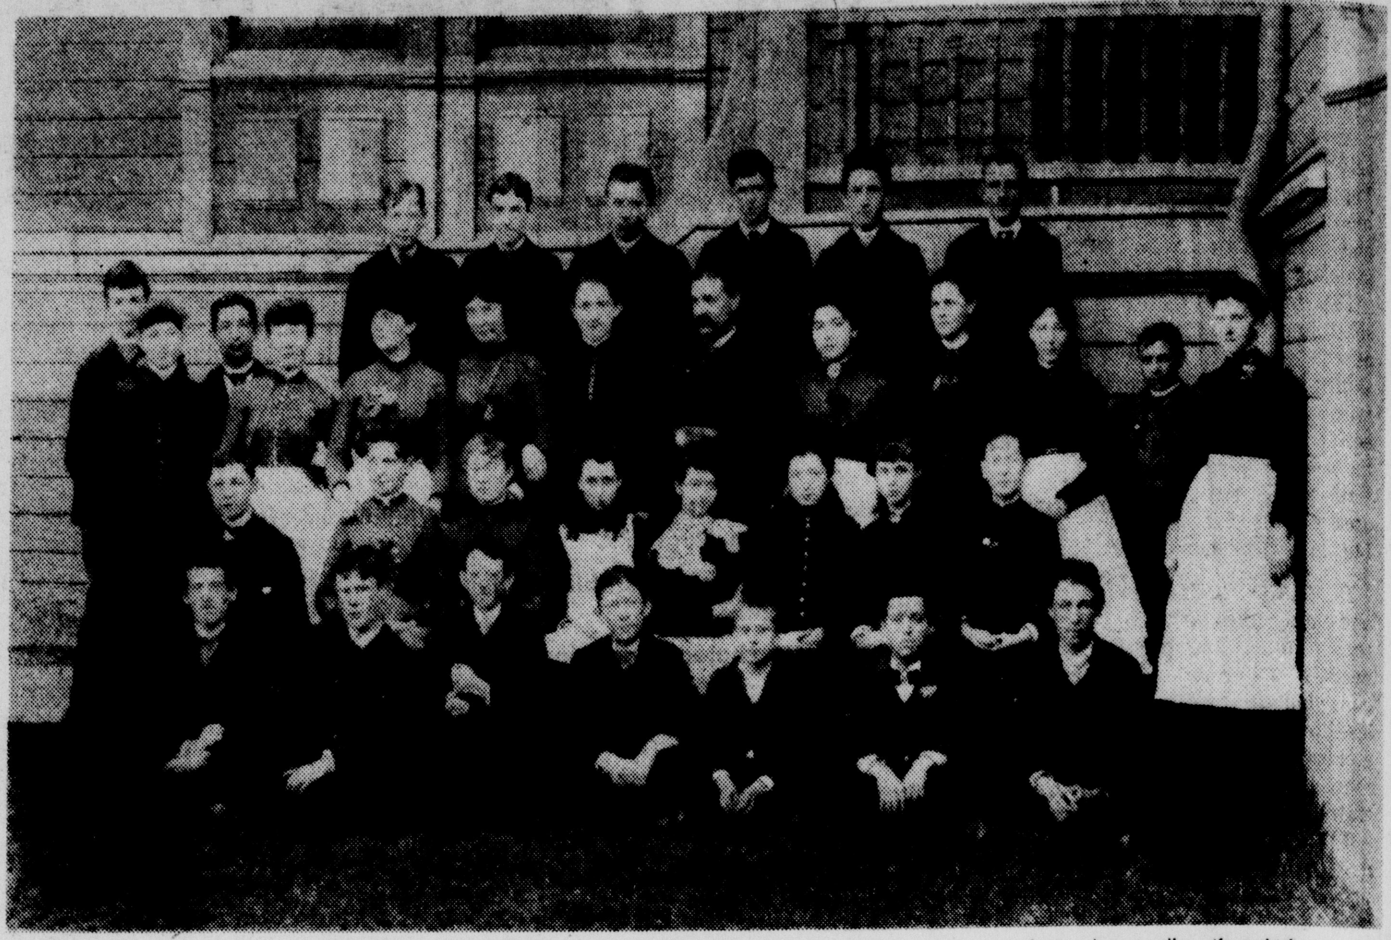
Later, Miss Peter, a fine seamstress, worked for a milliner in San Francisco, and at another time she commuted across the Bay to work in the San Francisco mint.

THROUGH THE years, as Miss Peter spent her long life busily occupied, her hometown changed drastically, but the family building at Fourth and C streets, now owned by Mrs. Irwin, remained an imposing structure. It now houses Romulus Restaurant and the Bath and Closet Shop on the first floor.

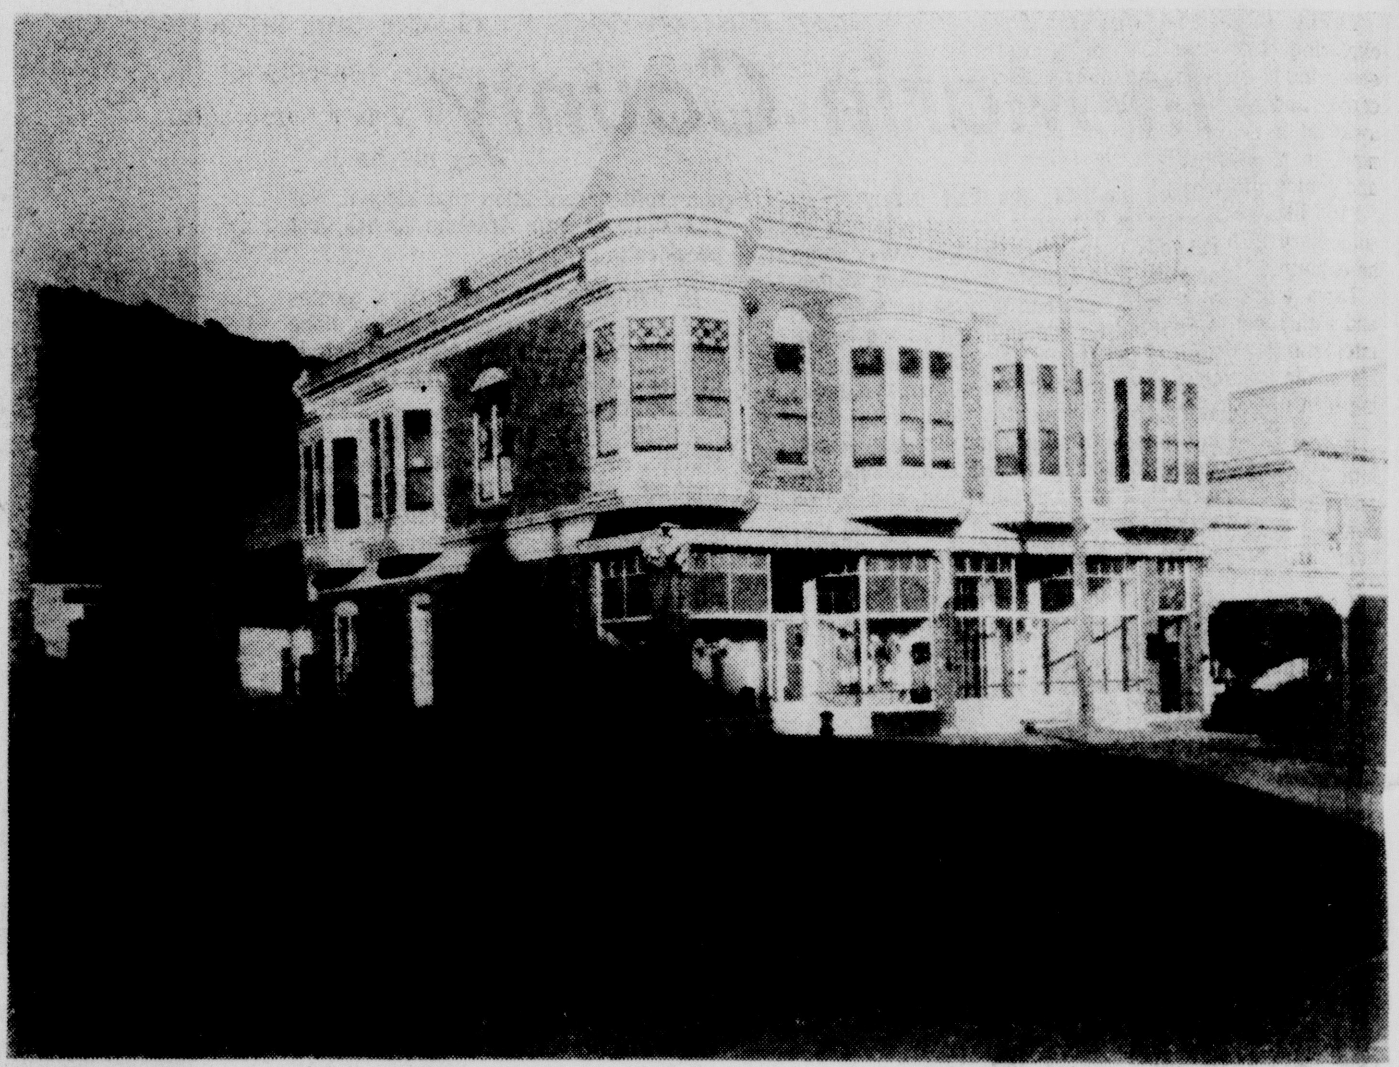
A few years ago Mrs. Irwin had the old house behind torn down, and built a new building in its place. It houses the Kitchen Shop on C Street. Upstairs, there are eight apartments in both the old and the new buildings.

The family is looking forward to watching the San Rafael Centennial Parade May 26 from the spot at Fourth and C that has been in the family for so long. The procession and pageantry will, to a large degree, be a tribute to families such as the Peters who helped to make San Rafael what it is.

Ill health may keep Miss Peter from an active role in the celebration, but as recently as a few weeks ago, "Auntie," as her family calls her, was eagerly looking forward to the Centennial of her beloved city that she had watched grow from a village.



YOUNG MARY PETER, as she called herself as a child, poses in a fancy lace collar (fourth from right, second row) in a group picture of pupils of the Fourth Street Grammar School, taken in the 1880s. At 96, Miss Peter has lived all her long life in her hometown of San Rafael, and was pronounced by the San Rafael Centennial Committee to be the city's oldest living native citizen.



THE PETER BUILDING at the corner of Fourth and C streets has been a landmark in San Rafael since it was built in 1893 by Louis Peter for his dry goods business. Upstairs, as shown in an early photo, were "fine offices" and behind the building on C Street was the house in which the Peter family lived. The gala San Rafael centennial celebration parade of May 26 will move past the historic old building from which the descendants of pioneer merchant Peter will watch the colorful proceedings.

A Marin Artist In Tune With The Sea

As if one with the sea, his primordial origins just below consciousness, Bob Tapia captures on canvas the many moods and shifting qualities of the oceans and bays with empathy and rare understanding possessed by few.

This insight into the character of the sea, almost inseparable from his own psyche, combined with the discipline of a skilled draftsman, has made the self-taught Marin County artist one of the better known living seascape painters in the world today.

His works now sell as rapidly as he can create them for Swanson Art Galleries Ltd. in San Francisco and Sausalito.

PERHAPS AMERICA'S most famous and most gifted artist of Mexican ancestry to date, the drive and desire to become a professional artist and to communicate in oils has been as relentless and continuing in Tapia as the eternal ebb and flow of the waves upon the California coast on which he concentrates.

This need ultimately led Bob Tapia to give up a successful career as a technical art director in the aerospace industry six years ago.

A prolific artist, he will often work on 10 to 15 canvases, doing two or three basic settings a day, returning later to complete them, creating and capturing the moods of the sea.

TAPIA HAS SPENT a number of years exploring the coastline of California, observing the ocean, the inlets with their eddies and swirls and the surf grinding away at massive rocks and cliffs. Even now, he must return to the ocean to sit and contemplate.

"It's like getting recharged. It is as if some natural force is drawing me back," he explains.

Tapia works in two styles, with brush and with pallette knife, "to keep his work interesting." He generally will alternate his media although many times combining both in a painting.

WHEN WORKING strictly with a pallette knife, he cuts away the colors in bits and pieces, working with colors wet on canvas, keeping the colors separate or combining them as he sees fit.

Even with the brush, he mixes his colors all on the canvas, which accounts for the spontaneous excitement and moods conveyed. Both these techniques prove equally appealing to Tapia's admirers and collectors.

With combinations of warm and cold colors, Tapia prefers to use the traditional light against dark to achieve the motion and drama he captures.

THE RESULTS are strong and realistic seascapes leaving no doubt in the viewer of identification with his haunting moods. His recent work tends to be more powerful, more dramatic, more awesome; and inspires a feeling of eternity.

The turbulence of stormy oceans communicates the sea's strongest personality; and this is a reflection, too, of the force within Tapia which has been the reason for his success at an early age in the art world.

"I have done some exceptional work in the past years," says the artist in his mid-thirties, with a soft spoken self-confidence. "But my work must get better every year. For this I strive."

EXTRAORDINARILY talanted and self-taught, Tapia began sketching and painting when in grammar school. In high school he was encouraged to develop this recognized talent, but financial strains forced him to work part-time in construction.

After graduation, Tapia desired to continue his education, but reluctantly had to succumb to financial pressure and worked on the assembly line for General Motors prior to joining the U.S. Army.

With the armed forces Tapia learned drafting and was stationed in Europe. There, he took advantage of the cultural opportunities and storehouse of activities available to him and spent his leaves traveling and visiting museums. His deep seated desire to work as an artist was reenforced.

AFTER HIS DISCHARGE and a brief stint back on the assembly line, Tapia decided to begin an art career the only way open to him. He entered the aerospace industry as a trainee artist.

Working day and night to master his trade, the first year he spent many hours and sometimes days working on his own time in order to learn. Within two years he was supervising publications and preparing advertising layouts.

At this peak time in the industry, jobs were plentiful and the workloads horrendous. Tapia put in as much as 80 to 100 hours a week and still found time to paint.

HIS HARD WORK and the skills he acquired through dedication to quality lead him to a successful career in which suddenly he was an administrator (art director) and at the top.

"It was time, now to develop my career on another level."

Tapia looked to his paintings which had been selling well in local galleries. Encouraged by the challenge thus presented, he gave up his rewarding career in industry to dedicate himself to working in the field of fine art and using oils as the medium by which he would be represented.

After many successful street shows up and down the coast of California, Tapia moved to the San Francisco Bay Area.

IN 1971, JACK Swanson of Swanson Art Galleries Ltd. contacted Bob Tapia, and he has represented the artist ever since.

The unrelenting drive that made Tapia successful in commercial art and his self discipline now serves him well as the oil painter. He works at his easel till he is so involved it takes him hours to unwind in the evening.

Tapia believes that the years of hard work as an engineering illustrator were good training in the disciplines of traditional skills.

Even now, however, the early days of seeking employment are vivid memories. Bob Tapia can recall being told that he "had talent but not enough experience" by a motion picture studio art director.

HE HEARD THE same story when looking for work in advertising agencies.

"I remember how fortunate I felt finally to just get an opportunity as an apprentice in an aerospace firm's art and drafting department; but even then, there was no way to move from one section to another, even though it was just across the room."

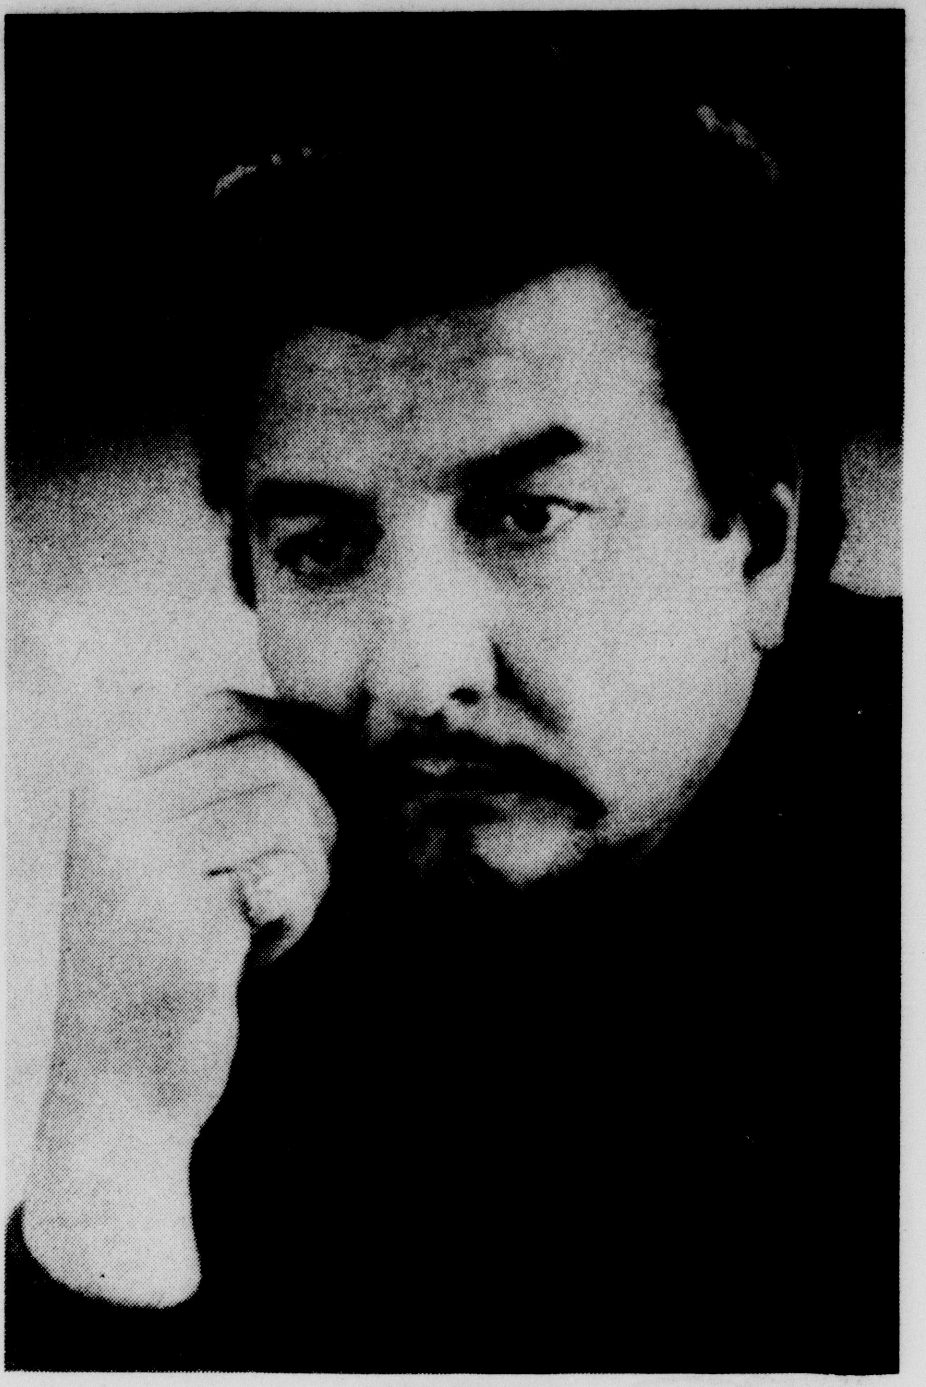
To learn other phases of illustration and drawing, Tapia had to move to another aerospace firm. That he should have ended up as a department supervisor responsible for all aspects of art, design, drafting, advertising and publications seems equally astonishing to Tapia in retrospect.

REFLECTING ON his direction in fine art, Tapia observes of himself and other artists:

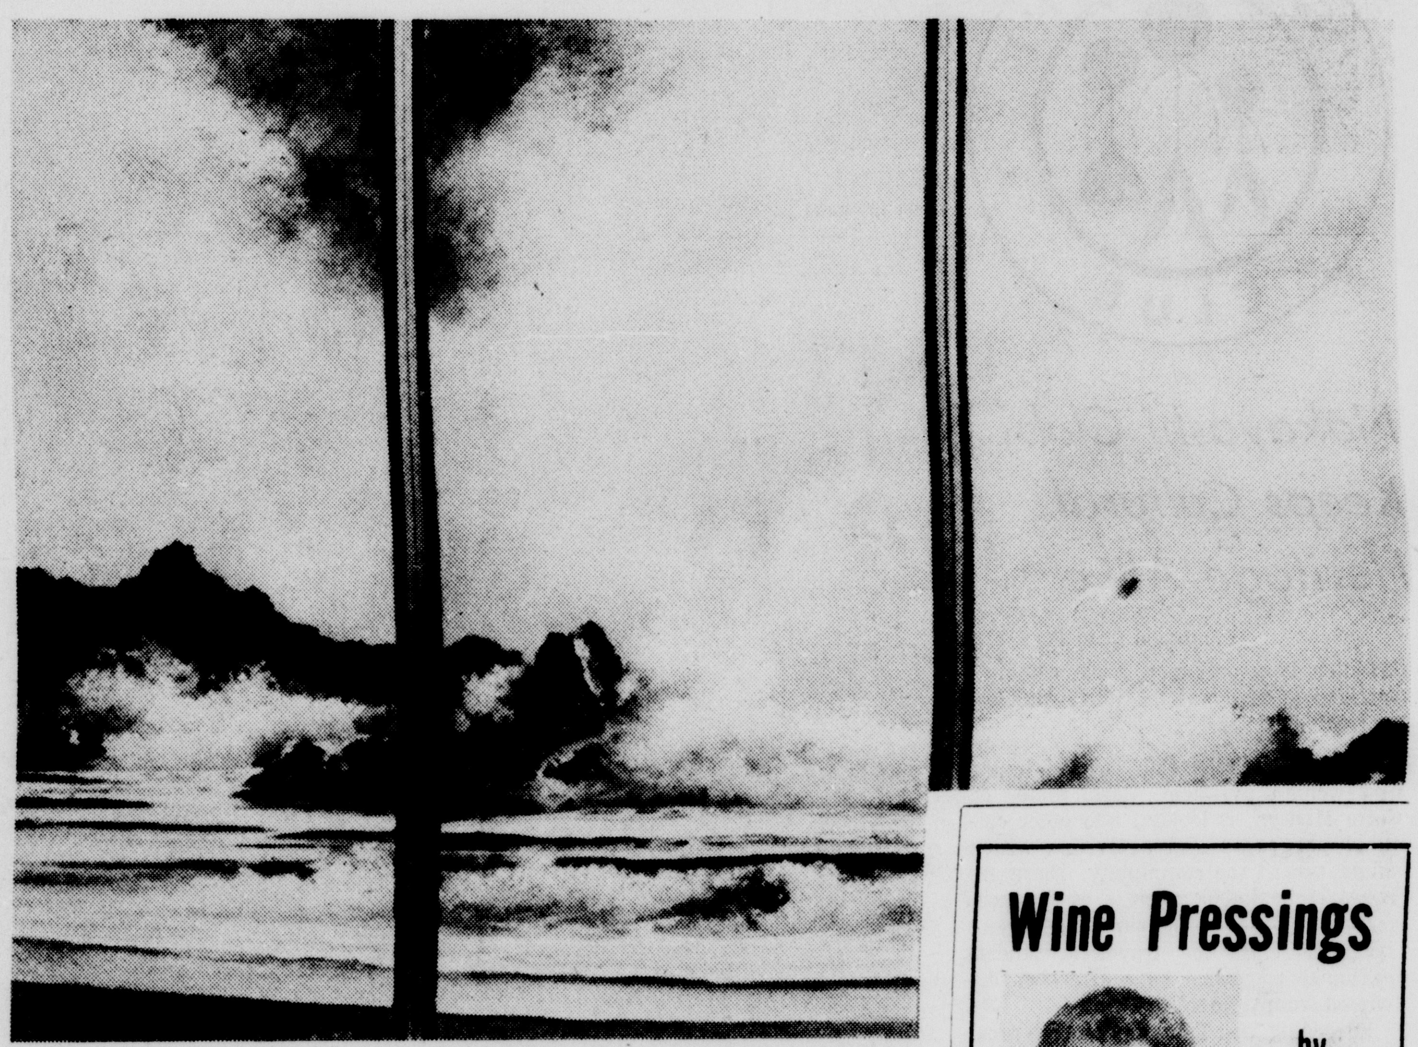
"Most successful artists concentrate on communicating the thing they love most in the best way they can. I do this in seascapes."

His message is certainly reaching others, and is acknowledged by his admirers in growing numbers.

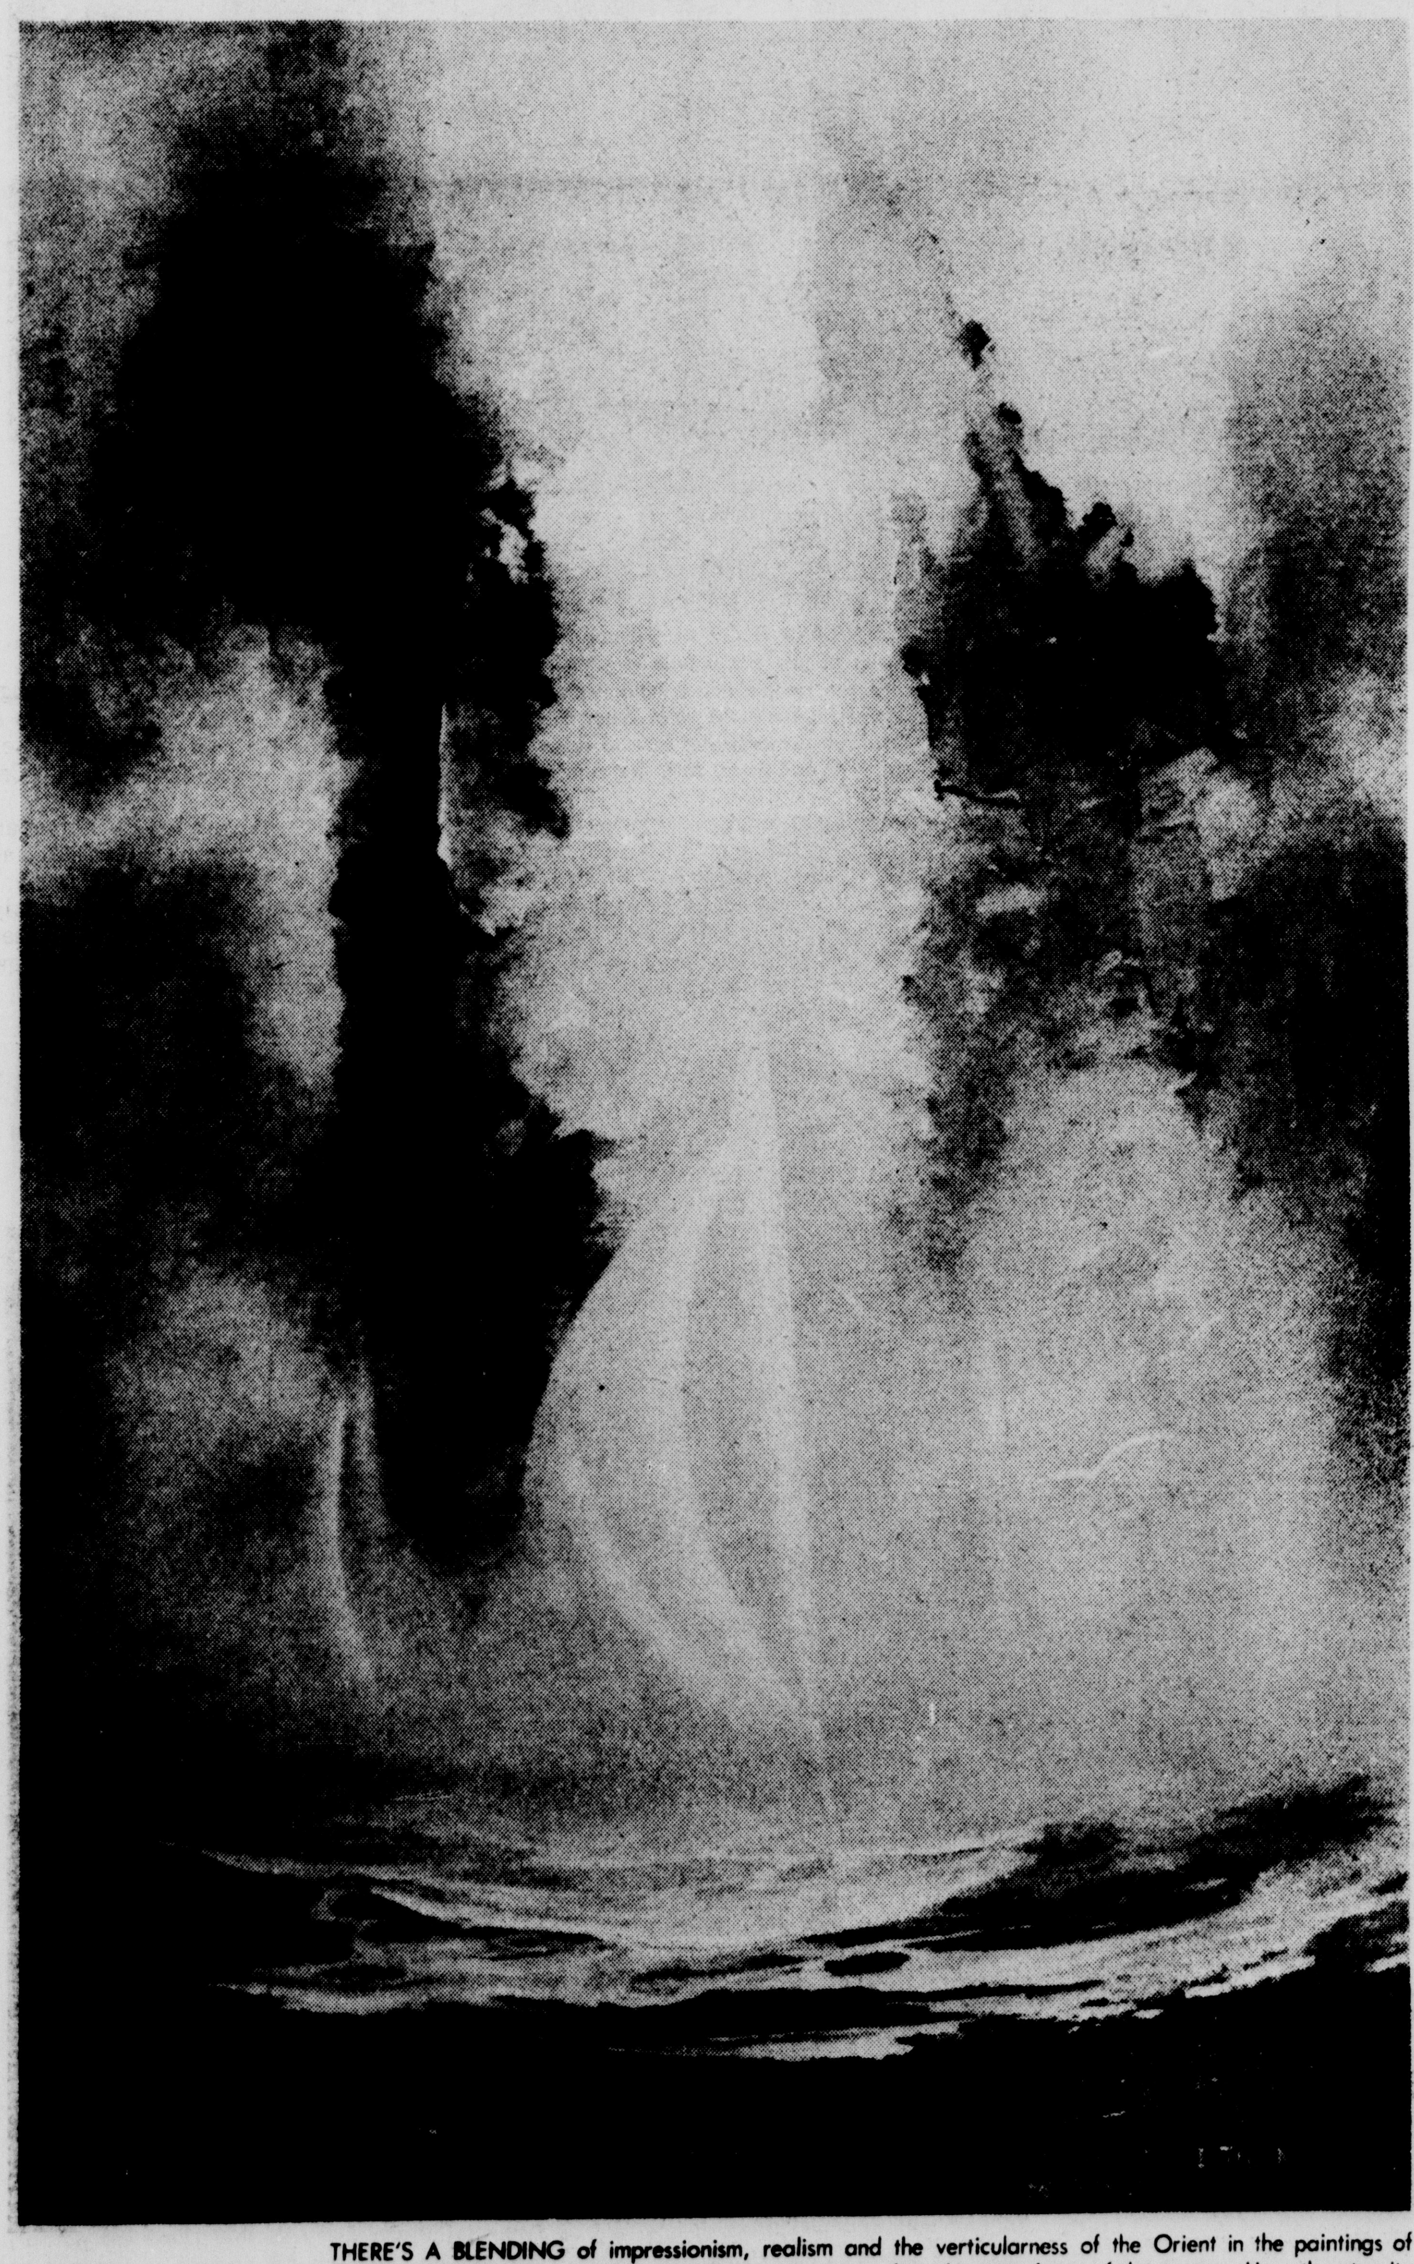
Busy artist Bob Tapia takes time from his seascapes to visit the ocean side and simply contemplate. "It's like getting recharged," he says. "It is as if some natural force is drawing me back."



ARTIST BOB TAPIA
There's an empathy with the oceans



ONE OF THE TRADEMARKS of Bob Tapia is the seascape, with the relentless, pounding surf, or at other times a tranquil lagoon, distributed in three panels, creating the illusion of a scene being viewed just outside a window. Tapia works in oils, and says:"Most successful artists concentrate on communicating the thing they love most in the best way they can. I do this in seascapes." His work has made him one of the best known painters in that field.



THERE'S A BLENDING of impressionism, realism and the verticularness of the Orient in the paintings of Bob Tapia, as in his seascapes he captures the many, fast-changing faces of the oceans. Here the eternity of the ocean, and its might, are reflected in horizontal movement, linked to, yet contrasted with fleecing clouds through the vertical sails of a transitory sailboat. Jack Swanson and his Swanson Art Galleries Ltd. of San Francisco and Sausalito represents the artist and sells the works as fast as he creates them.

Wine Pressings

ALFRED LOVI

Volumes have been written about the proper way to enjoy a fine wine, but I rather like the comment that was made by a French vineyardist from the Bordeaux region when he was asked how to appreciate the prestigious wine that is produced in his district. "Open your mouth," he replied, "and pour it down." Even though he was an expert wine taster, he saw no point in being stuffy about his favorite beverage.

Indeed, the only basic rule in wine drinking is to drink what you like - and in combination with any foods that please you. If you enjoy a particular wine, then it is a good wine for you and you should enjoy it to its fullest.

It's not that I want to imply that talking about wine is not valuable. I find that the more I learn about wine and the more I sample various wines, the more I am learning to appreciate the subtle nuances that wine drinking can offer.

It's just that I think that wine appreciation should never degenerate into a fussy pedantry where the taster feels so inhibited by external rules that he cannot enjoy the sensual experience of drinking wine. For wine is to be enjoyed. Or, as the crafty old sage Ben Franklin put it, "Wine is constant proof that God loves us and wants us to be happy."

Browsing through a large selection of the world's finest wines can also make a wine lover very happy. Just such a selection of wines can be found right here in San Rafael at THE VILLA WINE CELLAR at 2138 Fourth Street. 456-0566.

Working day and night to master his trade, the first year he spent many hours and sometimes days working on his own time in order to learn. Within two years he was supervising publications and preparing advertising layouts.

At this peak time in the industry, jobs were plentiful and the workloads horrendous. Tapia put in as much as 80 to 100 hours a week and still found time to paint.

HIS HARD WORK and the skills he acquired through dedication to quality lead him to a successful career in which suddenly he was an administrator (art director) and at the top.

"It was time, now to develop my career on another level."

Tapia looked to his paintings which had been selling well in local galleries. Encouraged by the challenge thus presented, he gave up his rewarding career in industry to dedicate himself to working in the field of fine art and using oils as the medium by which he would be represented.

After many successful street shows up and down the coast of California, Tapia moved to the San Francisco Bay Area.

IN 1971, JACK Swanson of Swanson Art Galleries Ltd. contacted Bob Tapia, and he has represented the artist ever since.

The unrelenting drive that made Tapia successful in commercial art and his self discipline now serves him well as the oil painter. He works at his easel till he is so involved it takes him hours to unwind in the evening.

Tapia believes that the years of hard work as an engineering illustrator were good training in the disciplines of traditional skills.

Even now, however, the early days of seeking employment are vivid memories. Bob Tapia can recall being told that he "had talent but not enough experience" by a motion picture studio art director.

HE HEARD THE same story when looking for work in advertising agencies.

"I remember how fortunate I felt finally to just get an opportunity as an apprentice in an aerospace firm's art and drafting department; but even then, there was no way to move from one section to another, even though it was just across the room."

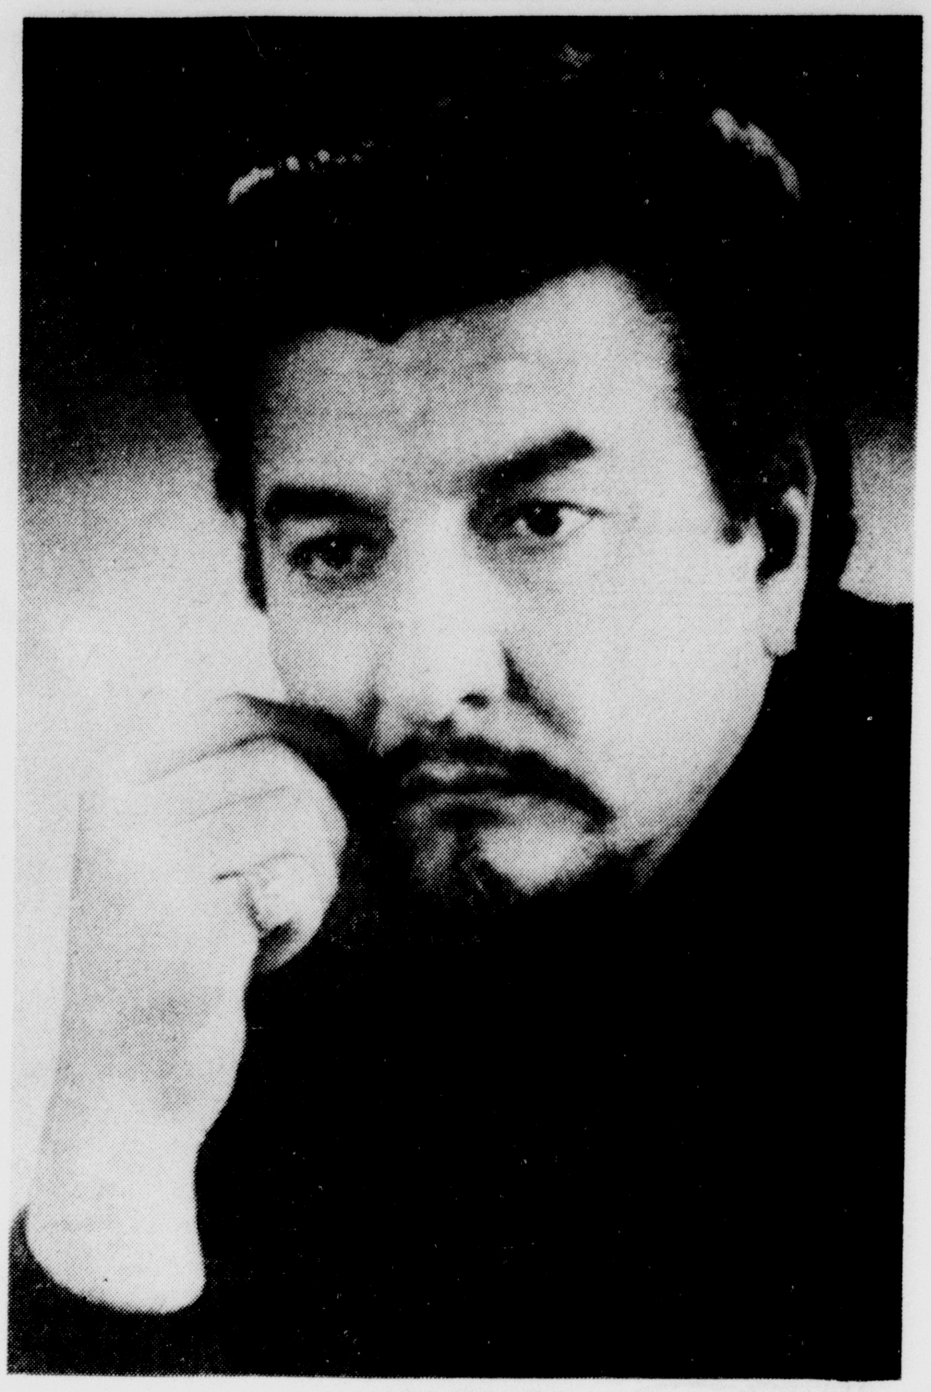
To learn other phases of illustration and drawing, Tapia had to move to another aerospace firm. That he should have ended up as a department supervisor responsible for all aspects of art, design, drafting, advertising and publications seems equally astonishing to Tapia in retrospect.

REFLECTING ON his direction in fine art, Tapia observes of himself and other artists:

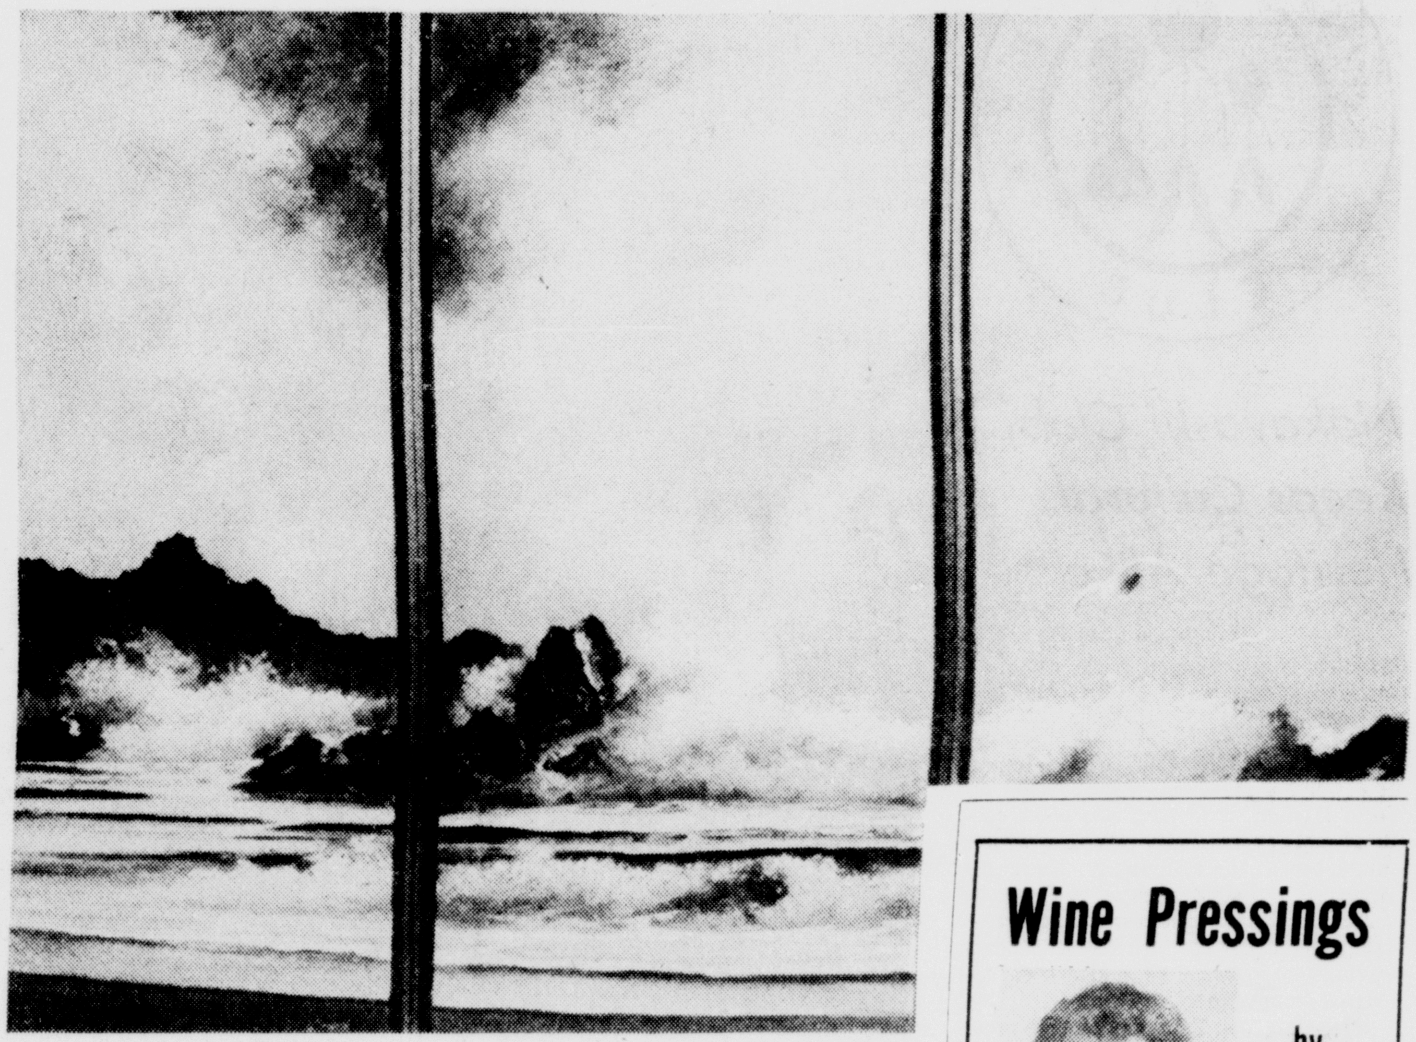
"Most successful artists concentrate on communicating the thing they love most in the best way they can. I do this in seascapes."

His message is certainly reaching others, and is acknowledged by his admirers in growing numbers.

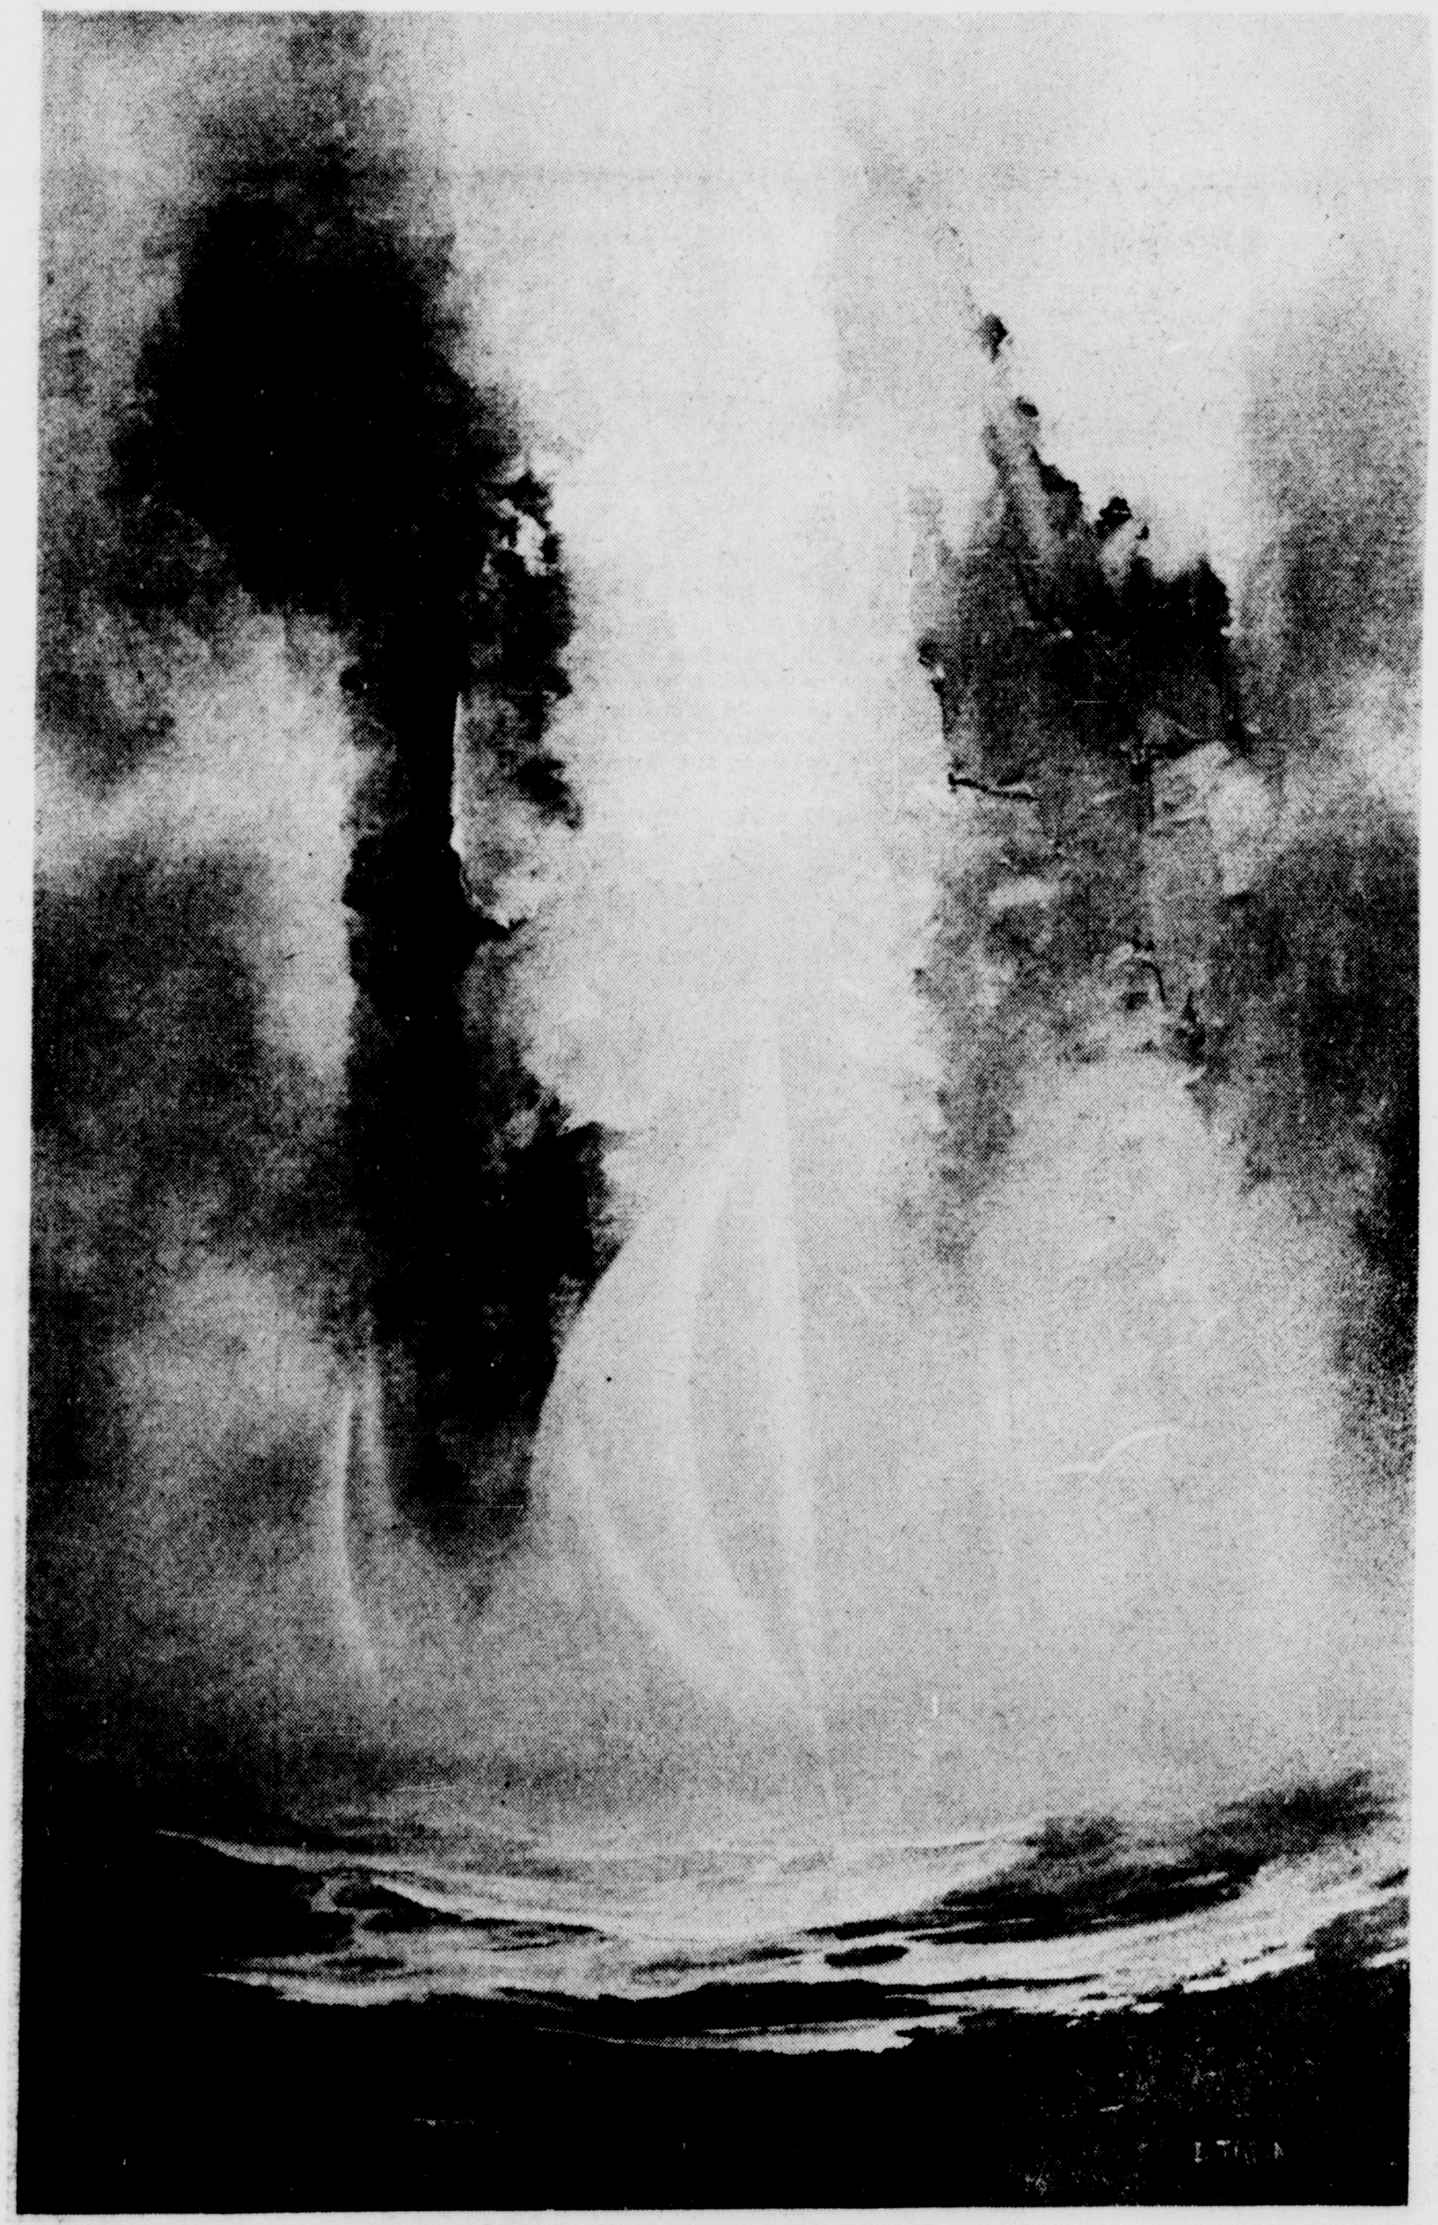
Busy artist Bob Tapia takes time from his seascapes to visit the ocean side and simply contemplate. "It's like getting recharged," he says. "It is as if some natural force is drawing me back."



ARTIST BOB TAPIA
There's an empathy with the oceans



ONE OF THE TRADEMARKS of Bob Tapia is the seascape, with the relentless, pounding surf, or at other times a tranquil lagoon, distributed in three panels, creating the illusion of a scene being viewed just outside a window. Tapia works in oils, and says:"Most successful artists concentrate on communicating the thing they love most in the best way they can. I do this in seascapes." His work has made him one of the best known painters in that field.



THERE'S A BLENDING of impressionism, realism and the verticularness of the Orient in the paintings of Bob Tapia, as in his seascapes he captures the many, fast-changing faces of the oceans. Here the eternity of the ocean, and its might, are reflected in horizontal movement, linked to, yet contrasted with fleecing clouds through the vertical sails of a transitory sailboat. Jack Swanson and his Swanson Art Galleries Ltd. of San Francisco and Sausalito represents the artist and sells the works as fast as he creates them.

Wine Pressings

by ALFRED LOVI

Volumes have been written about the proper way to enjoy a fine wine, but I rather like the comment that was made by a French vineyardist from the Bordeaux region when he was asked how to appreciate the prestigious wine that is produced in his district. "Open your mouth," he replied, "and pour it down." Even though he was an expert wine taster, he saw no point in being stuffy about his favorite beverage.

Indeed, the only basic rule in wine drinking is to drink what you like - and in combination with any foods that please you. If you enjoy a particular wine, then it is a good wine for you and you should enjoy it to its fullest.

It's not that I want to imply that talking about wine is not valuable. I find that the more I learn about wine and the more I sample various wines, the more I am learning to appreciate the subtle nuances that wine drinking can offer.

It's just that I think that wine appreciation should never degenerate into a fussy pedantry where the taster feels so inhibited by external rules that he cannot enjoy the sensual experience of drinking wine. For wine is to be enjoyed. Or, as the crafty old sage Ben Franklin put it, "Wine is constant proof that God loves us and wants us to be happy."

Browsing through a large selection of the world's finest wines can also make a wine lover very happy. Just such a selection of wines can be found right here in San Rafael at THE VILLA WINE CELLAR at 2138 Fourth Street. 456-0566.

OMOCHI-TSUKI, or the making of mochi, a sweet rice cake, is a traditional New Year activity in Japan that the Marin Nakajoshi Club also enjoys at its annual New Year celebration. Hawaiian luau or Japan Night celebration held annually at the Corte Madera Recreation Center.

THIS YEAR THE club, headed by its first woman president, Carol Staley of Corte Madera, is looking into other cultural programs and activities which might benefit the community. There are hopes of beginning a class in Japanese culture at College of Marin and perhaps a language class for travelers. Student exchange programs have also been discussed from time to time.

Succeding Wat Takeshita as club presidents have been Akira Otsuka, George Murata, Herb Okubo and Harry Yahata of San Rafael; Roy Okubara of Mill Valley; Hardie Hnda, Masao Segi, James Hirai and Nob Kuwatani of Tiburon; Kiyoshi Kawahata of Corte Madera; Takeshi Velasco and Shoji Shimamoto of Larkspur; Dean Goins of Novato, and Ken Ogata of San Anselmo.

MRS. HARRY CONNICK of Terra Linda performs on the koto or Japanese harp. This zither-like instrument has been enjoyed in Japan for centuries. Eight feet long, with 13 strings, the instrument requires many long years of practice to master.

Members of the club now number around 75 families, primarily Nisei (second generation) but the Issei pioneers (first generation Japanese who migrated from Japan years ago as adventurous young men and women) are still active. They are honored yearly by the club at a dinner or outing of some sort.

As the Sansei (third generation) grow to adulthood and begin to take a more active role in club policies, the emphasis may shift again to best suit their needs. Bu the Nakayoshi Club — as it name implies — will always warmly welcome anyone of any race who is interested in forming lasting friendships with people of Japanese ancestry and learning about their culture.

THE WEARING OF the kimono is still a familiar sight in Japan, although even there young people are unable to dress themselves or tie the obi or large sash. In America very few people are familiar with the multi-layers of undergarments. and ties that are required before the final outer kimono and obi are secured. Mrs. Bob Crossler of Petaluma demonstrates how to dress in a kimono and tie the four-and-a-half-yards long obi, with her sister, Mrs. Tadashi Kurosaka of San Frnacisco, serving as her model.

KNBR Radio Personality Dave Niles Holds Forth As Independent Thinker

although the Redding station was located in one of the most crowded radio markets in America — six stations in a town of 15,000 — the station made money.

Niles, however, was anxious to spend more time on the air. He joined a Sacramento station and then was offered a job in San Francisco. With various San Francisco stations he won recognition as one of that city's more prominent broadcasting personalities and was involved in a variety of interviews with subjects ranging from Eleanor Roosevelt to the Three Stooges.

About those interviews, he adds, "Peter Fonda had the quickest mind; Rudy Vallee was the most vain."

"BEING ON THE air isn't as easy as it sounds," he adds. "Some people think I just sit back and listen to records. I don't even hear the records most of the time. My job really consists of doing something between the records. While the music is on, I'm thinking of what I'm going to do next — besides the routine stuff such as commercials, weather, time checks and all the expected details.

"It's all those little comments and observations, bits of entertainment that, when properly mixed, make for a good show."

It is exactly those "bits of extras" that have brought Niles such popularity. At various times he has been involved with such an unusual happening as having listeners send in bits to be pieced together into a novel. While done in humor, it attracted thousands of submissions and even an official letter from Little Brown publishers saying they would like to see the book when completed.

AT ONE TIME he opened his program with a lot of wild sounds, and this led to a "Tarzan yell "contest with listeners throughout the state calling in and giving their versions of the Tarzan yell over the telephone (which, in turn, led to a Tarzan film festival).

On the serious side, there was a head-on crash with the Hell's Angels.

"They had beaten a man senseless and I called them a bunch of cowards," he relates. They threatened me. We did a series of interviews with various leaders of the group. I even carried a gun for a brief time because I didn't particularly like the idea of having motorcycle tracks running up my back as a permanent adornment."

Niles, whose missionary parents gave him a solid background of many interests, still finds time for countless away-from-the mike- activities.

He recently competed in the Bear Valley Pro-Am Ski Classic with actor Lloyd Bridges. The ski races offered some of the country's finest professional skiers and a variety of celebrities. Niles placed second.

"I TRY TO SKI 30 or 40 days a year and would rather be on skis than eat or sleep," he says. It is as if you were a bird. You get the sensation of flying. You feel free to sweep down, carving big round turns, under perfect control but at high speed."

When he gets off the air at midnight, Niles finds time to run in a Marin stadium.

"I don't particularly like running," he adds, "but I do get satisfaction from maintaining a training condition. It is amazing more people don't take up running. The minimum one must run in order to maintain the training condition is two miles, three times a week.

"All you invest, then, is 48 minutes a week to keep in shape."

"I BECAME INTERESTED in transcendental meditation about two years ago when I read an article in Scientific American," Niles continues, "and now I spend 20 minutes a day in meditation. You are in a state of restful alertness and gradually transcend the limitations of time and space as you achieve greater awareness."

Into his crowded schedule he also finds time to hike the Trinity Alps of Northern California on backpacking treks; enjoys painting ("I guess it runs in the family. My grandmother was a good painter; my sister paints and I always was able to draw,") and his paintings have been on exhibit at a Union Street gallery in San Fancisco; reads constantly.

As he explains, "I even find myself reading the golf column and I haven't played golf in years."

He reads three newspapers a day, countless magazinee and books. After his nightly program, after his late nightly run, Niles often reads until as late as 4 a.m.

"READING IS important to my work," he says. "You can't spew out material five hours a day, 25 hours a week, and not put something back. You deplete your resources. There must be constant input.

"A good radio entertainer should know at least a little bit about almost every subject. You can bet there is a listener out there who knows, and you might be able to fool the majority of listeners, if you are a clever fake, but that one guy will nail you every time."

Niles and his young and pretty blonde wife Judy live in the woods at the foot of Mount Tamalpais.

"I can take off from our yard and walk clear to the top of the mountain without running into another house."

THE HOUSE IS a kind of cross between a ranch home and a hunting lodge with lots of wood — redwood outside and pecky cedar inside — and with massive beams and a fireplace of cobblestones taken from the streets of San Francisco.

Niles' only son, Kelly, now 14, was serious and permanently hurt in an accident that happened in 1970 when he was struck in the temple by another boy. This resulted in the tearing of an artery in the region of the temple and cranial bleeding that caused pressure on the brain. Kelly can move his eyes and shift his head to the left — only. His intelligence is unimparied, so he is quite aware of what has happened although he is both paralyzed and mute.

"He is an amazing kid," Nles said. "I've never known anyone so courageous. He's gone through and is going through a hell most of us can't even imagine. Six weeks in a coma, a year and a half in hospitals, operations on both hands and both feet, his entire spine fused with a metal rod inserted, all the while at the mercy of his attendants. Not being able to express himself, to ask for food or drink, to say the food is too hot or too cold, to complain of pain or boredom or fear. He must wait until someone asks him if he wants this or that. He can't initiate any kind of request . . ."

AND YET THROUGH this, Kelly usually has a smile.

As Niles proudly states, "He is a truly great man if a 14-year-old may be considered a man. It has been very hard for us, but when I begin to feel sorry for myself I remind myself that if Kelly can take it, I certainly have nothing to complain about. And I've learned that more important than the event itself is how one reacts to the event. What has happened cannot be undone but Kelly does need a father and so I must not go to pieces — but remain strong and help Kelly all that I can."

It is the many interests of Dave Niles that recently prompted KNBR program manager Ron Fell to describe him as, "The most independent thinker in the local radio market."

HIS INDEPENDENT thinking was what resulted in all those negative letters to KNBR.

Tiburon's Carter B. Smith, another KNBR personality, carefully nursed a plant he named Charlene back to health and would describe on the air the plant's daily improved appearance. Late one night, when Nles was trying to see the studio clock and the plant was in the way, he clipped off a few leaves with a devil-like laugh that went out over the air. To illustrate that he truly had no ill feelings for the plant, when KNBR staged a three-hour parade in Pleasanton recently, Niles was spotted in a float proudly carrying Charlene.

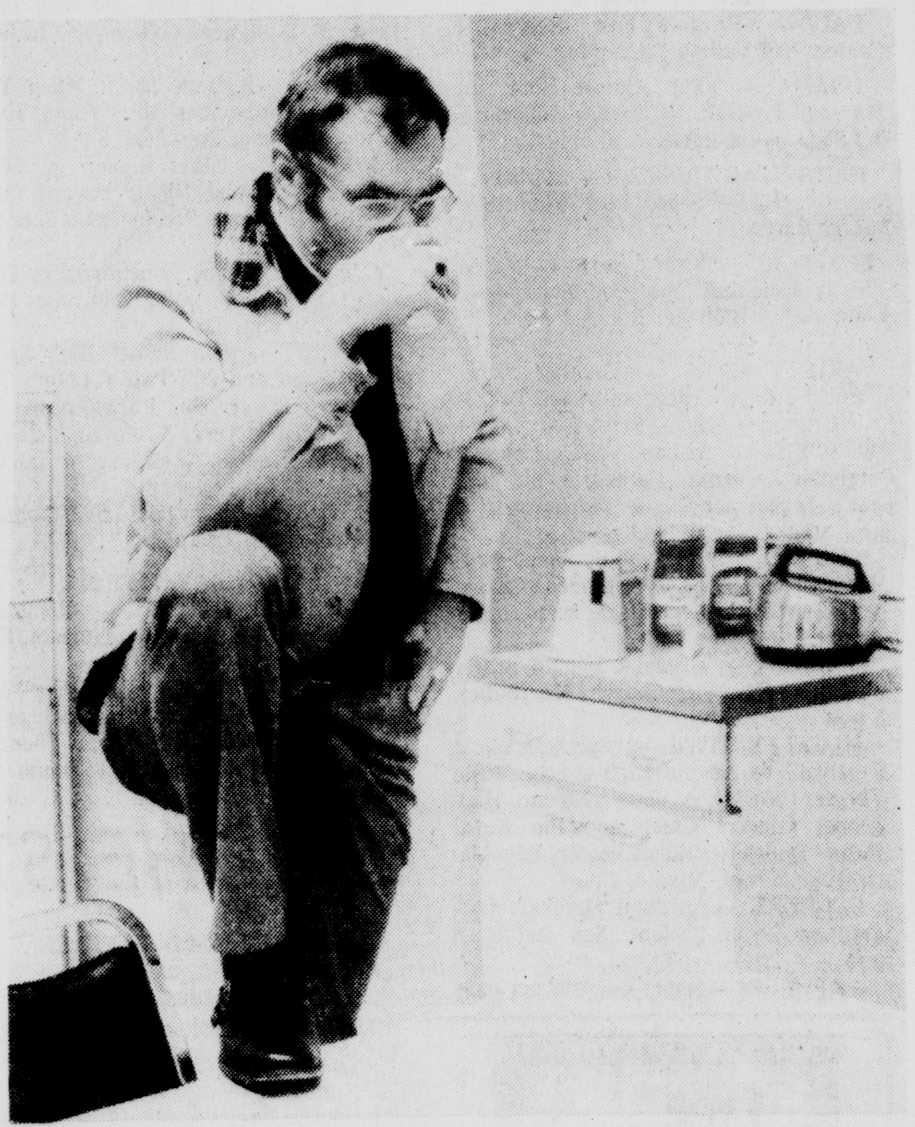
It attracted tremendous applause from among the thousands who viewed the parade, and regained Niles the good graces of plant-lovers.

Niles sums up his own work. "This business gives you an opportunity to see your relationship in the universe; we can express ourselves in terms of ideas, whether serious or light. We react a lot to our listeners and always try to entertain and amuse."

He is heard on KNBR, 680 on the dial, Monday through Friday from 7 p.m. till midnight.

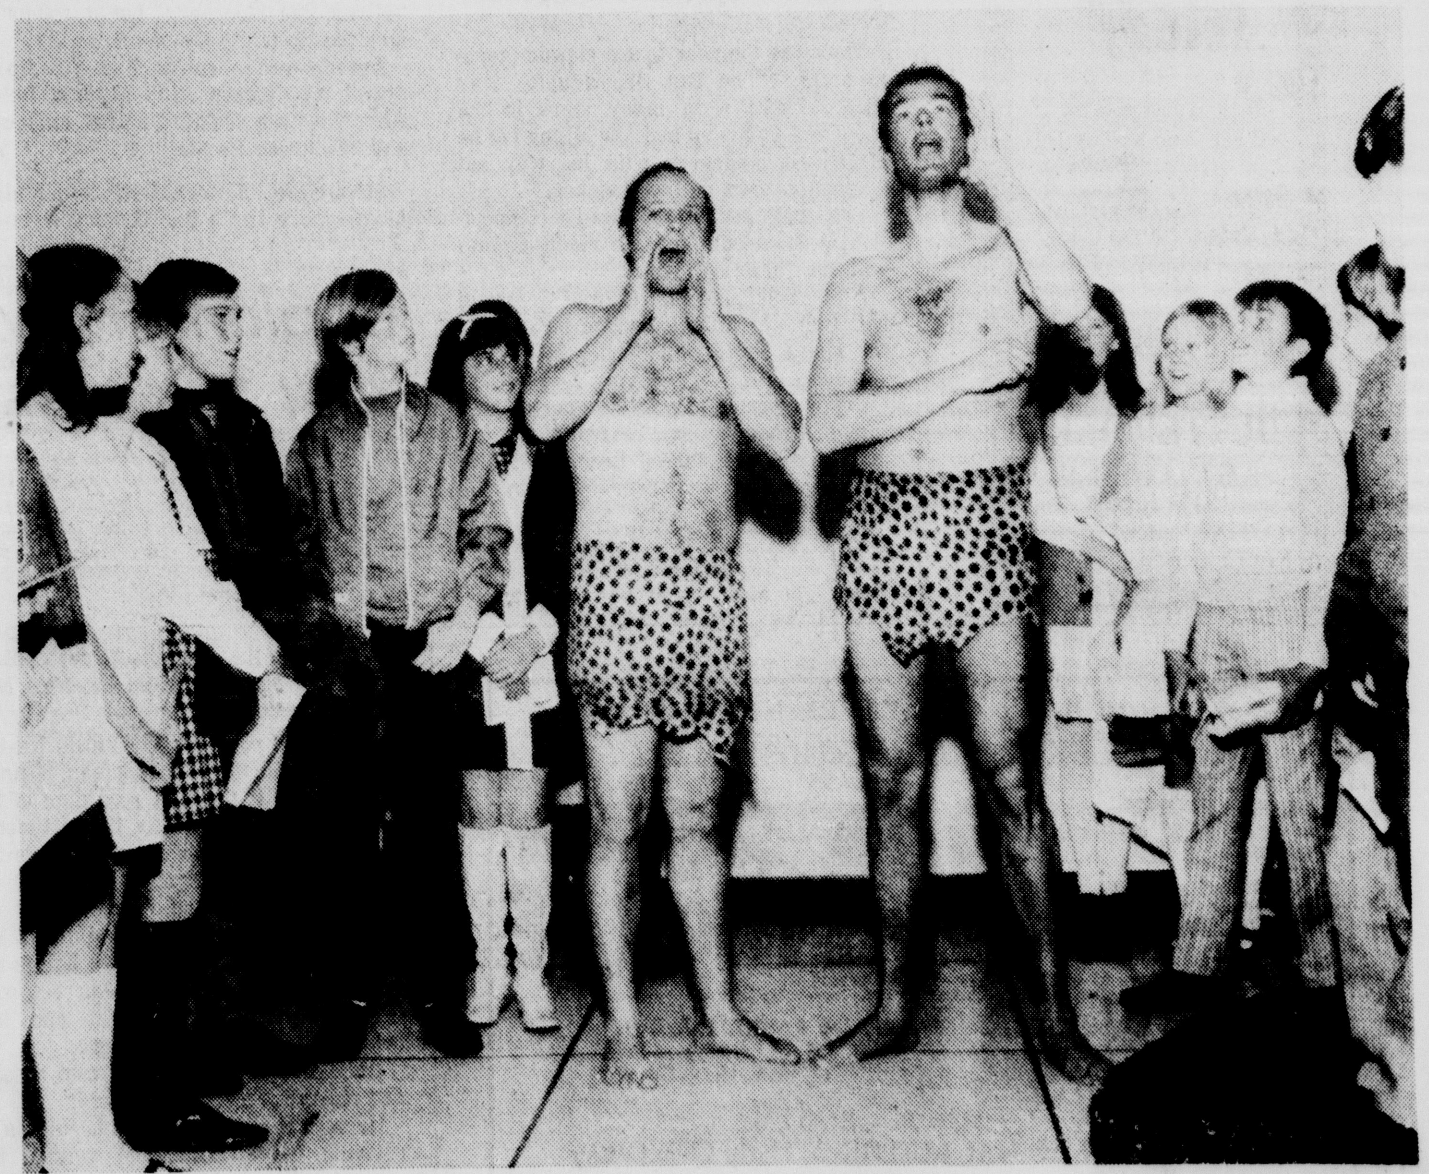
ABOUT TO GO ON THE AIR for his week night 7 p.m. till midnight stint as radio station KNBR's host, Dave Niles makes his selection of his recordings for the evening. Niles, a Marin resident, is a veteran of Bay Area broadcasting who has built up a solid listening audience with his independent thinking and diversity of interests.

MARIN LIVING



IT IS GETTING late and night and KNBR's Dave Niles is nearing his midnight quitting hour at the mike. Before finishing his show, he pauses to refresh himself with a cup of coffee, while a record spins. His real work, says Niles, is done between records.

THE STUDIO CORRIDORS at radio station KNBR are empty and lonely looking as Dave Niles completes his five hours as the station's week night host personality and departs for home. But enroute to his home at the foot of Mount Tamalpais in Marin, he will often stop off at a high school athletic field to do some of the running that helps him to stay in top physical condition. He's also an ardent skier and hiker.



ONE OF THE SUCCESSFUL "gag" promotions staged by inventive Dave Niles to publicize his KNBR radio show was a Tarzan yell contest. At right, he matches yells with a hopeful, both appropriately clad for the occasion. Some young spectators seem to find the results more amusing than bloodcurdling.

ON THE STEREO SCENE: Best Of Cab

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Cab Calloway is one of those great stars of show business who became an overnight sensation around the country because he had something unusual to offer.

Calloway was well known around New York in the late 1920s because of his performances at the Cotton Club, but it was not until 1931 that his fame stretched west of the Hudson River to the Pacific Ocean.

That was the year that a classic movie musical, "The Big Broadcast," was made. There were many stars in the show and Calloway had low billing but he electrified audiences with his way out singing on "Minnie the Moocher."

The song itself, a Calloway composition, was melodic but Cab made it jump with his "hi de ho" lyrics.

It has been said that George Gershwin had Calloway in mind when he created the character, Sportin' Life, in "Porgy and Bess."

Calloway later played the Sportin' Life role on Broadway in a revival of "Porgy and Bess" that starred Leontyne Price, stopping the show at every performance with "It Ain't Necessarily So."

Some of Cab's better songs may be heard on "Hi De Ho Man" (Columbia G 32593). The most recent recordings in this collection were made in 1947 and one of them, "Nagasaki," dates back to 1935. Thus, it is interesting to study the subtle changes in styles over a 12-year period.

Calloway's two hit songs from "The Big Broadcast" — "Minnie the Moocher" and "St. James Infirmary" — are featured in this two-record album. The session wouldn't be complete without them, and Calloway has always claimed that this 1942 recording was his best "Minnie the Moocher," but it seems to lack the zip of the movie original.

Among other songs are "Jumpin' Jive," "A Chicken Ain't Nothing But a Bird," — "Nagasaki," "I want to Rock" and "Calloway Boogie."

SINGER'S SPOTLIGHT — Melba Montgomery has a fine country style on "No Charge" (Elektra EKS 75079), an album based around her hit song of the same name. Melba's voice is soothing to the point that it gives the listener a feeling of lassitude. Songs include "My Sure Feel Good Sure Feels Fine," "How Are Things in Tulsa," "Hickman Country Blues," "I Can't Move No Mountain" and "Stay Till I Don't Love You Anymore."

DOWN MEMORY LANE — "Original Early Top 40 Hits" (Paramount PAS 1013) should evoke some nostalgic memories of those who grew up in the Eisenhower years. Among the songs are "Love Letters in the Sand" by Pat Boone, "The Green Door" by Jim Lowe, "Melody of Love" by Billy Vaughn, "Deck of Cards" by Wink Martindale, and "Transfusion" by Nervous Norvus.

Copland Plays Copland— And The Listening Is Fine

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

Aaron Copland's music needs no introduction. With justification there has been plenty of it both in the concert hall and on records for some time.

But two new records merit mention.

Both are in the Coumbia Modern Music Series and are of Copland directing and performing Copland.

On one he conducts the music for the complete ballet of "Appalchian Spring" (M 32736). It is the first recording of his original version scored for 13 instruments rather than the version usually recorded with a larger orchestra.

Copland says on the jacket that he scored the work for 13 instruments because of the limited size of the hall in the Library of Congress. It was commissioned for Martha Graham and her company to be performed there.

Only later did he make it into a suite and rescore it for full orchestra.

He says that he had some hesitation in reviving the 13-instrument version because he thought it might sound too thin. But he was persuaded and came to the conclusion that he was right to do so.

I can only agree. It has a quality and a sound of its own that is personal and moving.

A fascinating bonus with the record is a smaller eight-inch disc of Copland rehearsing the players for the recording along with his comments and instructions.

The second Copland record (M32737) has him at the piano playing his sonatas for violin and piano with Isaac Sterm on one side and playing the duo for flute and piano with flutist Elaine Shaffer on the other. Side two also has the short "Nonet for Strings."

They come for widely separated periods — the sonata for violin and piano composed in 1942-43 — in what Copland calls his "plain" period of the early 1940s, the little performed nonet composed in 1960 and the duo composed in 1970-71.

RECOMMENDED: Geza Anda playing and directing the Mozart piano concertos 3, 4 and 5 with the Camerata Academica des Salzubruger Mozarteums (DG 2530330). This is another record of three early concertos in Anda's project of recording all of them.

Carry a bit of Paris
Around in your heart —
Plan now, if you can,
To visit the Holy Land.
Don't toss away
A single day —
Life is yours
To use in part
For loving others —
And remembering mothers.

I DO NOT CARE FOR UNISEX

I think the Lord invented sex
To tease, to comfort and to vex.
Let's not disturb His noble plan
Of this is woman, that is man.
The world's already too complex
To furthermore our minds perplex
With a half-baked thing like unisex!

ON THE STEREO SCENE: Best Of Cab

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Cab Calloway is one of those great stars of show business who became an overnight sensation around the country because he had something unusual to offer.

Calloway was well known around New York in the late 1920s because of his performances at the Cotton Club, but it was not until 1931 that his fame stretched west of the Hudson River to the Pacific Ocean.

That was the year that a classic movie musical, "The Big Broadcast," was made. There were many stars in the show and Calloway had low billing but he electrified audiences with his way out singing on "Minnie the Moocher."

The song itself, a Calloway composition, was melodic but Cab made it jump with his "hi de ho" lyrics.

It has been said that George Gershwin had Calloway in mind when he created the character, Sportin' Life, in "Porgy and Bess."

Calloway later played the Sportin' Life role on Broadway in a revival of "Porgy and Bess" that starred Leontyne Price, stopping the show at every performance with "It Ain't Necessarily So."

Some of Cab's better songs may be heard on "Hi De Ho Man" (Columbia G 32593). The most recent recordings in this collection were made in 1947 and one of them, "Nagasaki," dates back to 1935. Thus, it is interesting to study the subtle changes in styles over a 12-year period.

Calloway's two hit songs from "The Big Broadcast" — "Minnie the Moocher" and "St. James Infirmary" — are featured in this two-record album. The session wouldn't be complete without them, and Calloway has always claimed that this 1942 recording was his best "Minnie the Moocher," but it seems to lack the zip of the movie original.

Among other songs are "Jumpin' Jive," "A Chicken Ain't Nothing But a Bird," — "Nagasaki," "I want to Rock" and "Calloway Boogie."

SINGER'S SPOTLIGHT — Melba Montgomery has a fine country style on "No Charge" (Elektra EKS 75079), an album based around her hit song of the same name. Melba's voice is soothing to the point that it gives the listener a feeling of lassitude. Songs include "My Sure Feel Good Sure Feels Fine," "How Are Things in Tulsa," "Hickman Country Blues," "I Can't Move No Mountain" and "Stay Till I Don't Love You Anymore."

DOWN MEMORY LANE — "Original Early Top 40 Hits" (Paramount PAS 1013) should evoke some nostalgic memories of those who grew up in the Eisenhower years. Among the songs are "Love Letters in the Sand" by Pat Boone, "The Green Door" by Jim Lowe, "Melody of Love" by Billy Vaughn, "Deck of Cards" by Wink Martindale, and "Transfusion" by Nervous Norvus.

Copland Plays Copland— And The Listening Is Fine

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

Aaron Copland's music needs no introduction. With justification there has been plenty of it both in the concert hall and on records for some time.

But two new records merit mention.

Both are in the Coumbia Modern Music Series and are of Copland directing and performing Copland.

On one he conducts the music for the complete ballet of "Appalchian Spring" (M 32736). It is the first recording of his original version scored for 13 instruments rather than the version usually recorded with a larger orchestra.

Copland says on the jacket that he scored the work for 13 instruments because of the limited size of the hall in the Library of Congress. It was commissioned for Martha Graham and her company to be performed there.

Only later did he make it into a suite and rescore it for full orchestra.

He says that he had some hesitation in reviving the 13-instrument version because he thought it might sound too thin. But he was persuaded and came to the conclusion that he was right to do so.

I can only agree. It has a quality and a sound of its own that is personal and moving.

A fascinating bonus with the record is a smaller eight-inch disc of Copland rehearsing the players for the recording along with his comments and instructions.

The second Copland record (M32737) has him at the piano playing his sonatas for violin and piano with Isaac Sterm on one side and playing the duo for flute and piano with flutist Elaine Shaffer on the other. Side two also has the short "Nonet for Strings."

They come for widely separated periods — the sonata for violin and piano composed in 1942-43 — in what Copland calls his "plain" period of the early 1940s, the little performed nonet composed in 1960 and the duo composed in 1970-71.

RECOMMENDED: Geza Anda playing and directing the Mozart piano concertos 3, 4 and 5 with the Camerata Academica des Salzubruger Mozarteums (DG 2530330). This is another record of three early concertos in Anda's project of recording all of them.

THE FALL FROM POWER OF SPIRO AGNEW

A HEARTBEAT AWAY by Richard M. Cohen and Jules Witcover; Viking, 373 pages, $10. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Whether or not the current administration in Washington D.C. inflicts the ultimate disgrace upon America of a President impeached and convicted, it has already tarnished considerably the national honor by contributing its first vice president to resign as an admitted felon.

The story of the downfall of Spiro T. Agnew from second in line to the presidency, likely successor to Richard M. Nixon and idol of conservative Republicans, to exposed crook and hypocrite is traced with utmost candor in their "A Heartbeat Away: The Investigation and Resignation of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew" by Richard M. Cohen and Jules Witcover. The two are members of the staff of the Washington Post, the newspaper which with a series of brilliant investigative coups has challenged the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times as Ameirca's greatest newspaper.

"A Heartbeat Away" is fascinating reading for what it tells us of Agnew's character (or lack thereof), of the greed and cynicism that exist on various levels of government and politics to thwart honest and fair administration and representation, of the naivete and sometimes downright stupidity of Americans in making their political choices and pledging their loyalties, and of the maneuvering that takes place off the pages of the press and away from the cameras of television when lawyers work behind the scenes in a crisis situation.

The case of Spiro T. Agnew brought together a particularly brilliant and dedicated cast of lawyers whose work and at least partially satisfactory final resolution of a sticky mess helps to offset one's general disillusionment with public figures, many of whom belong to the legal profession.

To begin with there was in Baltimore the team of U.S. Atty. George Beall and his assistants, Barnet D. Skolnik (the sparkplug of the quartet), Russell T. Baker Jr. and Ronald S. Liebman — fearless, honest, dedicated men.

Then there were in Washington their superiors — then Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson and the chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, career man Henry E. Petersen. They were more subject to the blowing of the political winds, but to their great credit they maintained a devotion to the creed that justice had to be done even as they tempered some of the rasher impulses and decisions of their underlings.

The downfall of a cold, pragmatic, unprincipled man

Agnew, too, was represented by a distinguished panel of attorneys in Judah H. Best, Jay H. Topkis and Martin London who did the best they could do by their troubled client.

Then there was still other outstanding legal talent enlisted to represent the contracting engineering and architectural figures who had made pay-offs to Agnew and other Maryland political powers, and who were to furnish most of the evidence against the vice president.

The division within the prosecution was between the Baltimore group that was anxious that the vice president be treated like any other accused person for the sake of public confidence, and the attorney general's office that gave high priority to the quick removal of Agnew form the line of presidential succession, especially since the President's own position was becoming more and more precarious.

Richard M. Nixon and his White House, predictably, spoke with forked tongues, publicly stating their confidence in Anew's innocence, and demanding fairness and due process for him, privately attempting to shove him over the brink into resignation and thus remove a source of embarrassment for an administration that had accumulated more than enough shame on its own.

The compromise worked out within the prosecution, and agreed to ultimately by Agnew and his attorneys and a less than helpful judge was for the vice president to resign, to then plead guilty to one count of tax evasion and to escape the prison term or humiliating probation restrictions that would go ordinarily to such an offender. But in turn, the prosecution would reveal publicly all its evidence, thus making the point that Agnew was more than a tax cheat — an offense which many Americans, subjected to strong temptations themselves, could understand and accept —, but a full-fledged grafter as well, as a county official, as Maryland's governor and finally even as vice president.

The question, of course, is how many Americans read and fully appreciated the damning presentation made against Agnew. For those who failed to do so, and still think Agnew was simply caught up in a tax evasion technicality, a ready of "A Heartbeat Away" can correct quickly that misunderstanding.

Cohen and Witcover describe Agnew as "a desperate man, a cold, pragmatic unprincipled man who, for all his pride, was willing to abandon it publicly to stay out of jail" and as "a snake oil salesman."

James Thompson, the outspoken U.S. attorney in Illinois, put it even more succinctly after Agnew's resignation: "The man's a crook. We're well rid of him."

If the book shows Spiro T. Agnew, champion of law and order and spokesman for the "silent majority" as the cheap and crooked humbug that he was, it must then confront us with some serious questions about the system that put him into high office.

Write Cohen-Witcover: "Much has been said and written about the collective wisdom and good sense of the American people; that somehow by some mysterious osmosis the voters sift through all the political propaganda and select the best men to lead the country. That notion has always been poppycock; the Nixon-Agnew experience merely documents it anew.

"Closer to the truth is the demonstrated fact that the American people — and the press that strives to discern for them who these men are who seek to lead — are poor judges of character . . . "

Keep that in mind the next time you go to the polls.

Bruce and his camera have covered the city recording the facades that have long made San Francisco a favored place with architectural enthusiasts, particularly those who lean toward the traditional, enlivened with embroidery-like trim and featuring those "very San Francisco" bay windows. Lee has included some photos of public buildings, but has wisely concentrated upon the dwellings, since the former are already well represented in other collections. Thomas Aidala, architect and urban designer, has written a brief text and epilogue, urging increased efforts to preserve "these wooden beauties — and grotesqueries," noting that "they will never happen again."

The Cool War Of Industrial Espionage

THE SECRETS BUSINESS by Stephen Barlay; Crowell, 344 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Industrial espionage is the "Cool War" — the precursor of World War III on the business frontiers. The weapons of this war are tiny microphones that will fit in a cocktail olive or a bra, tape recorders, cameras, electronic bug detectors, disaffected or underpaid stenographers and switchboard operators.

The targets are marketing plans, chemical or technological discoveries, mutual fund investment plans, projected advertising campaigns. Anything, in fact, which makes it possible for one comapny to gain an advantage over a competitor or from which an industrial spy thinks he can make a buck.

It's a case of cloak and dagger (call girl and microphone) invading the corporate board room and laboratory.

Stephen Barlay gets caught up in the furtive millieu he's describing. He describes elaborately staged meetings in exotic places, like a cockfight in Bangkok, where he found out the price of some confidential papers bought at a strangely choreographed poolside auction he had witnessed. The choreography was all designed to eliminate the possibility of any electric "bugging" of the bidding process. Industrial espionage agents learn to trust no one.

Barlay's writing style can best be described as "breezy." It is a glib mixture of pulp magazine whodunit, Life magazine expose and Screen Romances come-on headline without much story substance. In spite of this style he comes up with some insights about industrial espionage that are provocative, such as Kubik Principle No. 1:

> "Intelligence work is a matter of relative costs. What's worth what to whom? How much investment is justified in protecting/obtaining a piece of information? The advantage must always be on the side of the agent. Those who pick another man's natural or electronic brain may have to spend more on the operation than the defense — but they don't have the initial cost of learning, research, and experiment to create knowledge and put into that brain."

Cost effectiveness analysis as applied to industrial spying!

Very few stories are told in detail. Barlay flits from incident to incident teasing the reader with anecdotes about espionage, big business style. One of these anecdotes is almost a classic case of convoluted duplicity. It goes like this:

A spy-catcher hired by a Swedish firm uncovers the agent who's been stealing their secrets and peddling them to a competitor. When the chairman and his security executive want to fire the spy, the spy-catcher says "No, promote him." Then the people who have been paying him to spy will think he has been loyal to his employer all along and will doubt the validity of the secrets they have in hand, which they will have to check in every detail, using up as much time and money as if they'd never received any illicit information. And what's more, they'll probably pay off their now distrusted agent in non-negotiable coin, possibly permanently. 1984 is here.

With its breezy, anecdotal style, "The Secrets Business" tantalizes the reader, gets him interested in the subject, but then leaves him unsatisfied, stuffed with hors d'oeuvres and with no main course in sight.

A Catalog Of Horrors And Of Bad Taste

THE LONG DARK NIGHT by Joseph Hayes; Putnam, 377 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

This tightly constructed suspense novel by the author of "The Desperate Hours" concerns the vengeance an ex-convict wreaks upon the people responsible for his unjust imprisonment. As "The Long Dark Night" lovingly catalogs its horrors without the encumbrance of psychological motivations or character development beyond the comic book level, it would be a thoughtful gift book for the various mass murderers recently so active in the Bay Area.

One might say that "The Long Dark Night" is straight out of today's headlines, but newspapers only report what is going on, without glorification or novelistic pretensions.

"The Long Dark Night" is depressing because the author should know better. He is an able craftsman, and need not resort to the leering shock value of child molestation, homosexual rape, bondage sexuality and other aberrations to find readers. And one human torch would be more than sufficient, but Joseph Hayes gluts us with three, along with one acid blinding, mutilations and other atrocities described with the relish of a Roman sportswriter covering the Christians versus lions semi-finals.

If Joseph Hayes' novel has any idea behind it at all, it is presumably that the possibilities of vengeance are limitless. The same may be said of bad taste.

There's A Word For Preachers Who Dig Graves

MRS. BYRNE'S DICTIONARY OF UNUSUAL, OBSCURE, AND PREPOSTEROUS WORDS by Josefa Heifetz Byrne; Lyle Stuart, 242 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

"Hippopotomonstrosesquipedalian" isn't a word one uses easily or frequently. But if you have an opportunity, use it as an adjective meaning "pertaining to a very, very long word." And quote Mill Valley's Josefa Heifetz Byrne and her "Mrs. Byrne's Dictionary" as your source and justification.

It is just one of hundreds of "unusual, obscure and preposterous" words that Mrs. Byrne defines for you.

And all of them, she guarantees, can be found legitimitized by at least one major dictionary.

There's "syrt" (quicksand), "supercalifageilicexpialidocious" (atoning for extreme and delicate beauty while highly educable), "deuterogamist" (a widow or widower who remarries), "haha" (a sunken wall), "hirci" (an armpit hair), "hepaticocholangiocholecystenterostomy" (surgically created link between the gall bladder and hepatic duct, and between the intestine and gall bladder), and "pightle" (a small field), as just a sampling.

And: "fossarian" (a clergyman who moonlights as a gravedigger), "Gillygaloo" (a mythical bird that lays square eggs), "dentiloquist" (one who speaks with closed teeth), "Boopic" (ox-eyed), and "zobo" (cross between a zebu and a yak).

The book is great fun for the linguistically inclined, serious and otherwise, but particularly the latter. Mrs. Byrne, daughter of the great violinist Jasche Heifetz, and whose previous claim to fame was some kind of a world record at the scrabble board, deserves mounds of credit for her collection and the wit that lies behind it. Applause, too, for the printers and proofreaders who put the book together at what must have been considerable mental cost.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

San Rafael gardening and landscaping writer Jack Kramer continues to successfully defend his title as America's most prolific author of books from major publishing houses.

Kramer's most recent additions to his long list:

"Philodendrons," $5.95 hardcover, telling you all you need to know about the growing of America's most popular indoor foliage plant, and perhaps surprising you with the diversity of this fine family. Artificial light, you learn, is fine for philodendrons. And a solution of laundry soap and water is your plant's best protection against insects.

"Cacti As Decorative Plants," $6.95 hardcover, $3.95 paperback, with a wealth of information on these tough but attractive decoratives. Again, the variety within the cacti tribe may come as a surprise to the uninitiated.

Charles Scribner's Sons is the publisher of both books, as they have been of many of the earlier Kramer books. And the cacti book carries this notation: "Other titles in preparation."

THE TENNIS CRAZE, it seems, is not without its hazards, especially for the novice unaccustomed to such strenuous exercise. Thus we have "The Doctors' Guide to Better Tennis and Health," published by Funk & Wagnalls, priced at $5.95.

A number of medical specialists, with Dr. Claude A. Frazier as editor, offer their advice to "the Saturday afternoon lobber" on how "to get in shape and stay in shape, and what to do if he should suffer an injury." A chapter that might very well be vital is Dr. Martin Duke's "Tennis and Your Heart."

"YESTERDAY'S CHILDREN" is a sensitive photographic essay by photo-journalist Patricia Worth Simmons on the aged, capturing through the camera the frustrations and the courage of that much-neglected minority. The accompanying text consists of quotations from "senior citizens," also poignant and revealing. A big book, nicely produced by Aurora Publishers, Nashville and London, at $10.

NOW OUT AS a $1.25 paperback from Dell: Robert Newton Peck's much-praised "A Day No Pigs Would Die," a moving novel about boyhood maturing to manhood on a Vermont farm.

ACUPUNCTURE IS a subject that continues to fascinate many who look to it with hope for help that western medicine has been unable to provide. It remains, too, a subject shrouded in much mystery.

Dr. Stanley DuBrin, a Van Nuys M.D. specializing in acupuncture, and James Keenan, a writer who has undergone acupuncture treatment, have collaborated in "Acupuncture and Your Health," a $1.50 paperback, describing what acupuncture has to offer the Western world. They predict its survival and an increasingly important role for it in the West.

"In China today," they write, "inoculations against contagious diseases are being given millions. In this and many other ways, they have learned from us. Now is the time for us to learn from them."

The publisher is Books for Better Living, 21322 Lassen Street, Chatsworth, Calif., 91311.

Marin Poet Spins Precise Images That Accumulate

OREGON WINTER By Jeanne McGahey; Woolmer-Brotherson Ltd., 58 pages, clothbound $4.50, paperback $2.25. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

"Oregon Winter" presents a powerful assertion of identity. Miss McGahey (Mrs. Lawrence Hart of San Rafael) spins lines of precise images that, like the work of Pound and Eliot, develop startling cumulative meaning.

Time and season move behind her lines:

"Now in this January
that old toad disaster
Grinning between his heels like a chill fable."

While not "nature" poems, the out-of-doors is tellingly evoked, as these lines on rain:

"Lost in the hills, the old gray farmhouses
Hump their backs against it,
And the smoke from their chimneys
Struggles through weighted air."

And death and loss:

"In the fog I remember
The lovers and the dead: the dead and lovers:
How in the slip and slide
Of sand out of a shut-up hand, have I remembered
The touch of cold hair."

This is a book for rereading and for returning to with renewed delight and understanding.

An Activist, (the oldest poetry group in the English speaking world, founded in San Francisco in 1937) Miss McGahey was published in "Five Young American Poets," second Series, by New Directions, along with two children's books.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

THE SOUND OF THE WEIR by Mary Ingate; Dodd, Mead, 213 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"The Sounds of the Weir," a first novel, won for Mary Ingate in her native Britain the Macmillan-Pan Prize for the best crime novel by a woman.

It is a success, we suspect, because it is not only written by a woman, but also for women, and unabashedly, unapologetically so.

Many women do have a different taste in mystery fiction than do males. They like a strong romantic strain. And they particularly appreciate good atmosphere and setting.

Mrs. Ingate gives us these with her story of a murder in the Suffolk countryside of the 1920s, and of 14-year-old Ann Fielding who finds herself the key witness in the trial of her beautiful cousin accused of murdering her husband.

And of Ann's later return to the scene of the slaying, and her terror as the past refuses to die.

Mrs. Ingate, we are informed, lives in an Elizabethan house in Suffolk. Which, of course, equips her admirably for carrying off the descriptive portions of her story.

A DRESSING OF DIAMOND by Nicolas Freeling; Harper and Row, 252 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Nicolas Freeling fans felt anguish when in "Aupres de ma Blonde" the European novelist killed off his Detective Van der Valk, central character in a series of exceptional mysteries.

Then came the good news that Freeling had not abandoned the suspense field. His newest, "A Dressing of Diamond," was also to be a crime novel, introducing a new detective.

Well, here it is. The setting is France. The new sleuth is Henri Castang, Parisian policeman. And the problem arises when a small girl, whose parents, the mother a children's judge, the father a business man, are close friends of the Castangs, vanishes. She has been kidnapped. But apparently not for ransom. With a motive missing, Castang must work in the dark.

STRYCHNINE

The temptation is to praise anything and everything by the gifted Freeling. But the realization comes midway into the book that, after a good start, "A Dressing of Diamond" isn't up to Freeling standards.

The major difficulty is with the conversations, particularly between Castang and wife, and between the parents of the kidnapping victim. Freeling has sacrificed naturalness in an effort to be overly clever, and the dialogue comes off utterly unconvincing. There is also a tiresome, unnecessary plethora of four letter words.

Castang has promise as a character, and quite probably will be heard from again. And just as likely "A Dressing of Diamond" will sell well and be acclaimed in many quarters. The Freeling reputation is sufficient to guarantee a large measure of acceptance, deserved or not.

The weapons of this war are tiny microphones that will fit in a cocktail olive or a bra, tape recorders, cameras, electronic bug detectors, disaffected or underpaid stenographers and switchboard operators.

The targets are marketing plans, chemical or technological discoveries, mutual fund investment plans, projected advertising campaigns. Anything, in fact, which makes it possible for one comapny to gain an advantage over a competitor or from which an industrial spy thinks he can make a buck.

It's a case of cloak and dagger (call girl and microphone) invading the corporate board room and laboratory.

Stephen Barlay gets caught up in the furtive millieu he's describing. He describes elaborately staged meetings in exotic places, like a cockfight in Bangkok, where he found out the price of some confidential papers bought at a strangely choreographed poolside auction he had witnessed. The choreography was all designed to eliminate the possibility of any electric "bugging" of the bidding process. Industrial espionage agents learn to trust no one.

Barlay's writing style can best be described as "breezy." It is a glib mixture of pulp magazine whodunit, Life magazine expose and Screen Romances come-on headline without much story substance. In spite of this style he comes up with some insights about industrial espionage that are provocative, such as Kubik Principle No. 1:

"Intelligence work is a matter of relative costs. What's worth what to whom? How much investment is justified in protecting/obtaining a piece of information? The advantage must always be on the side of the agent. Those who pick another man's natural or electronic brain may have to spend more on the operation than the defense — but they don't have the initial cost of learning, research, and experiment to create knowledge and put into that brain."

Cost effectiveness analysis as applied to industrial spying!

Very few stories are told in detail. Barlay flits from incident to incident teasing the reader with anecdotes about espionage, big business style. One of these anecdotes is almost a classic case of convoluted duplicity. It goes like this:

A spy-catcher hired by a Swedish firm uncovers the agent who's been stealing their secrets and peddling them to a competitor. When the chairman and his security executive want to fire the spy, the spy-catcher says "No, promote him." Then the people who have been paying him to spy will think he has been loyal to his employer all along and will doubt the validity of the secrets they have in hand, which they will have to check in every detail, using up as much time and money as if they'd never received any illicit information. And what's more, they'll probably pay off their now distrusted agent in non-negotiable coin, possibly permanently. 1984 is here.

With its breezy, anecdotal style, "The Secrets Business" tantalizes the reader, gets him interested in the subject, but then leaves him unsatisfied, stuffed with hors d'oeuvres and with no main course in sight.

A Catalog Of Horrors And Of Bad Taste

THE LONG DARK NIGHT by Joseph Hayes; Putnam, 377 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

This tightly constructed suspense novel by the author of "The Desperate Hours" concerns the vengeance an ex-convict wreaks upon the people responsible for his unjust imprisonment. As "The Long Dark Night" lovingly catalogs its horrors without the encumbrance of psychological motivations or character development beyond the comic book level, it would be a thoughtful gift book for the various mass murderers recently so active in the Bay Area.

One might say that "The Long Dark Night" is straight out of today's headlines, but newspapers only report what is going on, without glorification or novelistic pretensions.

"The Long Dark Night" is depressing because the author should know better. He is an able craftsman, and need not resort to the leering shock value of child molestation, homosexual rape, bondage sexuality and other aberrations to find readers. And one human torch would be more than sufficient, but Joseph Hayes gluts us with three, along with one acid blinding, mutilations and other atrocities described with the relish of a Roman sportswriter covering the Christians versus lions semi-finals.

If Joseph Hayes' novel has any idea behind it at all, it is presumably that the possibilities of vengeance are limitless. The same may be said of bad taste.

Vegas Losers Are Forgettable

PARADISE ROAD by David Scott Milton; Atheneum, 268 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

"Paradise Road" is an eminently forgettable novel of gambling, Las Vegas and losers.

Paradise Road? Don Porter, the main protagonist is bent on stinging a Vegas casino with his system for winning at blackjack.

Unfortunately, he and the other characters appear as if stenciled onto cardboard. Porter is a tight-mouthed drifter of indeterminate age. But wait. He meets with a fading ex-beauty queen, a punch-drunk boxer and two properly evil hoodlum types.

Once their interaction commences in the Navada spa, things do improve plotwise. However, the creative talent of David Scott Milton cannot bring them up to even middling.

There's A Word For Preachers Who Dig Graves

MRS. BYRNE'S DICTIONARY OF UNUSUAL, OBSCURE, AND PREPOSTEROUS WORDS by Josefa Heifetz Byrne; Lyle Stuart, 242 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

"Hippopotomonstrosesquipedalian" isn't a word one uses easily or frequently. But if you have an opportunity, use it as an adjective meaning "pertaining to a very, very long word." And quote Mill Valley's Josefa Heifetz Byrne and her "Mrs. Byrne's Dictionary" as your source and justification.

It is just one of hundreds of "unusual, obscure and preposterous" words that Mrs. Byrne defines for you.

And all of them, she guarantees, can be found legitimitized by at least one major dictionary.

There's "syrt" (quicksand), "supercalifageilicexpialidocious" (atoning for extreme and delicate beauty while highly educable), "deuterogamist" (a widow or widower who remarries), "haha" (a sunken wall), "hirci" (an armpit hair), "hepaticocholangiocholecystenterostomy" (surgically created link between the gall bladder and hepatic duct, and between the intestine and gall bladder), and "pightle" (a small field), as just a sampling.

And: "fossarian" (a clergyman who moonlights as a gravedigger), "Gillygaloo" (a mythical bird that lays square eggs), "dentiloquist" (one who speaks with closed teeth), "Boopic" (ox-eyed), and "zobo" (cross between a zebu and a yak).

The book is great fun for the linguistically inclined, serious and otherwise, but particularly the latter. Mrs. Byrne, daughter of the great violinist Jasche Heifetz, and whose previous claim to fame was some kind of a world record at the scrabble board, deserves mounds of credit for her collection and the wit that lies behind it. Applause, too, for the printers and proofreaders who put the book together at what must have been considerable mental cost.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

San Rafael gardening and landscaping writer Jack Kramer continues to successfully defend his title as America's most prolific author of books from major publishing houses.

Kramer's most recent additions to his long list:

"Philodendrons," $5.95 hardcover, telling you all you need to know about the growing of America's most popular indoor foliage plant, and perhaps surprising you with the diversity of this fine family. Artificial light, you learn, is fine for philodendrons. And a solution of laundry soap and water is your plant's best protection against insects.

"Cacti As Decorative Plants," $6.95 hardcover, $3.95 paperback, with a wealth of information on these tough but attractive decoratives. Again, the variety within the cacti tribe may come as a surprise to the uninitiated.

Charles Scribner's Sons is the publisher of both books, as they have been of many of the earlier Kramer books. And the cacti book carries this notation: "Other titles in preparation."

THE TENNIS CRAZE, it seems, is not without its hazards, especially for the novice unaccustomed to such strenuous exercise. Thus we have "The Doctors' Guide to Better Tennis and Health," published by Funk & Wagnalls, priced at $5.95.

A number of medical specialists, with Dr. Claude A. Frazier as editor, offer their advice to "the Saturday afternoon lobber" on how "to get in shape and stay in shape, and what to do if he should suffer an injury." A chapter that might very well be vital is Dr. Martin Duke's "Tennis and Your Heart."

"YESTERDAY'S CHILDREN" is a sensitive photographic essay by photo-journalist Patricia Worth Simmons on the aged, capturing through the camera the frustrations and the courage of that much-neglected minority. The accompanying text consists of quotations from "senior citizens," also poignant and revealing. A big book, nicely produced by Aurora Publishers, Nashville and London, at $10.

NOW OUT AS a $1.25 paperback from Dell: Robert Newton Peck's much-praised "A Day No Pigs Would Die," a moving novel about boyhood maturing to manhood on a Vermont farm.

ACUPUNCTURE IS a subject that continues to fascinate many who look to it with hope for help that western medicine has been unable to provide. It remains, too, a subject shrouded in much mystery.

Dr. Stanley DuBrin, a Van Nuys M.D. specializing in acupuncture, and James Keenan, a writer who has undergone acupuncture treatment, have collaborated in "Acupuncture and Your Health," a $1.50 paperback, describing what acupuncture has to offer the Western world. They predict its survival and an increasingly important role for it in the West.

"In China today," they write, "inoculations against contagious diseases are being given millions. In this and many other ways, they have learned from us. Now is the time for us to learn from them."

The publisher is Books for Better Living, 21322 Lassen Street, Chatsworth, Calif., 91311.

Marin Poet Spins Precise Images That Accumulate

OREGON WINTER By Jeanne McGahey; Woolmer-Brotherson Ltd., 58 pages, clothbound $4.50, paperback $2.25. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

"Oregon Winter" presents a powerful assertion of identity. Miss McGahey (Mrs. Lawrence Hart of San Rafael) spins lines of precise images that, like the work of Pound and Eliot, develop startling cumulative meaning.

Time and season move behind her lines:

> "Now in this January
> that old toad disaster
> Grinning between his heels like a chill fable."

While not "nature" poems, the out-of-doors is tellingly evoked, as these lines on rain:

> "Lost in the hills, the old gray farmhouses
> Hump their backs against it,
> And the smoke from their chimneys
> Struggles through weighted air."

And death and loss:

> "In the fog I remember
> The lovers and the dead: the dead and lovers:
> How in the slip and slide
> Of sand out of a shut-up hand, have I remembered
> The touch of cold hair."

This is a book for rereading and for returning to with renewed delight and understanding.

An Activist, (the oldest poetry group in the English speaking world, founded in San Francisco in 1937) Miss McGahey was published in "Five Young American Poets," second Series, by New Directions, along with two children's books.

THE SOUND OF THE WEIR by Mary Ingate; Dodd, Mead, 213 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"The Sounds of the Weir," a first novel, won for Mary Ingate in her native Britain the Macmillan-Pan Prize for the best crime novel by a woman.

It is a success, we suspect, because it is not only written by a woman, but also for women, and unabashedly, unapologetically so.

Many women do have a different taste in mystery fiction than do males. They like a strong romantic strain. And they particularly appreciate good atmosphere and setting.

Mrs. Ingate gives us these with her story of a murder in the Suffolk countryside of the 1920s, and of 14-year-old Ann Fielding who finds herself the key witness in the trial of her beautiful cousin accused of murdering her husband.

And of Ann's later return to the scene of the slaying, and her terror as the past refuses to die.

Mrs. Ingate, we are informed, lives in an Elizabethan house in Suffolk. Which, of course, equips her admirably for carrying off the descriptive portions of her story.

A DRESSING OF DIAMOND by Nicolas Freeling; Harper and Row, 252 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Nicolas Freeling fans felt anguish when in "Aupres de ma Blonde" the European novelist killed off his Detective Van der Valk, central character in a series of exceptional mysteries.

Then came the good news that Freeling had not abandoned the suspense field. His newest, "A Dressing of Diamond," was also to be a crime novel, introducing a new detective.

Well, here it is. The setting is France. The new sleuth is Henri Castang, Parisian policeman. And the problem arises when a small girl, whose parents, the mother a children's judge, the father a business man, are close friends of the Castangs, vanishes. She has been kidnapped. But apparently not for ransom. With a motive missing, Castang must work in the dark.

The temptation is to praise anything and everything by the gifted Freeling. But the realization comes midway into the book that, after a good start, "A Dressing of Diamond" isn't up to Freeling standards.

The major difficulty is with the conversations, particularly between Castang and wife, and between the parents of the kidnapping victim. Freeling has sacrificed naturalness in an effort to be overly clever, and the dialogue comes off utterly unconvincing. There is also a tiresome, unnecessary plethora of four letter words.

Castang has promise as a character, and quite probably will be heard from again. And just as likely "A Dressing of Diamond" will sell well and be acclaimed in many quarters. The Freeling reputation is sufficient to guarantee a large measure of acceptance, deserved or not.

Canada Is Expecting Big Tourist Wave From Its Neighbor

By RALPH HUBLEY

From the island sands of the Atlantic to the island forests of the Pacific, Canada is expecting a record number of visitors from below its American border in 1974.

The reason: a vacation escape from the energy squeeze in the U.S.

Whether expected U.S. shortages, now considerably less pressing than they seemed a few months ago, actually justify this hope or not, Canada is promoting its own unlimited gasoline supply as a major reason for an estimated 38½ million U.S. residents to go north this year. That would be a 4 per cent increase in such traffic over 1973.

BUT WHILE Canadian gasoline may be plentiful, it won't be cheap. Prices have kept pace with those in the U.S. And the more remote the area, the more fuel will cost.

In fact, many things will cost more in Canada this year, since inflation generally parallels that in the U.S. Rail and bus fares are up 15 per cent.

Although Canadian Pacific Air fares are remaining unchanged through the summer, Air Canada tickets have increased 7 to 10 per cent. Hotels in Canada are quoting prices of $2 to $3 more per room this year.

BUT SPECIAL package rates can cut costs. In the east, for instance, Air Canada features four-day and three-night packages in the scenic cities of Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec. These cost little more than the regular price of the air fare.

Also suggested are chateaux vacations that "combine the best of the old and new worlds." Indeed, Air Canada is promoting its homeland as "the closest thing to Europe this side of the Atlantic."

Adding to this year's pull on Americans will be special activities at Winnipeg and Newfoundland.

Throughout 1974 Winnipeg will be observing the centennial of its government. And its central location puts the city on or near the route of many visitors to Canada.

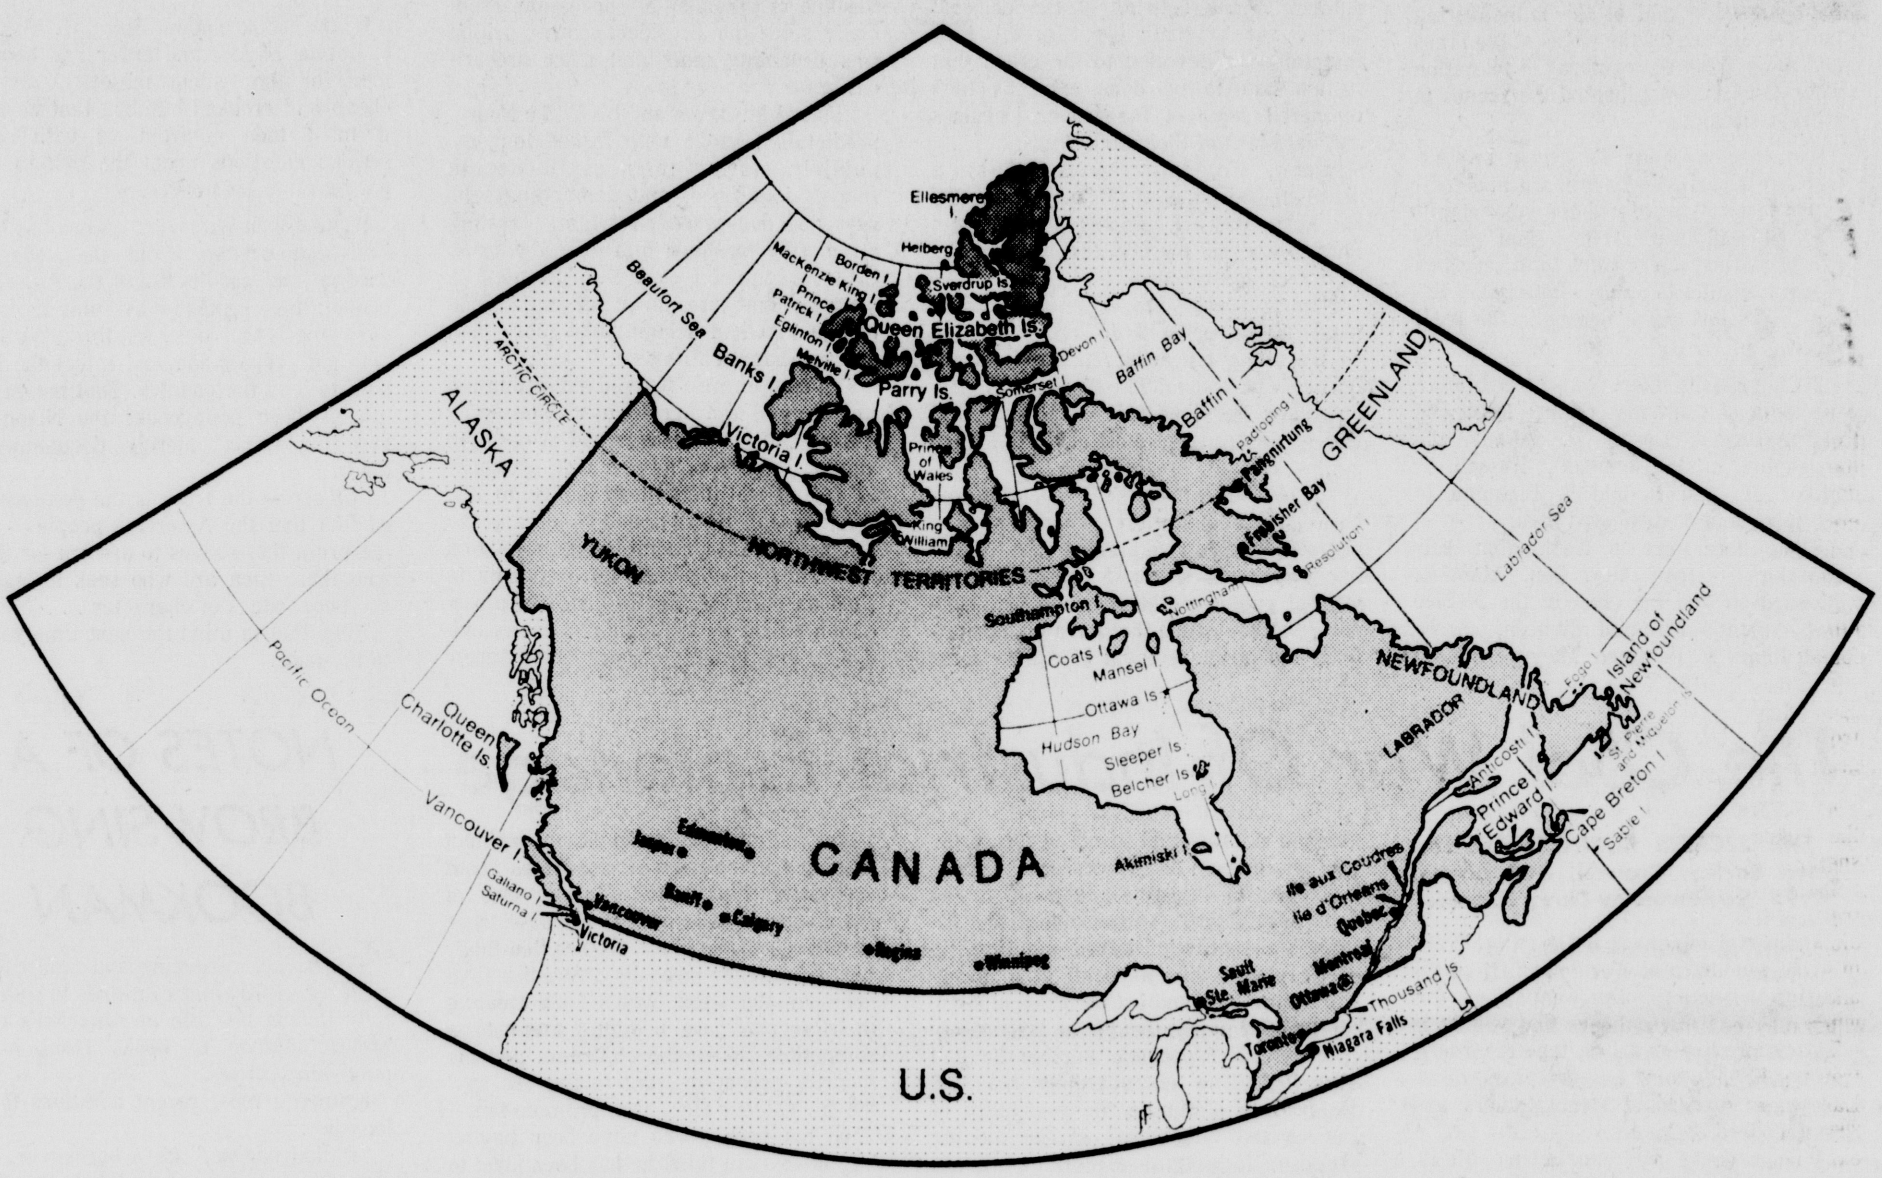
AMONG THE 400 centennial events yet to be observed are a canoe pageant in June; bicycle rallies, parades, carnivals, Scottish games, and dancing in the streets in June and July; Folk Festival and International Air Show in August; and Music Pageant in October.

This year also is the 25th anniversary of Newfoundland's entry in the confederation of Canada. Although Canada's youngest province, Newfoundland, once was one of Britain's oldest colonies, hundreds of years earlier Vikings had settled on the tip of the northern peninsula.

Again special activities are expected to draw larger crowds than usual, so advance reservations are prudent.

OBSERVANCES began at midnight, March 31, when bonfires flared on the highest peak near each community.

Still to come are the finals of the cross-province recreational-skills contests in Gander May 24-25 and a cross-province bicycle race in June. Other events include banquets and local celebrations, the Newfoundland Games, St. John's Regatta Day, two traveling shows, the Festival of Work Skills scheduled for Labor Day weekend, the International Fisheries Exhibition from Sept. 16 to Sept. 20, and Canada Week, Oct. 6 to Oct. 12.



While Canada will bustle with such attractions, its islands, long a playground of Americans will still have appeal. Most popular have been easy-to-reach Cape Breton and Prince Edward islands on the East Coast, the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence River, and Vancouver and Queen Charlotte islands on the West Coast.

BUT ISLAND hunters are ranging farther:

On the East Coast there is renewed interest in Sable Island in the Atlantic off Nova Scotia, Anticosti and Magdalen islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the hundreds of tiny islands along the coast of Newfoundland. Also rediscovered are St. Pierre and Miquelon (both off the southern coast of Newfoundland), France's only remaining territory in Canada.

The Thousand Islands (actually more than 1,700) extend from the eastern end of Lake Ontario near Kingston down the St. Lawrence River to Brockville. About 600 are in U.S. waters.

BUT OTHER islands near the U.S. border, chiefly in the Great Lakes, are drawing more vacationers. The largest of these include Pelee Island in Lake Erie, Manitoulin, Cockburn, and St. Joseph islands in Lake Huron, Michipicaten and St. Ignace islands in Lake Superior.

On the West Coast there are scores of islands in the Strait of Georgia, sheltered by Vancouver, and hundreds more of all sizes along the rugged coast north of Vancouver. Many are serviced regularly by ferryboat.

Even the islands of the Arctic are getting new attention since the establishment of a new national park on Baffin Island and the development of Eskimo communities.

CANADA IS both one of the world's leading travel destinations and tourist-generating countries. More than 95 per cent of Canada's foreign tourists are from the U.S., nearly 70 per cent of foreign visitors to the U.S. from Canada. According to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, U.S. travelers bring more than a billion dollars to Canada, while Canadian visitors add more than 900 million dollars to the U.S. economy.

Ease of passage along the 3,000 miles of common border is the biggest factor behind the statistics.

Israel Struggles To Recover From Slump In Tourism

By ROBERT SLATER

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The October war put a sharp dent in Israeli tourism, especially in the first three months after the fighting, but tourist officials hope the trade will recover sufficiently to make 1974 a record year.

It won't be easy.

Military tension persists along Israel's northern frontier, making it that much more difficult for tourist officials to convince visitors to come.

The fewer tourists, the less money spent. Tourism is Israel's No. 1 earner of foreign currency.

"WE TELL PEOPLE who want to visit us that the shooting has been hundreds of miles from many of the tourist sites," said Hanoch Givton, director general of the tourism ministry.

With fighting, if it continues, confined to the frontier, officials said they anticipate 750,000 tourists this year. They said this despite a 9.1 per cent dropoff in tourism during 1973 as contrasted with the previous year.

In 1973, 661,600 persons traveled to Israel as compared to 727,500 a year earlier. Givton said Israel was on its way to attracting three quarters of a million tourists in 1973 when the war broke out.

NO DOUBT THE effect on post-war tourism was drastic.

In the three months after the war, 82,500 visitors came to the country. But 151,000 had arrived during the same three-month period a year before.

Most tourists are far removed from the war front when they visit Israel. Some Jewish fund-raising tour groups visit the fronts, but only when the army deems it safe.

One such busload was captured by the Egyptians when it wandered across Israel lines near the Suez Canal. The perplexed Egyptians returned the fundraisers after several hours.

Tourist ministry officials said the tourist trade has picked up faster after the October war than it did after the Six-Day War of June, 1967. As evidence they note the number of tourist-carrying flights reached 70 per cent of the pre-war level in November, 1973, a month after the war.

MORE SIGNS OF recovery: the country's 20,000 government-recommended hotel rooms have been 85 per cent full this past month. And the 45,000 tourists who came this Passover and Easter exceeded the number last year by 3,000.

As a result of the war, those tourists paid more for their pleasure.

Israel's cost of living has risen 14.9 per cent in the first three months of this year alone, and that means higher prices for tourists. For example, it cost about $8 to fill a car's gas tanks before the war; now the price is $17. And hotel rooms have gone up at least 25 per cent.

Tourist officials know they still have work to do to keep tourism on the increase.

"OUR MAIN JOB in the first few days of the war was to get tourists out of the country," Givton said. No sooner did the guns stop than the tourist ministry planned to pump an extra millinon dollars into its promotion efforts.

Non-Jewish tourists, who make up 40 per cent of the entire trade, are a key target for the future.

Israel, officials said, hopes to attract large numbers of Christian pilgrims in 1975 who will be Europe-bound because of "Holy Year" observances decreed by Pope Paul VI.

"The tourist who comes to Israel has so much to see that he will come despite any military tensions," Givton said.

Once they arrive, tourists can visit most parts of Israel plus the occupied Arab territories without restrictions.

Polo In Hawaii? Yes, At Mokuleia

If you would like to catch some polo action on your next vacation, head for Hawaii.

That's right — Hawaii, that variety-spiced resort destination in the Pacific that keeps coming up with surprises for travelers.

Hawaii's polo season begins in spring and continues through the summer to late August. It's during that time of year that a little community on Oahu's North Shore known as Mokuleia suddenly awakes to prominence as the place to be on a Sunday afternoon.

Those who have been to Mokyleia (pronounced "Mo-koo-lay-ee-uh") claim it's one of the most scenic and attractive polo fields in the world. The setting is enriched by the verdant Waianae Mountains on one side and the deep blue Pacific Ocean on the other. A grove of ironwood trees and tall palms provide added beauty to the grounds.

Polo action unfolds there at 2 p.m. each Sunday.

A Warning Of Health Perils That Can Spoil A Vacation

Warm weather plus vacations equal more health hazards.

State Health Director Dr. William Mayer has advised California vacationers to take specific precautions against summer hazards, ranging from such nuisances as sunburn and poison oak to some very serious diseases.

"The worst diseases are transmitted through contact with animals or their living areas," said Mayer. "Rabies is present in most counties in skunks, bats, foxes, bobcats, coyotes, raccoons and opossums. It is also found occasionally in dogs, cats, cows and horses."

Although bubonic plague is rare, Mayer pointed out that it may be carried by chipmunks, ground squirrels and other rodents and their fleas. He also cited Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia, which can be contracted from animals, ticks or biting flies.

"WILD ANIMALS, no matter how appealing or friendly, must not be taken home as pets," Mayer warned. "They should never be handled or fed."

Mayer advised vacationers to place tents and sleeping bags away from animal burrows, and to avoid areas infested with mosquitoes. Keep campsites clean, he suggested. Be careful when entering vacant cabins in wilderness areas. Unused structures often serve as nesting places for rodents.

Apply insect repellent to socks and trouser cuffs.

Mayer recommended that persons finding dead animals notify forest rangers, health officials or law enforcement officers. Contact with dead animals can be dangerous if they are diseased, Mayer stated.

"WE'RE NOT TRYING to spoil anybody's summer fun," Mayer said, "but we don't want you to spoil it for yourself. We want all Californians to be aware of the potential dangers, so that they can be avoided.

"Common sense is the best defense against illness and accidents. Avoid unsafe water, both for drinking and swimming. Above all, practice moderation: avoid too much sun, too much food, too much driving and exertion. A vacation should be restful and relaxing —not an endurance contest to see how many miles you can drive or how far you can swim or how much sun you can take."

Suntan lotion, a sun-shielding hat, salt tablets for heat fatigue, mosquito netting, insect repellent, and above all, a first-aid kit, are important items to have along on any outdoor vacation.

"Any one or more of these can spell the difference between fun and trouble," Mayer concluded.

Israel Struggles To Recover From Slump In Tourism

By ROBERT SLATER

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The October war put a sharp dent in Israeli tourism, especially in the first three months after the fighting, but tourist officials hope the trade will recover sufficiently to make 1974 a record year.

It won't be easy.

Military tension persists along Israel's northern frontier, making it that much more difficult for tourist officials to convince visitors to come.

The fewer tourists, the less money spent. Tourism is Israel's No. 1 earner of foreign currency.

"WE TELL PEOPLE who want to visit us that the shooting has been hundreds of miles from many of the tourist sites," said Hanoch Givton, director general of the tourism ministry.

With fighting, if it continues, confined to the frontier, officials said they anticipate 750,000 tourists this year. They said this despite a 9.1 per cent dropoff in tourism during 1973 as contrasted with the previous year.

In 1973, 661,600 persons traveled to Israel as compared to 727,500 a year earlier. Givton said Israel was on its way to attracting three quarters of a million tourists in 1973 when the war broke out.

NO DOUBT THE effect on post-war tourism was drastic.

In the three months after the war, 82,500 visitors came to the country. But 151,000 had arrived during the same three-month period a year before.

Most tourists are far removed from the war front when they visit Israel. Some Jewish fund-raising tour groups visit the fronts, but only when the army deems it safe.

One such busload was captured by the Egyptians when it wandered across Israel lines near the Suez Canal. The perplexed Egyptians returned the fundraisers after several hours.

Tourist ministry officials said the tourist trade has picked up faster after the October war than it did after the Six-Day War of June, 1967. As evidence they note the number of tourist-carrying flights reached 70 per cent of the pre-war level in November, 1973, a month after the war.

MORE SIGNS OF recovery: the country's 20,000 government-recommended hotel rooms have been 85 per cent full this past month. And the 45,000 tourists who came this Passover and Easter exceeded the number last year by 3,000.

As a result of the war, those tourists paid more for their pleasure.

Israel's cost of living has risen 14.9 per cent in the first three months of this year alone, and that means higher prices for tourists. For example, it cost about $8 to fill a car's gas tanks before the war; now the price is $17. And hotel rooms have gone up at least 25 per cent.

Tourist officials know they still have work to do to keep tourism on the increase.

"OUR MAIN JOB in the first few days of the war was to get tourists out of the country," Givton said. No sooner did the guns stop than the tourist ministry planned to pump an extra millinon dollars into its promotion efforts.

Non-Jewish tourists, who make up 40 per cent of the entire trade, are a key target for the future.

Israel, officials said, hopes to attract large numbers of Christian pilgrims in 1975 who will be Europe-bound because of "Holy Year" observances decreed by Pope Paul VI.

"The tourist who comes to Israel has so much to see that he will come despite any military tensions," Givton said.

Once they arrive, tourists can visit most parts of Israel plus the occupied Arab territories without restrictions.

Polo In Hawaii? Yes, At Mokuleia

If you would like to catch some polo action on your next vacation, head for Hawaii.

That's right — Hawaii, that variety-spiced resort destination in the Pacific that keeps coming up with surprises for travelers.

Hawaii's polo season begins in spring and continues through the summer to late August. It's during that time of year that a little community on Oahu's North Shore known as Mokuleia suddenly awakes to prominence as the place to be on a Sunday afternoon.

Those who have been to Mokyleia (pronounced "Mo-koo-lay-ee-uh") claim it's one of the most scenic and attractive polo fields in the world. The setting is enriched by the verdant Waianae Mountains on one side and the deep blue Pacific Ocean on the other. A grove of ironwood trees and tall palms provide added beauty to the grounds.

Polo action unfolds there at 2 p.m. each Sunday.

A Warning Of Health Perils That Can Spoil A Vacation

Warm weather plus vacations equal more health hazards.

State Health Director Dr. William Mayer has advised California vacationers to take specific precautions against summer hazards, ranging from such nuisances as sunburn and poison oak to some very serious diseases.

"The worst diseases are transmitted through contact with animals or their living areas," said Mayer. "Rabies is present in most counties in skunks, bats, foxes, bobcats, coyotes, raccoons and opossums. It is also found occasionally in dogs, cats, cows and horses."

Although bubonic plague is rare, Mayer pointed out that it may be carried by chipmunks, ground squirrels and other rodents and their fleas. He also cited Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia, which can be contracted from animals, ticks or biting flies.

"WILD ANIMALS, no matter how appealing or friendly, must not be taken home as pets," Mayer warned. "They should never be handled or fed."

Mayer advised vacationers to place tents and sleeping bags away from animal burrows, and to avoid areas infested with mosquitoes. Keep campsites clean, he suggested. Be careful when entering vacant cabins in wilderness areas. Unused structures often serve as nesting places for rodents.

Apply insect repellent to socks and trouser cuffs.

Mayer recommended that persons finding dead animals notify forest rangers, health officials or law enforcement officers. Contact with dead animals can be dangerous if they are diseased, Mayer stated.

"WE'RE NOT TRYING to spoil anybody's summer fun," Mayer said, "but we don't want you to spoil it for yourself. We want all Californians to be aware of the potential dangers, so that they can be avoided.

"Common sense is the best defense against illness and accidents. Avoid unsafe water, both for drinking and swimming. Above all, practice moderation: avoid too much sun, too much food, too much driving and exertion. A vacation should be restful and relaxing —not an endurance contest to see how many miles you can drive or how far you can swim or how much sun you can take."

Suntan lotion, a sun-shielding hat, salt tablets for heat fatigue, mosquito netting, insect repellent, and above all, a first-aid kit, are important items to have along on any outdoor vacation.

"Any one or more of these can spell the difference between fun and trouble," Mayer concluded.

MILES CANYON brought nightmares to thousands of gold stampeders during the Klondike Rush, but today it brings pleasure to Yukon visitors. In 1898 the canyon's waters claimed the lives of several and the supplies of many headed for Dawson City. Today tourists can ply the same waters safely in the M.V. Schwatka or walk that historic trails that run along the top of its rocky walls.

Hiking Yukon's Chilkoot Trail Today Is Still A Challenging Undertaking

The Yukon Territory's Chilkoot Trail tested 50,000 men and women in 1898, and the slowly moving line of humanity, bent double, silhouetted against a snow covered mountain, became a symbol of endurance.

The same Chilkoot Trail which was a nightmare to most, and total defeat to others, has become a popular three or four-day outing for the serious hiker.

It offers a challenging 32-mile trek, spectacular views, scenery which varies from coastal to alpine and above all a great sense of accomplishment.

IT IS THE ONLY trail of any length in the Yukon which is marked end has shelters.

There are usually several groups on the trail and it is advisable to avoid traveling alone. Often groups gather informally — in Skagway or Dyes and hike together and there are also organized guided hikes which may be arranged.

The Chilkoot can only be safely hiked from early July to the end of August. Earlier or lager there will be snow in the 3,600 foot summit and rain and fog can be experienced anytime.

ONE IS NEVER free of the past while hiking the Chilkoot. This is the path of men who came from all over the world to make their fortunes and this was the last real obstacle they thought, even though each had to tote almost a ton of supplies on his back, 100 to 150 pounds at a time.

One looks up and thinks about the avalanche which came thundering down these rock walls April 3, 1898, and claimed 60 lives. Along the way are battered portable boats, old boots, pieces of equipment, all mute evidence of the epic stampede.

The other Yukon trails, without signs or shelters, are, for the most part, dog team trails which became winter stage roads connecting the road houses on the route, or the mining communities, police detachments and trading posts.

DURING THE SUMMER the transportation route was the Yukon River so that there was no need for substantial bridging during the winter; consequently the hiker must be prepared to ford streams crossing the old routes.

Hikers use these basic trails then refer to topographical maps to strike off to little known lakes, abandoned mining settlements, gold rush cemetaries, or just experience the real meaning of solitude.

The Dalton Trail was a toll road in 1898 when Jack Dalton cleared out the 300-mile trail from tidewater at Lynn Canal to Fort Selkirk on the Yukon River. He guarded it with a gun and stopped a herd of beef cattle and their drivers who attempted to use his right of way to get beef-on-the-hoof to Dawson.

THE PRESENT DAY hike starts at Mile 106 on the Haines Road and one may reach the abandoned Dalton Post a shortdistance off the highway. One may then hike westward to quiet lakes and an introduction to Kluane National Park.

There are three or four treks off the Haines Road — a starting point is one of the most beautiful spots in the Yukon, Kathleen Lake, Mile 142, and again its westward direction leads to an abandoned copper mine and the view from the Johobo mine site is worth the effort of the climb. The total hike is 53 miles and comes out at Mile 125 on the Haines Road.

Before entering the Kluane Park one is required to check in at the park warden's headquarters at Haines Junction prior to departure.

ONE SHOULD NOT undertake any of these hikes alone. The appeal of this country is its primitiveness and by the same token herein lies the danger of one becoming lost, injured, being attacked by disgruntled bears or even moose in the fall.

There are several short hikes radiating out from communities and a few inquiries locally will result in some suggested trails and probably a fair dash of history thrown in.

The hiking season in the Yukon is short. May, June, July, August and part of September are recommended months.

ONCE AWAY FROM settlements and the open shores of lakes and rivers insects become a problem and hikers should be quipped with an insect spray or cream.

During May, June and July the days are long — 24 hours of daylight and there is a magic about a sunset at midnight and birds starting their day at 2 a.m. and who better will experience this but the hikers overnighting by a lonely lake or a hillside viewpoint.

Argentina's El Bolson — Valley Flecked With Roses

By ROBERT E. SULLIVAN

EL BOLSON, Argentina (UPI) — El Bolson, or "the large pocket," isn't large, but it is a pocket — a tiny rose-flecked valley protected by mountains on two sides and hills on the others.

The wild and cultivated roses, and redwine-colored Mosceta flowers, line the streets and dominate the gardens, most of the blossoms at least partially covered by the dust churned up by the unpaved roads.

A lovely trip is a four-hour journey by bus or car over the mountain roads — none paved — that wind their way through the foothills and lake district south of Bariloche, Argentina's showplace all-season resort area.

The Bariloche-Bolson-Esquel bus (the regular scheduled bus (don't take the tourist service which covers the same route but at double the cost) will let passengers out at any place they choose along the way, and backpackers will have trouble choosing the most ideal, from five minutes out of Bariloche until the roses announce Bolson.

A walk of one mile off the road puts one literally out of sight of civilization. Even in the most popular lake areas, campers can usually find a place to be totally by themselves.

There is also regular light plane transportation from Bariloche, and ample — but expensive — car rental facilities there.

In the geometric center of Bolson — population 4,000 — is the tourist office. If he's there — he's German-born but has spent years in Argentina — Sigriedo Janett, the information director, can point out the best places for fishing, hiking and in the winter skiing.

His favorite line for backpackers seeking a good trail is "close your eyes, spin around a few times and take off in the direction you stop." It is not bad advice.

A pleasant afternoon walk is up to Lago Escondido (Hidden Lake) — every third community in Argentina seems to have its own Lago Escondido — a small lagoon surrounded by a farm and woods.

The path is clearly marked and there is only one steep hill.

A two-day trip would be to the isolated Lago de Tres Colores (Three Colored Lake) which, like its sister lakes, is pure but actually of various colors because of its depth. For the more intrepid there are countless mountain trails between El Bolson and Chile.

There are three hotels in town but the best is the immaculate quiet "Residencia" run by Maria Steiner, a mid-60s woman who does all her own cooking over several wood-burning iron stoves.

The Best Hotels? Here's One Man's All-American List

What do Boston, Montreal, New York, Washington, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego and Kansas City have in common?

For one thing, they have the nine best hotels in North America, says one of the country's leading hotel authorities.

Hernando Courtright, owner of the famous Beverly-Wilshire in Los Angeles, rated his personal choices of the best hotels in America and the world in Town and Country magazine.

His nominees: the Ritz-Carlton in Boston, the one with the same name in Montreal, the Pierre and the Plaza in New York, the Madison in Washington, the Stanford Court in San Francisco, his own Beverly-Wilshire in Los Angeles, the Westgate in San Diego and the Alameda Plaza in Kansas City.

Courtright bypassed Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis with: "There's not even one good hotel there."

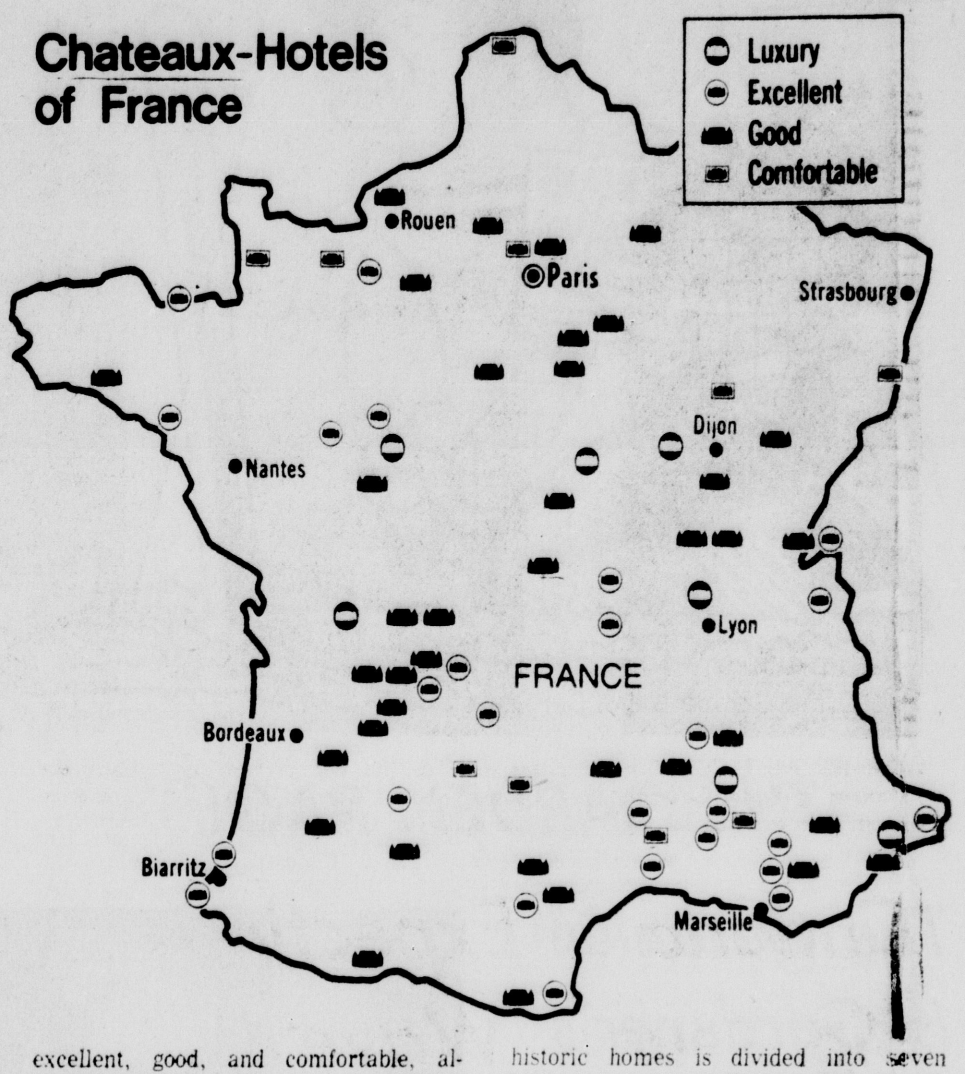
Chateaux Hopping In France



By ROBIN WRIGHT

CAZAUBON, France — So you've drooled over the castles in the Loire Valley and gushed over the medieval chateaux in the Perigord.

So you've longed to live in the grand comfort of Louis XIV or Napoleon, wanting to sample more than just a quick tour allows here or a photo sojourn affords there.

WELL, NOW THERE'S a way to try one of those canopied, squishy soft beds in the high-ceilinged "chamber," or be waited on at the long table in the chandeliered dining room.

The chateaux-hotels of France can now offer you a medieval seaside estate built in the 15th century or a Gothic manor overlooking the Seine, a 13th century castle on Lake Leman or the former monastery of Chartreux partially restored by Louis XV.

Take your pick. The selection goes 81 listings long and covers the entire face of France.

SOME COME WITH stables, others offer yachting. Some have tennis courts, others provide pools and even miniature golf. But all offer history at its most opulent, elegant and romantic.

With a little time and a little more money, chateau hopping is a novel way to tour France — and history. Even a one-night stop as a treat from the normal tourist trappings will provide insight into life styles of the past as well as first-class accommodations.

And the prices aren't usually as outrageous as the style suggests. There are four classes of chateau-hotels: luxury, excellent, good, and comfortable, although the last label is a gross understatement of status. All are pretty luxurious by most American standards.

THE PRICES VARY according to class, although even the seven luxury sites have rooms beginning at around $20 per night. Prices can go as high as $80, but this generally includes an apartment complete with kitchen and enough room for a family.

In a couple of cases this will rent a complete minivilla on a larger estate. All prices vary with the season.

The broad spectrum of former royal palaces to modern inns, manor houses to historic homes is divided into seven luxury sites, 26 excellent options, 38 with good labels and 10 comfortable sites. (Although associated for the sake of publicity, each chateau-hotel is individually owned and managed.)

But whatever the rating, all are landscaped in beauty and decorated with the serenity of wealth.

A Reusable Pavilion At Expo '74

The Eastman Kodak Co. Pavilion at Expo '74 in Spokane, Wash., — designed by Kodak architect Franz Johann Schwenk to be "bright, colorful, fair-like" — is reusable and relocatable, in keeping with the world's fair theme, "Celebrating Tomorrow's Fresh New Environment."

Schwenk's assignment was to design a theater-type space, seating approximately 200 persons at one time for a multi-image slide presentation. The location — Spokane with its bright, hot, dry summer days — added further qualifications; the structure would have to allow for a controlled environment, be relatively light-tight, and air-conditioned.

"BASICALLY, I WAS looking for an economical way to cover 200 people for a presentation," Schwenk recalls, "and an air-supported structure, in addition to economy, offered the attractive features of possible reuse and relocation."

The resulting red-and-yellow-striped, air-supported dome — 72 feet in diameter, 35 feet high at the crown — occupies approximately 4,400 square feet. It is located on 8,000 square feet of land at the western edge of the fair site in such a way that any sunlight filtering through the "not completely opaque" dome will not strike the screen on which the featured slide program will be presented.

Composed of heavy-duty vinyl, the air-supported structure is anchored to a concrete ring beam.

A PHOTO INFORMATION center, from which Kodak experts answer consumer questions, offer picture-taking advice and demonstrate Kodak's latest consumer products, is connected to the main pavilion by a red canopy of the same heavy-duty vinyl. In addition to providing light control at the entrance to the theater, the canopy, supported by a large center pole with five cables in a catenary design, serves as a shading device for the waiting public.

Air pressure inside the dome is controlled through the use of revolving doors — three at the entrance, two at the exit. A projection island near the entrance was developed to provide a flow of visitors in a split-traffic pattern.

When one walks into the pavilion, the interior "just seems to open up," says Schwenk.

THE WHITE INTERIOR of the air-supported dome is complemented by a sloping, theater-type floor, covered with a warm brown, custom-made, Kodak II polyester carpeting. Lighting consists of conventional aisle lights along the perimeter with a large circular fixture at the crown of the pavilion. And fully upholstered theater seats, in a continental seating arrangement, suggest "there isn't a bad seat in the house."

What visitors see is a surround-sound, multi-image program, "Know the Land and the People . . . Through Photography."

The eight-minute, multi-image slide presentation is projected on a 12-by-36-foot, semi-circular screen, positioned in such a way as to control ambient light. The projection room itself and facilities for the pavilion staff of more than 15 persons complete the earth-toned interior.

Ground was broken for the Kodak pavilion in January and work was completed well ahead of the May 1 deadline. Environmental Concern Inc., of Spokane, under the supervision of partner E. M. Musgrove, served as co-architect.

As for the structure's Expo after-life, Schwenk notes that it is possible to re-erect the dome, without a foundation, on relatively flat, level ground, using auger-type anchors.

Here's How To Get To The Theater On Time

In New York and London, how do tourists dress, have dinner and get to the theater on time without a nervous breakdown?

Try copying the natives, advises the American Automobile Association. The "savvy" New Yorkers and Londoners have a set of unwritten rules for avoiding the panic button at night.

Rule 1 — On theater nights, always tell your waiter what time the curtain rises and he will "get you to the show on time." Many restaurants in the theater district offer "theater specials."

Rule 2 — If you're the type who needs plenty of time at the dinner table, perhaps you'll prefer to eat lightly before the show and have your big meal later.

Rule 3 — Make your theater reservations by mail as far in advance as possible. In this way, you will have a wider choice of dates and seat locations.

Rule 4 — Discover late show and Sunday afternoon performances. Tickets to these shows are easier to pick up at the last minute.

Rule 5 — If it's a film you're after, a week night, especially early in the evening, is the prime time for catching first-run screenings. A movie that may draw long lines at 8 p.m. is usually able to offer immediate seating at 5:30 or 6 p.m.

Rule 6 — Try a nightclub tour for variety. You are assured of reservations and the cost is controlled.

Rule 7 — Use weekend nights (when the crowds are thickest) for activities that do not require reservations or advance ticketing. This will enable you to meet people and shop. Many of the stores stay open until 9 p.m. on Friday and small shops and boutiques are often open until midnight.

A walk of one mile off the road puts one literally out of sight of civilization. Even in the most popular lake areas, campers can usually find a place to be totally by themselves.

There is also regular light plane transportation from Bariloche, and ample — but expensive — car rental facilities there.

In the geometric center of Bolson — population 4,000 — is the tourist office. If he's there — he's German-born but has spent years in Argentina — Sigriedo Janett, the information director, can point out the best places for fishing, hiking and in the winter skiing.

His favorite line for backpackers seeking a good trail is "close your eyes, spin around a few times and take off in the direction you stop." It is not bad advice.

A pleasant afternoon walk is up to Lago Escondido (Hidden Lake) — every third community in Argentina seems to have its own Lago Escondido — a small lagoon surrounded by a farm and woods.

The path is clearly marked and there is only one steep hill.

A two-day trip would be to the isolated Lago de Tres Colores (Three Colored Lake) which, like its sister lakes, is pure but actually of various colors because of its depth. For the more intrepid there are countless mountain trails between El Bolson and Chile.

There are three hotels in town but the best is the immaculate quiet "Residencia" run by Maria Steiner, a mid-60s woman who does all her own cooking over several wood-burning iron stoves.

The Best Hotels? Here's One Man's All-American List

What do Boston, Montreal, New York, Washington, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego and Kansas City have in common?

For one thing, they have the nine best hotels in North America, says one of the country's leading hotel authorities.

Hernando Courtright, owner of the famous Beverly-Wilshire in Los Angeles, rated his personal choices of the best hotels in America and the world in Town and Country magazine.

His nominees: the Ritz-Carlton in Boston, the one with the same name in Montreal, the Pierre and the Plaza in New York, the Madison in Washington, the Stanford Court in San Francisco, his own Beverly-Wilshire in Los Angeles, the Westgate in San Diego and the Alameda Plaza in Kansas City.

Courtright bypassed Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis with: "There's not even one good hotel there."

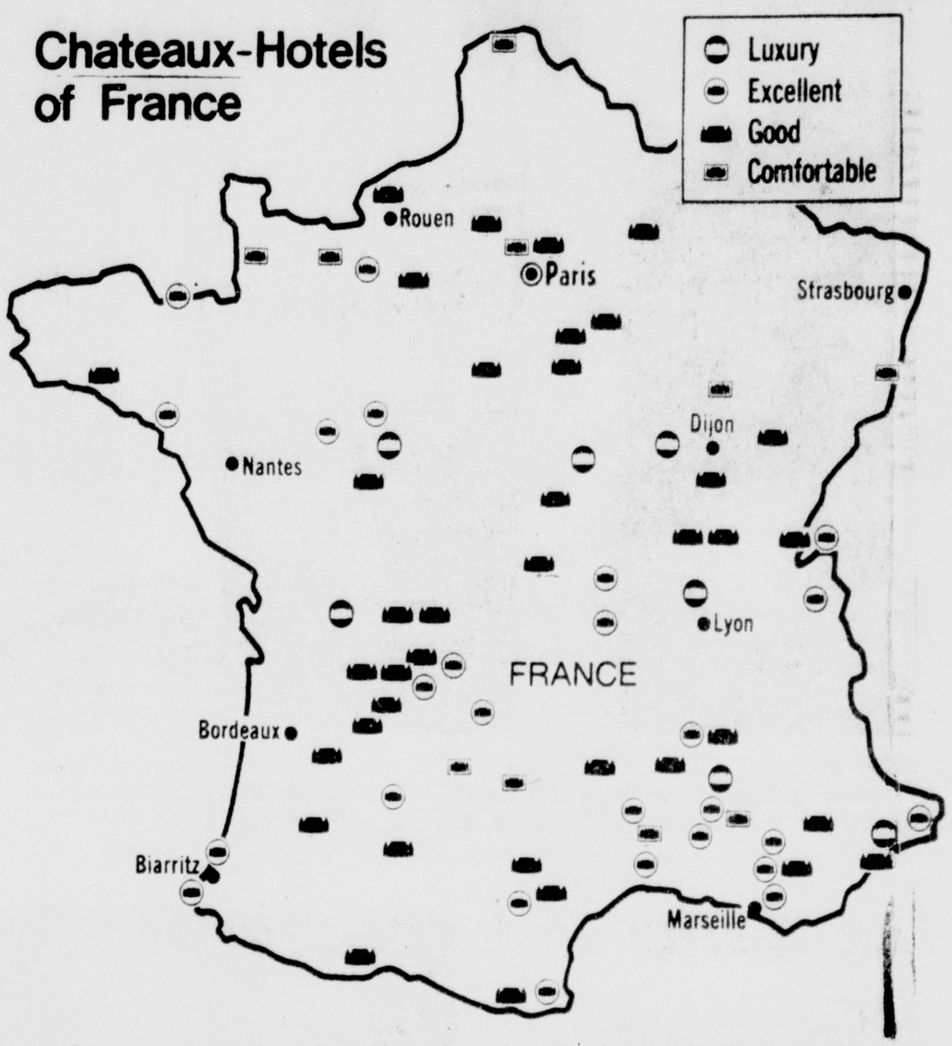
Chateaux Hopping In France



By ROBIN WRIGHT

CAZAUBON, France — So you've drooled over the castles in the Loire Valley and gushed over the medieval chateaux in the Perigord.

So you've longed to live in the grand comfort of Louis XIV or Napoleon, wanting to sample more than just a quick tour allows here or a photo sojourn affords there.

WELL, NOW THERE'S a way to try one of those canopied, squishy soft beds in the high-ceilinged "chamber," or be waited on at the long table in the chandeliered dining room.

The chateaux-hotels of France can now offer you a medieval seaside estate built in the 15th century or a Gothic manor overlooking the Seine, a 13th century castle on Lake Leman or the former monastery of Chartreux partially restored by Louis XV.

Take your pick. The selection goes 81 listings long and covers the entire face of France.

SOME COME WITH stables, others offer yachting. Some have tennis courts, others provide pools and even miniature golf. But all offer history at its most opulent, elegant and romantic.

With a little time and a little more money, chateau hopping is a novel way to tour France — and history. Even a one-night stop as a treat from the normal tourist trappings will provide insight into life styles of the past as well as first-class accommodations.

And the prices aren't usually as outrageous as the style suggests. There are four classes of chateau-hotels: luxury, excellent, good, and comfortable, although the last label is a gross understatement of status. All are pretty luxurious by most American standards.

THE PRICES VARY according to class, although even the seven luxury sites have rooms beginning at around $20 per night. Prices can go as high as $80, but this generally includes an apartment complete with kitchen and enough room for a family.

In a couple of cases this will rent a complete minivilla on a larger estate. All prices vary with the season.

The broad spectrum of former royal palaces to modern inns, manor houses to historic homes is divided into seven luxury sites, 26 excellent options, 38 with good labels and 10 comfortable sites. (Although associated for the sake of publicity, each chateau-hotel is individually owned and managed.)

But whatever the rating, all are landscaped in beauty and decorated with the serenity of wealth.

A Reusable Pavilion At Expo '74

The Eastman Kodak Co. Pavilion at Expo '74 in Spokane, Wash., — designed by Kodak architect Franz Johann Schwenk to be "bright, colorful, fairlike" — is reusable and relocatable, in keeping with the world's fair theme, "Celebrating Tomorrow's Fresh New Environment."

Schwenk's assignment was to design a theater-type space, seating approximately 200 persons at one time for a multi-image slide presentation. The location — Spokane with its bright, hot, dry summer days — added further qualifications; the structure would have to allow for a controlled environment, be relatively light-tight, and air-conditioned.

"BASICALLY, I WAS looking for an economical way to cover 200 people for a presentation," Schwenk recalls, "and an air-supported structure, in addition to economy, offered the attractive features of possible reuse and relocation."

The resulting red-and-yellow-striped, air-supported dome — 72 feet in diameter, 35 feet high at the crown — occupies approximately 4,400 square feet. It is located on 8,000 square feet of land at the western edge of the fair site in such a way that any sunlight filtering through the "not completely opaque" dome will not strike the screen on which the featured slide program will be presented.

Composed of heavy-duty vinyl, the air-supported structure is anchored to a concrete ring beam.

A PHOTO INFORMATION center, from which Kodak experts answer consumer questions, offer picture-taking advice and demonstrate Kodak's latest consumer products, is connected to the main pavilion by a red canopy of the same heavy-duty vinyl. In addition to providing light control at the entrance to the theater, the canopy, supported by a large center pole with five cables in a catenary design, serves as a shading device for the waiting public.

Air pressure inside the dome is controlled through the use of revolving doors — three at the entrance, two at the exit. A projection island near the entrance was developed to provide a flow of visitors in a split-traffic pattern.

When one walks into the pavilion, the interior "just seems to open up," says Schwenk.

THE WHITE INTERIOR of the air-supported dome is complemented by a sloping, theater-type floor, covered with a warm brown, custom-made, Kodak II polyester carpeting. Lighting consists of conventional aisle lights along the perimeter with a large circular fixture at the crown of the pavilion. And fully upholstered theater seats, in a continental seating arrangement, suggest "there isn't a bad seat in the house."

What visitors see is a surround-sound, multi-image program, "Know the Land and the People ... Through Photography."

The eight-minute, multi-image slide presentation is projected on a 12-by-36-foot, semi-circular screen, positioned in such a way as to control ambient light. The projection room itself and facilities for the pavilion staff of more than 15 persons complete the earth-toned interior.

Ground was broken for the Kodak pavilion in January and work was completed well ahead of the May 1 deadline. Environmental Concern Inc., of Spokane, under the supervision of partner E. M. Musgrove, served as co-architect.

As for the structure's Expo after-life, Schwenk notes that it is possible to re-erect the dome, without a foundation, on relatively flat, level ground, using auger-type anchors.

Here's How To Get To The Theater On Time

In New York and London, how do tourists dress, have dinner and get to the theater on time without a nervous breakdown?

Try copying the natives, advises the American Automobile Association. The "savvy" New Yorkers and Londoners have a set of unwritten rules for avoiding the panic button at night.

Rule 1 — On theater nights, always tell your waiter what time the curtain rises and he will "get you to the show on time." Many restaurants in the theater district offer "theater specials."

Rule 2 — If you're the type who needs plenty of time at the dinner table, perhaps you'll prefer to eat lightly before the show and have your big meal later.

Rule 3 — Make your theater reservations by mail as far in advance as possible. In this way, you will have a wider choice of dates and seat locations.

Rule 4 — Discover late show and Sunday afternoon performances. Tickets to these shows are easier to pick up at the last minute.

Rule 5 — If it's a film you're after, a week night, especially early in the evening, is the prime time for catching first-run screenings. A movie that may draw long lines at 8 p.m. is usually able to offer immediate seating at 5:30 or 6 p.m.

Rule 6 — Try a nightclub tour for variety. You are assured of reservations and the cost is controlled.

Rule 7 — Use weekend nights (when the crowds are thickest) for activities that do not require reservations or advance ticketing. This will enable you to meet people and shop. Many of the stores stay open until 9 p.m. on Friday and small shops and boutiques are often open until midnight.

PEAS AND BEANS — UNIVERSAL FAVORITES

Snapbeans are almost, but not quite, foolproof for home gardeners. They are relatively easy to grow, if commonsense rules are applied.

Some of the mistakes that beginners make are discussed in "All About Vegetables" (Chevron Chemical Co., Ortho Division) by the editors.

A common error is planting seed before the soil is warm enough. Beans need a soil temperature of 65 to 85 degrees to germinate rapidly. But you no longer have to worry about that. The calendar has taken care of the problem.

But seeds that should go in one inch deep into the ground in early spring should go about two inches deep as summer draws near.

Failure to fertilize cuts down on production. At the time of preparing your seed bed, mix in 5-10-10 (nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium) at the rate of three pounds per 100 square feet. Apply a mulch to prevent crusting and keep it moist, especially at emergence time. Feeding and watering are continuous affairs with beans.

And to get a full measure of beans from your harvest, keep mature pods picked. A few old pods left on the vine will greatly reduce the yield.

Bush beans need only about 60 days of moderate temperatures to produce a crop of green pods. At the top of the list of popular bush types are Tendercrop, Topcrop and Bush Blue Lake.

Pole beans, however, are generally better suited to late planting. They take up less space, growing up a trellis or teepee, and you get production over a longer period of time.

Kentucky Wonder is still the favorite, but Blue Lake and Ramona are increaing in popularity.

Unlike snapbeans, peas are a cool season crop. English peas really should have gone into the ground in the very early spring to give them plenty of growing time before summer temperatures stop production.

However, the pole type peas can still be planted in Marin with good chances for success. Delay no longer, however.

Peas are heavy feeders, so prepare the soil with recommended amounts of fertilizer and continue side dressing as they grow with 5-10-10 at the rate of three pounds per 100 feet of row.

Plant in rows 18 to 24 inches apart for bush types and 36 inches for pole type peas. Support for pole type peas is essential, but it is an advantage for other types as well. Keeping the plant off the ground makes it easier to cultivate, spray and pick.

Reliable varieties are Alaska (55 to 60 days to maturity), Little Marvel (63 days), and a pole variety, Alderman.

For something different, try growing edible-podded or snowpeas. The low grower, Dwarf Gray Sugar (63 days) can be grown without staking. Pick when very young, just as peas begin to form. If you miss that stage, the peas can be shelled and eaten, but the pods will be tough.

Flavorful cowpeas adapt better to hot summer climates and can be dried and stored as dry peas. Best varieties are Brown Sugar Crowder and Mississippi Silver.

A Power Mower Can Be Hazardous To Your Health

Spring and summer time means gardening time, and the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission cautions that some 123,500 consumers will wind up in hospital emergency rooms nationwide as a result of accidents associated with home yard and garden equipment.

Heading the list of products involved iwth serious injuries and deaths are power lawn mowers, riding mowers and garden tractors.

There are now some 45 million power mowers in use by American families. Annually, they are associated with 60,500 injuries that require hospital emergency room care — serious cuts, punctures, fractures, amputations, loss of sight and other permanent disabilities.

THE GREATEST PERCENTAGE of power lawnmower accidents is attributed to rotary power mowers.

The hazards of blade tips that move at over 200 miles per hour and can hurl projectiles into a neighboring yard with deadly velocity as well as several reports of product defects involving more than 47,000 rotary power mowers and almost 18,000 garden tractors have placed this product among the first selected by the Commission for the development of mandatory safety standards.

In-depth investigations of accidents over the past few years reveal two major hazard patterns associated with rotary power mowers:

1. Direct contact with moving blades — a clump of grass clogged in the discharge chute has lured many a gardener to pain and misfortune as has a quick adjustment while the motor is on. A foot slipping under the mower while mowing on an incline or in tall grass and encountering an obstacle such as a rock has accounted for numerous injuries.

2. Propelled objects — operators, bystanders, children and neighbors nearby have been severely injured by small pieces of wire, small rocks, stones and bits of wood and metal shot from discharge chutes.

MANY ACCIDENTS COULD be averted by careful attention to instruction manuals, proper maintenance and the use of commonsense. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission offers this safety checklist as a reminder to operators of power mowers:

Wear sturdy shoes.

Never mow when tired or in a hurry.

Rake the lawn carefully prior to mowing to remove any debris.

Be sure that others are out of the area before starting.

Never remove any of the safety guards and shields that should be attached to the mower.

Use caution when starting the mower. Do not stand in a direct line with the discharge chute.

Never leave the mower running and unattended.

Never refuel the mower while it is running or hot. Store gasoline in a safety container away from living areas.

Never tip or lift the mower when it is running.

Turn the mower off and make sure the blades have stopped rotating before clearing the discharge chute. Disconnect the spark plug before further maintenance or repairs.

Wear safety glasses to protect eyes.

Never permit children to use a mower and supervise inexperienced operators very carefully.

OPERATORS OF ELECTRIC mowers should use brightly colored cords to avoid accidentally severing them. Make certain the machine is grounded and that any extension cord used is the proper gauge. Never mow in wet grass.

Slopes are a major hazard for riding mowers. Operators of riding mowers and garden tractors have been injured and killed when the mower overturns or when the driver or extra rider, sometimes a child, falls off.

Children also have been severely injured when a careless operator goes into reverse without looking behind first.

Power hedge trimmers — both single and double edge — also are convenient but potentially dangerous garden aids. An estimated 8,400 persons required emergency room care last year for injuries that included severe cuts and amputations. Many gardneers find it necessary to remove the left hand from the trimmer to hold branches away from the cutting blade, or to direct branches into the cutting blade, and inadvertently injure themselves.

TRIMMERS OFTEN ARE heavy and unwieldy, and the removal of one hand can limit control and direction. Fatigue, hand cramps and standing on a chair or bos while trimming have all contributed to some reported accidents.

In several cases the cord was cited as another contributing cause. The cord can limit direction and distance, and accident victims have reported they were distracted while pulling the cord or while trying to keep the cord from being cut.

Consumers who use hedge trimmers or similar equipment should observe the following tips:

Read instructions. When renting a trimmer, be sure to receive thorough operating instructions and safety guidelines.

Don't hurry.

Keep hands out of the way.

Use specially designed extension cord connectors so the cord will not pull out when tension is applied. A belt hook to keep the cord away from the blades also would be a good idea.

WHEN PURCHASING A trimmer, seek one that is lightweight, easy to maneuver, and incorporates safe design features. Check to see that the position of the forward grip handle is located above and away from the cutting blade.

Look for a trimmer with a pressure-sensitive switch that cuts the power immediately when the pressure is released.

For additional information or to report a hazardous product or a product-related injury, call the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission toll-free hotline (800) 638-2666.

The Geranium Is Gardener's Good Friend

A gardener's friend with uncommon beauty, the geranium is among the easiest plants of all to grow.

You will find three types of Geranims in California nurseries — the common zonal, Martha Washington and Ivy geranium. All are members of the Pelargonium family, but only Martha Washingtons are referred to as such.

There are other Geraniums which are grown for their leaf patterns or scent, but the California Association of Nurserymen reports that these are less popular and consequently less frequently found.

ZONAL GERANIUMS grow well outdoors in most parts of the state including Marin County. They are best when pruned frequently. When grown in pots, they should be fed once a month to bring out the maximum of bloom and beauty.

Flowers of the zonal varieties are big, rounded heads of color. They come either double or single and it's a matter of personal preference which you choose. The best way to select them is to visit a nursery and see them in bloom. Color selection is wide enough to suit everyone, with shadings of salmon, pink, red and white.

The same goes for Pelargoniums. They are full of buds and blooms in nurseries right now. The flowers are more delicate, but, oh, so beautiful.

Grown them in pots for display on patios and porches.

Zonals will bloom for you right through summer and fall. Pelargoniums provide a repeat performance when lightly pruned after the first flowering.

THE TRAILING IVY geranium is well suited for hanging baskets, and when planted at the top of a retaining wall. It makes a colorful display as blooms cascade. It also makes an excellent groundcover and is especially popular for this use in Southern California.

Geraniums and Pelargoniums are sun-lovers. They are resistant to drought, but are much happier with regular watering.

Figure on watering potted plants twice a week and make sure proper drainange has been provided in the bottom of the pots.

THE IVY GERANIUM is an excellent choice for that hanging basket, contributing an apple green foliage and profuse blooms that are so pleasing to the eyes.

A New Book on Lawns

"A Perfect Lawn" by Dr. R. W. Schery covers lawns and lawn-making in all American climates.

It's A Year Of The Herbs For All Home Gardeners

This is the year when most everyone is paying attention to their own herb garden. Not only can one derive culinary miracles but also there's pleasure in pinching and sniffing them when you pass through the garden.

A carpet of Wooly Thyme on or about stepping stones or encroaching on a garden path is something you can savor every time you crush it underfoot. A shrub of rosemary near the back entrance is available for your kitchen needs and also for your pinching pleasure. Likewise a planting of sage.

Then there is the herb which can be planted to please the family cat. This would be Nepeta or catnip, a dense gray cover for open ground, attractive to look at and so attractive to cats.

Be sure to check at the nursery where you can find a good number of these aromatic standbys offered in small pots.

After you have made your selection, choose a place near the kitchen, and set out plants from the local nursery. The pleasures of selecting herbs from your own garden for that very special bit of Culinary art will be great. A strawberry jar will provide a portable herb garden.

Be sure to include, in addition to the above, tarragon, basil, marjoram, chives, mint, parsley, savory and dill. The more the merrier.

Along with your home grown vegetables, the addition of herbs in your garden will afford the family new taste sensations every week.

Some Flowers That Are For Eating

There are numerous plants with edible flowers, many of them quite common in the flower and vegetable garden. Here are some of the most popular:

Squash flowers. These generally open in the early morning, and they are quite spectacular. Some measure four inches across in a dazzling display of bright yellow velvety petals. A good way of eating squash blossoms is to fry them in batter to have with breakfast eggs.

Nasturtium flowers have a sweet nectar which is tasty, and the petals are edible, too. They have a slightly pungent flavor similar to cress, and can be added to a salad to add a spicy touch.

Broccoli and cauliflower heads are tight flower bud clusters. Left on the plants to mature, they will open up and display yellowish flowers common to the cabbage family. Hot weather induces flowering more quickly than cool weather, which explains why broccoli and cauliflower should be planted out early in the spring. It's even better, however, to treat them as a fall crop by transplanting young plants into the garden in midsummer to mature in the cooler days of fall.

Marigold petals make an excellent substitute for saffron for adding saffron flavor and color to scrambled eggs and rice dishes.

Edible hollyhock flowers make colorful flower containers for dips, and although pansy flowers have no flavor, they are edible and their colorful "faces" add interest to gelatin desserts.

When using these flowers it is best to use only garden fresh types that have been washed. Don't use florist flowers, since these may contain toxic chemicals, and don't use other parts such as leaves or pods.

LARGE AND COLORFUL blooms like this that appear on many kinds of squash, particularly the zucchini and butternut kinds, are edible, and delicious when fried in a batter.

Mother Nature Vs. The Weeds

The use of chemical weed killers on your lawn is sometimes necessary as a last resort, and when it is be sure to follow the label directions carefully.

But there are times when nature can do the job for you.

The American Association of Nurserymen points out that maintaining good healthy soil and cutting grass to a proper length can help keep crabgrass and other weeds out of the lawn. For blue grass, cut no lower than two-and-a-half inches. For bermuda or zoysia type lawns, one-half to three- quarters of an inch.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Give fuchsias a generous feeding and pinch back the new shoots for additional strength and fullness — and more blooms — later.

✓Still time to plant gladiolus bulbs. Planted now, the "glads" will provide your garden color and flowers for cutting into fall.

✓Divide tall Bearded Iris after it goes out of bloom — but only if clumps are crowded. Every third year is about average for dividing them.

✓By now you should have picked-up and destroyed all of the old camellia flowers which fell to the ground. This is the best prevention for blossom blight disease which would make next year's buds drop off before blooming.

✓Newly-planted citrus should be irrigated frequently. Make an irrigation basin around the trees and mound soil up so that the water doesn't come in direct contact with the tree trunk.

✓Check with your nurseryman for herbs available now in small pots for your garden or window sill.

✓Keep the spent blooms picked from your roses to encourage longer and better bloom.

Read instructions. When renting a trimmer, be sure to receive thorough operating instructions and safety guidelines.

Don't hurry.

Keep hands out of the way.

Use specially designed extension cord connectors so the cord will not pull out when tension is applied. A belt hook to keep the cord away from the blades also would be a good idea.

WHEN PURCHASING A trimmer, seek one that is lightweight, easy to maneuver, and incorporates safe design features. Check to see that the position of the forward grip handle is located above and away from the cutting blade.

Look for a trimmer with a pressure-sensitive switch that cuts the power immediately when the pressure is released.

The Geranium Is Gardener's Good Friend

A gardener's friend with uncommon beauty, the geranium is among the easiest plants of all to grow.

You will find three types of Geranims in California nurseries — the common zonal, Martha Washington and Ivy geranium. All are members of the Pelargonium family, but only Martha Washingtons are referred to as such.

There are other Geraniums which are grown for their leaf patterns or scent, but the California Association of Nurserymen reports that these are less popular and consequently less frequently found.

ZONAL GERANIUMS grow well outdoors in most parts of the state including Marin County. They are best when pruned frequently. When grown in pots, they should be fed once a month to bring out the maximum of bloom and beauty.

Flowers of the zonal varieties are big, rounded heads of color. They come either double or single and it's a matter of personal preference which you choose. The best way to select them is to visit a nursery and see them in bloom. Color selection is wide enough to suit everyone, with shadings of salmon, pink, red and white.

The same goes for Pelargoniums. They are full of buds and blooms in nurseries right now. The flowers are more delicate, but, oh, so beautiful.

Grown them in pots for display on patios and porches.

Zonals will bloom for you right through summer and fall. Pelargoniums provide a repeat performance when lightly pruned after the first flowering.

THE TRAILING IVY geranium is well suited for hanging baskets, and when planted at the top of a retaining wall. It makes a colorful display as blooms cascade. It also makes an excellent groundcover and is especially popular for this use in Southern California.

Geraniums and Pelargoniums are sun-lovers. They are resistant to drought, but are much happier with regular watering.

Figure on watering potted plants twice a week and make sure proper drainange has been provided in the bottom of the pots.

THE IVY GERANIUM is an excellent choice for that hanging basket, contributing an apple green foliage and profuse blooms that are so pleasing to the eyes.

A New Book on Lawns

"A Perfect Lawn" by Dr. R. W. Schery covers lawns and lawn-making in all American climates.

It's A Year Of The Herbs For All Home Gardeners

This is the year when most everyone is paying attention to their own herb garden. Not only can one derive culinary miracles but also there's pleasure in pinching and sniffing them when you pass through the garden.

A carpet of Wooly Thyme on or about stepping stones or encroaching on a garden path is something you can savor every time you crush it underfoot. A shrub of rosemary near the back entrance is available for your kitchen needs and also for your pinching pleasure. Likewise a planting of sage.

Then there is the herb which can be planted to please the family cat. This would be Nepeta or catnip, a dense gray cover for open ground, attractive to look at and so attractive to cats.

Be sure to check at the nursery where you can find a good number of these aromatic standbys offered in small pots.

After you have made your selection, choose a place near the kitchen, and set out plants from the local nursery. The pleasures of selecting herbs from your own garden for that very special bit of Culinary art will be great. A strawberry jar will provide a portable herb garden.

Be sure to include, in addition to the above, tarragon, basil, marjoram, chives, mint, parsley, savory and dill. The more the merrier.

Along with your home grown vegetables, the addition of herbs in your garden will afford the family new taste sensations every week.

Some Flowers That Are For Eating

There are numerous plants with edible flowers, many of them quite common in the flower and vegetable garden. Here are some of the most popular:

Squash flowers. These generally open in the early morning, and they are quite spectacular. Some measure four inches across in a dazzling display of bright yellow velvety petals. A good way of eating squash blossoms is to fry them in batter to have with breakfast eggs.

Nasturtium flowers have a sweet nectar which is tasty, and the petals are edible, too. They have a slightly pungent flavor similar to cress, and can be added to a salad to add a spicy touch.

Broccoli and cauliflower heads are tight flower bud clusters. Left on the plants to mature, they will open up and display yellowish flowers common to the cabbage family. Hot weather induces flowering more quickly than cool weather, which explains why broccoli and cauliflower should be planted out early in the spring. It's even better, however, to treat them as a fall crop by transplanting young plants into the garden in midsummer to mature in the cooler days of fall.

Marigold petals make an excellent substitute for saffron for adding saffron flavor and color to scrambled eggs and rice dishes.

Edible hollyhock flowers make colorful flower containers for dips, and although pansy flowers have no flavor, they are edible and their colorful "faces" add interest to gelatin desserts.

When using these flowers it is best to use only garden fresh types that have been washed. Don't use florist flowers, since these may contain toxic chemicals, and don't use other parts such as leaves or pods.

LARGE AND COLORFUL blooms like this that appear on many kinds of squash, particularly the zucchini and butternut kinds, are edible, and delicious when fried in a batter.

Mother Nature Vs. The Weeds

The use of chemical weed killers on your lawn is sometimes necessary as a last resort, and when it is be sure to follow the label directions carefully.

But there are times when nature can do the job for you.

The American Association of Nurserymen points out that maintaining good healthy soil and cutting grass to a proper length can help keep crabgrass and other weeds out of the lawn. For blue grass, cut no lower than two-and-a-half inches. For bermuda or zoysia type lawns, one-half to three- quarters of an inch.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Give fuchsias a generous feeding and pinch back the new shoots for additional strength and fullness — and more blooms — later.

✓Still time to plant gladiolus bulbs. Planted now, the "glads" will provide your garden color and flowers for cutting into fall.

✓Divide tall Bearded Iris after it goes out of bloom — but only if clumps are crowded. Every third year is about average for dividing them.

✓By now you should have picked-up and destroyed all of the old camellia flowers which fell to the ground. This is the best prevention for blossom blight disease which would make next year's buds drop off before blooming.

✓Newly-planted citrus should be irrigated frequently. Make an irrigation basin around the trees and mound soil up so that the water doesn't come in direct contact with the tree trunk.

✓Check with your nurseryman for herbs available now in small pots for your garden or window sill.

✓Keep the spent blooms picked from your roses to encourage longer and better bloom.

AN INVITATION TO TRAVEL MEMORY LANE

YOU CAN CALL it a collector's box, a nostalgia box, an ecology box, a keepsake hutch or any one of a number of other names. Whatever you call it and whatever you fill it with, it's an attractive addition to your decor, hanging on the wall or sitting on an end table or dresser. And it's a constant invitation for pleasant trips down memory lane. The boxes being shown here by NBC-TV's Kelly Lange were both built from a Steve Ellingson pattern. To build your own, or to come up with a number of other variations that are possible, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Ecology Box-Keepsake Hutch Pattern 532. Along with the variable pattern, you get complete instructions and lots of pictures. As for the contents, there are endless possibilities. Beans, peas, noodles, etc., make an appropriate collection for the kitchen. Or a childhood nostalgia box might hold baby shoes, teething ring, pictures, etc. Or how about a spice hutch? Or a hobby display? The box makes a great gift, and it is not a difficult project. Nor does it require elaborate power tools.

Expert Advice On How To Survive In Buggy World

By VIVIAN BROWN

Big black ants streaking across your kitchen counter? Flies tuning up on your warm window panes?

It's all part of the warm weather harassment that reaches its finale when mosquitoes hatch out to do their annual sting.

What to do about the itching, crawling, winging pests?

"The only escape might be to Antarctica. But even that might be too late. The German cockroach has gone everywhere man has gone." So says Dr. Douglass Mampe, entomologist of Elizabeth, N.J.

"In the United States the farther south you go, the buggier it gets. But in the North where they have biting flies and mosquitoes, they make up in numbers what they lack in variety.

THE NEW SEX attractants haven't been too much help in foiling the average pest, he says. Nobody even knows what attracts the cockroach, who apparently isn't as sexy as his numbers might imply.

Sex attractants are useful only when insects have strong hormones, Mampe says. Even then they might develop strains that would be as resistant to the attractants as they are to some insecticides.

Clothes moths and carpet beetles have almost disappeared with the advent of synthetic fibers and treated woolens, he points out. "But insects have learned to live on every crop man has grown. In 20 years they will have learned to enjoy rayon or whatever."

Mampe is director of technical services for the National Pest Control Association and thus heads up their research. He advises:

CLEANLINESS IS the first key to keeping insects and rodents away. Proper garbage disposal, careful food storage — in metal or glass — and disposal of junk will help eliminate favorite breeding places of insects.

He offers these additional pointers:

Big black ants . . . They come to your house for food and water from a tree perhaps 100 feet away. The best way to keep them out is to treat the base of your building with materials containing chlordane.

Mosquitoes . . . Some species have even developed a resistance to DDT. The best route is cleanliness and removal of breeding spots — stagnant water, wet garbage and the like. The mosquito is man's biggest insect enemy in many areas.

Fleas . . . Rid the pet of them before going off on vacation. Otherwise fleas mature and are hungry when the family returns. Pest control people often get calls late at night when returning family members find they cannot sleep in the house.

Flies . . . Disease-carriers. The best way to handle: use screens, and resin strips.

Wasps . . . Below 55 degrees they are lethargic. Above that you may need to spray.

TERMITES . . . After three days of 60-degree temperature you may spot them in a mating flight when they swarm to a basement or first-floor window. Hundreds of wings on a sill may be an indication of an infestation. Unlike flying ants, which they resemble, termites do not have pinched waists. Home owners shouldn't panic. Call a pest controller.

Mice . . . They travel only 10 or 20 feet in a lifetime. The old-fashioned mouse trap is best. Mice may have developed resistance to certain chemicals.

Squirrels . . . Even the pest industry has difficulty ridding a house of squirrels. They use the have-a-heart kind of trap-and-release cage. Bait is moved farther in until the squirrel becomes confident and walks in. Then the trap is set.

Choose your pest controller carefully, Mampe advises.

AFTER TALKING to three or so, check out the one you like with the local Better Business Bureau. Reliable companies are members of state or national associations and are supporting a code of ethics of their organization.

Dogs and cats should be kept tick and flea-free. Keep in mind that the tick spread bubonic plague over Europe.

"The house should be simultaneously rid of the pests as they are removed from animals. Contrary to popular opinion, the American tick always lives outside. But the brown dog tick always lives indoors. After it feeds on the dog, it drops off, hides in a crack in the baseboard or the edge of the carpet or behind a picture frame or in the recesses of upholstered furniture until it sheds its skin — one of three times it does — and returns to look for the dog."

Materials containing pyrethrins or malathion are considered best for use on the dog. The house may be treated at the same time with diazinon or dursban.

When pest controllers do a house, the house is ready for occupancy in two to four hours.

PEDICULOSIS LICE in the hair is getting to be a national problem — the most recent outbreak was in Indiana — and many people call pest control companies to treat their houses, he comments. But Mampe insists it is a medical problem and he attributes the spread of it to the longhair fad.

Dr. Mampe, who became interested in snakes as a boy, and earned his Ph.D. in entomology at North Carolina State, has a favorite insect — the inch-long harmless iridescent scarab, a beetle that lives outdoors "and probably plays a role as pollinator of more primitive things like magnolias.

Although he is inclined to think the only sure way to destroy an insect is the A and B block method (put it on the A-block and smash it with the B-block), insecticides containing diazinin, dursban and baygon are usually effective, he says. But he reminds users that all insecticides are poisons and must be handled carefully.

One reason in this ecological age there are more calls for professional help — people are afraid to misuse poisons.

The Kitchen Is The Key To How Others Will Judge The Whole House

By ANDY LANG

Real estate brokers know that nothing sells a house faster than an attractive kitchen.

It the kitchen is pleasing to the eye, prospective buyers are likely to overlook frailties in other parts of the house. If it isn't, the seller will have a difficult time getting a family to appreciate the structure's more armirable qualities.

While appearance alone is usually a good key to the value of a kitchen, efficiency is a more important consideration. It's the work-saving kitchen that will be cherished in the years to come.

UNLESS YOU ARE having a house built to order, you must make your decision on what is already there. But more and more families are having their kitchens remodeled these days.

When extensive changes must be made, kitchen remodeling is fairly expensive. The trick, therefore, is to plan a kitchen that will meet both your needs and your budget. That calls for the inclusion of ideas that meet the special demands of your family and not just those which are incorporated into the kitchens of others.

Your contractor can be of great help to you in making a decision on the type of kitchen necessary for your family, but you must be prepared to tell him in detail what your priorities are.

THERE ARE A number of good books on the market that present guidelines, as well as building considerations and alternatives for you to apply during your planning. One of the best of these, a newly revised edition of "Planning and Remodeling Kitchens" (Sunset Books), goes into all the details necessary to make your choices no matter what your life style, budget or available space.

There are five main types of kitchen layouts — a strip or one-wall kitchen; a pullman or two-wall kitchen; a U-shape kitchen, and a kitchen with an island.

The one-waller is used in small-space situations, such as vacation cabins or apartments. The pullman divides appliances and work areas between two parallel walls, creating a work triangle and more counter space, but with the disadvantage, in some cases, of having a corridor that encourages foot traffic. The L-shape kitchen divides appliances and counter space between two walls that meet at right angles.

THE U-SHAPED kitchen, considered by many experts to be the most efficient floor plan, divides appliances and work areas among three connected walls, arranged in the U-configuration. The island kitchen has a free-standing unit as centrally located as possible and is especially useful in defining large kitchen spaces into functional work areas.

As the book points out: "Each of these kitchen floor plans presents both advantages and disadvantages to the user."

To make a choice, a family must begin with an appraisal of the family activities that depend on a functional kitchen. Among the things to be taken into consideration are whether the family gathers in the kitchen for meals three times a day; whether you want to eliminate family traffic in kitchen areas during work preparation; the frequency of entertainment and whether it is formal or informal; whether more than one person does the cooking, and other factors unique to your family.

Consider Lighting In Your Decorating

At decorating time, you probably think of how daylight will affect the new setting. But don't overlook the decorative effects of your after-dark lighting too.

Good lighting can give even low-cost decorating more impact by brightening colors, patterns and textures. You can also freshen the interior with the new design and fashion excitement of the fixtures themsevles, coordinated with the styling of your furnishings.

Revitalizing the present home becomes especially important to the many families today who find the cost and scarcity of new-home financing an obstacle to moving.

IN YOUR DECOR planning, select lighting fixtures that will supply basic needs for proper vision, safety and security and also beautify your rooms, advises the American Home Lighting Institute.

The breadth and scope of design choices in the latest fixtures may surprise you in a visit to a well-stocked lighting showroom — Contemporary, Traditional, New World, Old World, subtle to rich colors in metals, glass and woods.

These new fixtures provide glitter or glow, diffused softness or a concentrated brightness — suitable to every room and requirement.

So many lighting options can both excite and puzzle the visitor. What style will complement your chairs or buffet? What size and shape would look best in that spot? How much light is needed and what kind?

Answers to such questions come easier with expert guidance at home lighting centers.

TRAINED LIGHTING consultants can suggest how to use dimmers, switches and other variable controls to allow one light or another to be turned up to full brilliance now or dimmed to relaxing softness later, according to occasion.

Leading interior designers stress the beauties of an interplay of light levels. Indiscriminate floodlighting of a room only flattens tones and textures.

A complete lighting plan will consider how to use shadows as a decorative complement to light. At the same time it will spare the eyestrain that can result from too great a contrast between the brightness of a reading or working surface and adjacent darkness.

Some Sources For That Extra Storage

Did you ever hear of a new home or apartment dweller complain of too much storage space? Chances are very small — most of us struggle to make do with what's available.

For space-seekers who feel they've squeeed the last inch from the hall closet or the new modular wall unit, designers at Eastman Chemical Products, marketers of Kodel polyester, have some suggestions to increase storage areas in your home:

Any end table — particularly a round one — covered with a to-the-floor fabric skirt can be used to hide unwieldy boxes or packages without attracting attention.

Any open, decorative shelves placed midway up a wall can turn into storage. Simply cover the space below with a decorative screen or drape fabric like a curtain from the underside of the shelf.

Any furniture placed kitty-corner in a room, such as a chest or an armoir, provides another corner to store items that might not fit into a closet. This debunks the old rule that kitty-corner furniture wastes space.

Don't forget that genuine storage or steamer tunks are very often used in decorating today, most likely because clever people realized they held things, in addition to being very decorative. Plywood cubes covered with a carpet of polyester — the cuttings from a recent wall-to-wall installation or any other small amount of yardage — can also be useful to store items while acting as extra seating. If you cover the cubes with a polyester, you'll have a modern, decorative accent in addition to easy maintenance and luxurious seating.

Eastman designers have a few extra hints about the usual storage places that could prove to be very useful:

Store things within things. For example, if you have a charming collection of china tea cups that you'd like to replace with another one of china animals, wrap the tea cups in tissue and store them with the winter clothes. When it's time for the winter clothes to come out of mothballs, you'll be ready to look at the cups again. This can work well with clothing, like storing small evening bags in large totes not frequently used.

Suitcases that are not often used are another source of space for items like the summer draperies or curtains or the flowered slipcovers that are replaced in winter. And if there's space left, use it for summer shoes or sandals. Just keep each suitcase according to season.

HERE'S YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I'd like to apply a penetrating oil stain to the wood siding on a house we are having built. Will one coat be sufficient?

A. — The rule of thumb on stain is that two coats are preferred on rough-surfaced siding, one coat on smooth-surfaced. The second coat should be put on rough siding immediately after the first coat. If you wait too long — more than an hour — the first coat will act as a sealer and prevent the second coat from penetrating. After the second coat is applied, keep an eye on it. If it hasn't penetrated after an hour or two, wipe off the excess.

Q. — I have sketched a patio lounge I plan to build. There will be wooden wheels on one end for easy movement from one place to another. I expect to make these of two by six lumber. What's the best way to cut them?

A. — Use a compass to inscribe two circles on the wood. How you cut the wheels to shape depends on the type of tools you have on hand. It's a tough job with a hand saw, not only because of the work involved in cutting but because of all the sanding that will have to be done to shape the wheels properly. It's easier to use a power sabre saw, lathe, bandsaw or stationary jigsaw with the right blade.

Q. — We have a piece of property more than four acres. Part of it is hilly, part flat. Where is the best place on it to locate a house that we will use for weekends and vacations?

A. — Nobody can tell you that unless they see the property. A lot of factors are involved, including the multiplicity or lack of trees, the location of the access road, whether the house will be with or without a basement and, possibly the most important of all, the drainage conditions on the land. Desirable drainage soils include sands, loams and gravels. The highest point on the property is often the best, because it provides the proper surface drainage away from the house in all directions, and the subsurface or ground water will be at the greatest depth.

Also good is a hillside where drainage water can be routed around the high side of the house for runoff at the ends and low side. But there are times when it is most convenient to place the house on flat ground, in which case the soil around the structure should be built up or graded to facilitate the flow of surface water away from the foundation.

Q. — In making a wooden benchfor outdoors (it will be attached to a wall), I expect to use two-by-two lumber with spaces between them for the seat. How far apart should the spaces be?

A. — If the seat is to be used as is, about half an inch. If it is to be covered with a cushion, the slats can be an inch or an inch and a half apart.

A. — Is there any advantage to having a stone hearth in front of a fireplace level with the floor?

A. — Only that it makes it easier to brush sweepings into the fireplace. Raised hearths wider than the fireplaces are common in contemporary design.

Q. — We moved into a house this past winter with gas heat. Our neighbor says the pilot light in the burner should be turned off after the heating season and relit at the start of the next season. Our utility man says the pilot light should not be turned off. Who is right?

A. — There are two schools of thought about this. One says turning off the pilot light saves gas. The other says that keeping it on uses only a tiny amount of gas but prevents condensation and corrosion. I once lived in a house with gas heat, never turned off the pilot light and never had any trouble. The burner was equipped with a safety device to keep the gas valve closed if the pilot light went out — as all gas burners should be and generally are. Be sure yours has this equipment.

In the United States the farther south you go, the buggier it gets. But in the North where they have biting flies and mosquitoes, they make up in numbers what they lack in variety.

THE NEW SEX attractants haven't been too much help in foiling the average pest, he says. Nobody even knows what attracts the cockroach, who apparently isn't as sexy as his numbers might imply.

Sex attractants are useful only when insects have strong hormones, Mampe says. Even then they might develop strains that would be as resistant to the attractants as they are to some insecticides.

Clothes moths and carpet beetles have almost disappeared with the advent of synthetic fibers and treated woolens, he points out. "But insects have learned to live on every crop man has grown. In 20 years they will have learned to enjoy rayon or whatever."

Mampe is director of technical services for the National Pest Control Association and thus heads up their research. He advises:

CLEANLINESS IS the first key to keeping insects and rodents away. Proper garbage disposal, careful food storage — in metal or glass — and disposal of junk will help eliminate favorite breeding places of insects.

He offers these additional pointers:

Big black ants . . . They come to your house for food and water from a tree perhaps 100 feet away. The best way to keep them out is to treat the base of your building with materials containing chlordane.

Mosquitoes . . . Some species have even developed a resistance to DDT. The best route is cleanliness and removal of breeding spots — stagnant water, wet garbage and the like. The mosquito is man's biggest insect enemy in many areas.

Fleas . . . Rid the pet of them before going off on vacation. Otherwise fleas mature and are hungry when the family returns. Pest control people often get calls late at night when returning family members find they cannot sleep in the house.

Flies . . . Disease-carriers. The best way to handle: use screens, and resin strips.

Wasps . . . Below 55 degrees they are lethargic. Above that you may need to spray.

TERMITES . . . After three days of 60-degree temperature you may spot them in a mating flight when they swarm to a basement or first-floor window. Hundreds of wings on a sill may be an indication of an infestation. Unlike flying ants, which they resemble, termites do not have pinched waists. Home owners shouldn't panic. Call a pest controller.

Mice . . . They travel only 10 or 20 feet in a lifetime. The old-fashioned mouse trap is best. Mice may have developed resistance to certain chemicals.

Squirrels . . . Even the pest industry has difficulty ridding a house of squirrels. They use the have-a-heart kind of trap-and-release cage. Bait is moved farther in until the squirrel becomes confident and walks in. Then the trap is set.

Choose your pest controller carefully, Mampe advises.

AFTER TALKING to three or so, check out the one you like with the local Better Business Bureau. Reliable companies are members of state or national associations and are supporting a code of ethics of their organization.

Dogs and cats should be kept tick and flea-free. Keep in mind that the tick spread bubonic plague over Europe.

"The house should be simultaneously rid of the pests as they are removed from animals. Contrary to popular opinion, the American tick always lives outside. But the brown dog tick always lives indoors. After it feeds on the dog, it drops off, hides in a crack in the baseboard or the edge of the carpet or behind a picture frame or in the recesses of upholstered furniture until it sheds its skin — one of three times it does — and returns to look for the dog."

Materials containing pyrethrins or malathion are considered best for use on the dog. The house may be treated at the same time with diazinon or dursban.

When pest controllers do a house, the house is ready for occupancy in two to four hours.

PEDICULOSIS LICE in the hair is getting to be a national problem — the most recent outbreak was in Indiana — and many people call pest control companies to treat their houses, he comments. But Mampe insists it is a medical problem and he attributes the spread of it to the longhair fad.

Dr. Mampe, who became interested in snakes as a boy, and earned his Ph.D. in entomology at North Carolina State, has a favorite insect — the inch-long harmless iridescent scarab, a beetle that lives outdoors "and probably plays a role as pollinator of more primitive things like magnolias.

Although he is inclined to think the only sure way to destroy an insect is the A and B block method (put it on the A-block and smash it with the B-block), insecticides containing diazinin, dursban and baygon are usually effective, he says. But he reminds users that all insecticides are poisons and must be handled carefully.

One reason in this ecological age there are more calls for professional help — people are afraid to misuse poisons.

HERE'S YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I'd like to apply a penetrating oil stain to the wood siding on a house we are having built. Will one coat be sufficient?

A. — The rule of thumb on stain is that two coats are preferred on rough-surfaced siding, one coat on smooth-surfaced. The second coat should be put on rough siding immediately after the first coat. If you wait too long — more than an hour — the first coat will act as a sealer and prevent the second coat from penetrating. After the second coat is applied, keep an eye on it. If it hasn't penetrated after an hour or two, wipe off the excess.

Q. — I have sketched a patio lounge I plan to build. There will be wooden wheels on one end for easy movement from one place to another. I expect to make these of two by six lumber. What's the best way to cut them?

A. — Use a compass to inscribe two circles on the wood. How you cut the wheels to shape depends on the type of tools you have on hand. It's a tough job with a hand saw, not only because of the work involved in cutting but because of all the sanding that will have to be done to shape the wheels properly. It's easier to use a power sabre saw, lathe, bandsaw or stationary jigsaw with the right blade.

Q. — We have a piece of property more than four acres. Part of it is hilly, part flat. Where is the best place on it to locate a house that we will use for weekends and vacations?

A. — Nobody can tell you that unless they see the property. A lot of factors are involved, including the multiplicity or lack of trees, the location of the access road, whether the house will be with or without a basement and, possibly the most important of all, the drainage conditions on the land. Desirable drainage soils include sands, loams and gravels. The highest point on the property is often the best, because it provides the proper surface drainage away from the house in all directions, and the subsurface or ground water will be at the greatest depth.

Also good is a hillside where drainage water can be routed around the high side of the house for runoff at the ends and low side. But there are times when it is most convenient to place the house on flat ground, in which case the soil around the structure should be built up or graded to facilitate the flow of surface water away from the foundation.

Q. — In making a wooden benchfor outdoors (it will be attached to a wall), I expect to use two-by-two lumber with spaces between them for the seat. How far apart should the spaces be?

A. — If the seat is to be used as is, about half an inch. If it is to be covered with a cushion, the slats can be an inch or an inch and a half apart.

A. — Is there any advantage to having a stone hearth in front of a fireplace level with the floor?

A. — Only that it makes it easier to brush sweepings into the fireplace. Raised hearths wider than the fireplaces are common in contemporary design.

Q. — We moved into a house this past winter with gas heat. Our neighbor says the pilot light in the burner should be turned off after the heating season and relit at the start of the next season. Our utility man says the pilot light should not be turned off. Who is right?

A. — There are two schools of thought about this. One says turning off the pilot light saves gas. The other says that keeping it on uses only a tiny amount of gas but prevents condensation and corrosion. I once lived in a house with gas heat, never turned off the pilot light and never had any trouble. The burner was equipped with a safety device to keep the gas valve closed if the pilot light went out — as all gas burners should be and generally are. Be sure yours has this equipment.

Some Sources For That Extra Storage

Did you ever hear of a new home or apartment dweller complain of too much storage space? Chances are very small — most of us struggle to make do with what's available.

For space-seekers who feel they've squeeed the last inch from the hall closet or the new modular wall unit, designers at Eastman Chemical Products, marketers of Kodel polyester, have some suggestions to increase storage areas in your home:

Any end table — particularly a round one — covered with a to-the-floor fabric skirt can be used to hide unwieldy boxes or packages without attracting attention.

Any open, decorative shelves placed midway up a wall can turn into storage. Simply cover the space below with a decorative screen or drape fabric like a curtain from the underside of the shelf.

Any furniture placed kitty-corner in a room, such as a chest or an armoir, provides another corner to store items that might not fit into a closet. This debunks the old rule that kitty-corner furniture wastes space.

Don't forget that genuine storage or steamer tunks are very often used in decorating today, most likely because clever people realized they held things, in addition to being very decorative. Plywood cubes covered with a carpet of polyester — the cuttings from a recent wall-to-wall installation or any other small amount of yardage — can also be useful to store items while acting as extra seating. If you cover the cubes with a polyester, you'll have a modern, decorative accent in addition to easy maintenance and luxurious seating.

Eastman designers have a few extra hints about the usual storage places that could prove to be very useful:

Store things within things. For example, if you have a charming collection of china tea cups that you'd like to replace with another one of china animals, wrap the tea cups in tissue and store them with the winter clothes. When it's time for the winter clothes to come out of mothballs, you'll be ready to look at the cups again. This can work well with clothing, like storing small evening bags in large totes not frequently used.

Suitcases that are not often used are another source of space for items like the summer draperies or curtains or the flowered slipcovers that are replaced in winter. And if there's space left, use it for summer shoes or sandals. Just keep each suitcase according to season.

Consider Lighting In Your Decorating

At decorating time, you probably think of how daylight will affect the new setting. But don't overlook the decorative effects of your after-dark lighting too.

Good lighting can give even low-cost decorating more impact by brightening colors, patterns and textures. You can also freshen the interior with the new design and fashion excitement of the fixtures themsevles, coordinated with the styling of your furnishings.

Revitalizing the present home becomes especially important to the many families today who find the cost and scarcity of new-home financing an obstacle to moving.

IN YOUR DECOR planning, select lighting fixtures that will supply basic needs for proper vision, safety and security and also beautify your rooms, advises the American Home Lighting Institute.

The breadth and scope of design choices in the latest fixtures may surprise you in a visit to a well-stocked lighting showroom — Contemporary, Traditional, New World, Old World, subtle to rich colors in metals, glass and woods.

These new fixtures provide glitter or glow, diffused softness or a concentrated brightness — suitable to every room and requirement.

So many lighting options can both excite and puzzle the visitor. What style will complement your chairs or buffet? What size and shape would look best in that spot? How much light is needed and what kind?

Answers to such questions come easier with expert guidance at home lighting centers.

TRAINED LIGHTING consultants can suggest how to use dimmers, switches and other variable controls to allow one light or another to be turned up to full brilliance now or dimmed to relaxing softness later, according to occasion.

Leading interior designers stress the beauties of an interplay of light levels. Indiscriminate floodlighting of a room only flattens tones and textures.

A complete lighting plan will consider how to use shadows as a decorative complement to light. At the same time it will spare the eyestrain that can result from too great a contrast between the brightness of a reading or working surface and adjacent darkness.

A LITTLE HOMESICK

'Miss Kitty' Pays Visit To The 'Gunsmoke' Crew

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — For the first time in 20 years "Gunsmoke" is in production without Amanda Blake in the cast, and the dynamic redhead was so homesick she visited the cast and crew on location in Arizona.

For 19 years Amanda played Miss Kitty Russell in the venerable horse opera that has made her a millionairess. Now she is an outsider.

"I have very mixed emotions about leaving," she said on a trip to Hollywood for a starring role in the movie, "The Companion."

"In one way it feels good to be free of the series. I've been wanting to call my own shots and have something of a personal life. Now I can work when I want and spend more time with my husband."

Amanda is married to Frank Gilbert. Has been for seven years. They live in Phoenix, Ariz., where is is head of a pump and equipment company.

"I was commuting between Hollywood and Phoenix," Amanda said. "It wasn't unusual for me to fly between the two cities two or three times a week. It got to be too much.

"Frank didn't try to influence me to leave the show, but when I told him my decision he grinned from ear to ear."

Back in 1954 when Amanda first joined the series she was simply a saloon girl, quite openly a reformed hooker who bedded down with Marshal Matt Dillon.

She wore low-cut dresses revealing most of her bosom. One scene would end with Matt and Kitty entering her bedroom. Then a commercial break. Then Matt and Kitty emerging from her quarters.

"We had to change all that as the network CBS censors got stronger," Amanda laughed. "They made me respectable."

The show also made Amanda independently wealthy. She sold the rerun rights to the old black and white episodes for $1 million 13 years ago. Residual payments for the past dozen years of color segments continue to enrich Amanda beyond her wildest dreams.

"I miss Jim Arness, Milburn Stone and Ken Curtis terribly," Amanda said. "After all those years together I feel we were part of a family. I have a deep affection for all three of them.

"When they were on location near Tucson not long ago I went over to spend the day with the cast and crew. It was wonderful.

"But now I'm free to work on the program to help endangered species. I'm going to take some courses at Arizona State University in animal husbandry. I've been working in the program for years.

"As for Kitty Russell, I don't think I killed her off. She just disappeared. I understand they are experimenting with other ladies on the series. Maybe they can handle it the same way they did when Dennis Weaver left as Chester, and they brought in Ken to play Festus.

"I watch the show on Monday nights whenever I'm home. They're still in reruns from this past season, but I have to pinch myself to realize I'm not part of the show anymore.

"I guess I could have played Miss Kitty forever, but I was getting a little cranky on the set. And now I'm making the big adjustment."

AMANDA BLAKE, who played Miss Kitty Russell in "Gunsmoke" for 19 years, got so homesick for her "family" that she payed a visit to the crew on location in Arizona.

An Oil Well Named Wilma

Wilma Soss, "the most talked about woman on Wall Street" who conducts a weekly NBC Radio Network program on stock market analysis, has had an oil well named for her by the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co.

The well, located in Dacona, Colo., produces 42 barrels of crude oil a day, plus 200,000 cubic feet of gas.

"I miss Jim Arness, Milburn Stone and Ken Curtis terribly," Amanda said. "After all those years together I feel we were part of a family. I have a deep affection for all three of them.

"When they were on location near Tucson not long ago I went over to spend the day with the cast and crew. It was wonderful.

"But now I'm free to work on the program to help endangered species. I'm going to take some courses at Arizona State University in animal husbandry. I've been working in the program for years.

"As for Kitty Russell, I don't think I killed her off. She just disappeared. I understand they are experimenting with other ladies on the series. Maybe they can handle it the same way they did when Dennis Weaver left as Chester, and they brought in Ken to play Festus.

"I watch the show on Monday nights whenever I'm home. They're still in reruns from this past season, but I have to pinch myself to realize I'm not part of the show anymore.

"I guess I could have played Miss Kitty forever, but I was getting a little cranky on the set. And now I'm making the big adjustment."

An Oil Well Named Wilma

Wilma Soss, "the most talked about woman on Wall Street" who conducts a weekly NBC Radio Network program on stock market analysis, has had an oil well named for her by the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co.

The well, located in Dacona, Colo., produces 42 barrels of crude oil a day, plus 200,000 cubic feet of gas.

NBC Radio broadcasts "Pocketbook News with Wilma Soss" Friday nights.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON of "All in the Family"*

Have you had very many reactions from Women's Lib about your role of Edith on "All in the Family"? —Monica DuBoce, Hayward, Calif.

● Oh, yes, many advocates of Women's Liberation have commented on the character of Edith. Several oppose her seemingly subservient place to Archie and think she is hurting the movement, while others think she is good for the movement because she brings to light the domineering husband. And still others just love her for what she is—a very honest, straightforward woman, who puts her family and her home above everything and everyone else. Not even the strongest Women's Libbers can fault her affection for all God's creatures, human or animal.

FOR SEN. JACOB K. JAVITS (R-N.Y.)*

Isn't there a danger that the law Congress just passed on war powers will tie the President's hands in the Middle East?—R. Koblitz, San Francisco, Calif.

● If we are to run the risk of war in the Middle East, then it should be by the concurrence of the President and the Congress. That goes for any war, including the Middle East war.

FOR DIONNE WARWICK

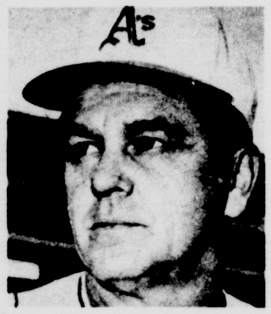
Songs by Burt Bacharach and Hal David may be beautiful, but didn't you find working with them restrictive? Will you make any movies?—Mrs. George Moore, Teaneck, N.J.

● No, I wasn't restricted. I felt Bacharach and David are the best songwriters in a thousand years, and I loved doing their songs. As to doing movies, right now I'm not interested. We've all been offered films where you have to take off your clothes, but I'm not going to jump on that bandwagon. It's stupid.

FOR CAROL CHANNING

I've heard that actors have a hard time winding down after their performances. Do you find it hard to relax afterward?—I. Bosler, Medford, Mass.

● Oh, no, it's no problem. I can fall asleep right away. Sometimes after a show I'll get new lyrics to learn for the next day. I'll read them over before I go to bed and then I'll wake up every three hours and go over them during the night. But I go right back to sleep.



FOR DICK WILLIAMS,

former manager of the Oakland A's

Some athletes and managers say that once the game starts they are oblivious to booing. Do you agree?—Vince Morton, Durham, N.C.

● I never minded being booed by the fans in another city. But it always bothered me when my teams were booed by the fans in their own city. That bothers players, no matter what they say.

FOR SEN. GEORGE S. McGOVERN (D-S.D.)*

I prefer organic foods myself. Why all the fuss over a scarcity of chemical fertilizer? – Dennise O'Neill, Ft. Mitchell, Ky.

● Because about one-third of the total food and fiber production in the U.S. is directly attributable to the application of fertilizer. It's that simple. In my judgment, what we are dealing with is nothing short of a national emergency.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

You talk sex, but why do you wear such unsexy, cover-up-to-the-neck clothes?—Nora Wvcinski, Trenton, N.J.

● Clothes must fit one's own life-style. My life-style is one of communications, and my clothes ought not to distract from this. But my fashion image has changed a great deal in the past two years, and I've become much more style-conscious and appreciative of fine clothing.

FOR REX REED, film critic*

Some people consider Sam Peckinpah's "The Wild Bunch" about the bloodiest Western ever made. Do you approve of movies like that?—Tom Todd, North Highlands, Calif.

● I thought "The Wild Bunch" was sloppy, turgid, rhetorical and dull, with a slaughterhouse of carnage simmering underneath it all, like a rotting fungus, giving Peckinpah a good leer at the expense of a gullible public that likes to be outraged. Trash is still trash, even when the blood spurts in slow motion disguised as art.

FOR ORSON BEAN

What has become of you? I used to see you on TV all the time. Then you seemed to disappear.—Mrs. M. A. Palmer, Covina, Calif.

● What became of me? Well, I decided that there were more important things in life than pursuit of success. I still like to work on occasion (and have to work on occasion to eat), but mainly I'm with my wife and four kids—enjoying life, communing with nature and being a house-husband. And I appear most every evening in the kitchen doing the dishes after dinner.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

In my opinion, Ethel Merman is the greatest musical-comedy star ever. What's happened to her?—R. R., Morristown, Tenn.

● You don't hear too much about her now because she doesn't want to work in the theater anymore and is constantly rejecting offers for the stage. She prefers to make records and an occasional TV appearance. She recently cut two albums in London—"Miss Merman Sings Merman" and "Ethel's Ridin' High." And, although this is not publicly known (Miss Merman likes to keep it quiet), she works as a volunteer one day a week at a New York hospital, as a saleslady in the gift shop.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON of "All in the Family"

Have you had very many reactions from Women's Lib about your role of Edith on "All in the Family"? —Monica DuBoce, Hayward, Calif.

● Oh, yes, many advocates of Women's Liberation have commented on the character of Edith. Several oppose her seemingly subservient place to Archie and think she is hurting the movement, while others think she is good for the movement because she brings to light the domineering husband. And still others just love her for what she is—a very honest, straightforward woman, who puts her family and her home above everything and everyone else. Not even the strongest Women's Libbers can fault her affection for all God's creatures, human or animal.

FOR SEN. JACOB K. JAVITS (R-N.Y.)

Isn't there a danger that the law Congress just passed on war powers will tie the President's hands in the Middle East?—R. Koblitz, San Francisco, Calif.

● If we are to run the risk of war in the Middle East, then it should be by the concurrence of the President and the Congress. That goes for any war, including the Middle East war.

FOR DIONNE WARWICK

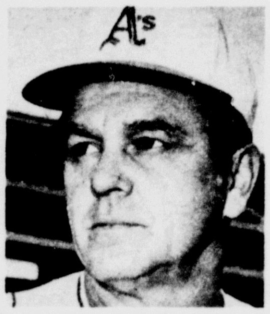
Songs by Burt Bacharach and Hal David may be beautiful, but didn't you find working with them restrictive? Will you make any movies?—Mrs. George Moore, Teaneck, N.J.

● No, I wasn't restricted. I felt Bacharach and David are the best songwriters in a thousand years, and I loved doing their songs. As to doing movies, right now I'm not interested. We've all been offered films where you have to take off your clothes, but I'm not going to jump on that bandwagon. It's stupid.

FOR CAROL CHANNING

I've heard that actors have a hard time winding down after their performances. Do you find it hard to relax afterward?—I. Bosler, Medford, Mass.

● Oh, no, it's no problem. I can fall asleep right away. Sometimes after a show I'll get new lyrics to learn for the next day. I'll read them over before I go to bed and then I'll wake up every three hours and go over them during the night. But I go right back to sleep.



FOR DICK WILLIAMS,
former manager of the Oakland A's

Some athletes and managers say that once the game starts they are oblivious to booing. Do you agree?—Vince Morton, Durham, N.C.

● I never minded being booed by the fans in another city. But it always bothered me when my teams were booed by the fans in their own city. That bothers players, no matter what they say.

FOR SEN. GEORGE S. McGOVERN (D-S.D.)

I prefer organic foods myself. Why all the fuss over a scarcity of chemical fertilizer? — Dennise O'Neill, Ft. Mitchell, Ky.

● Because about one-third of the total food and fiber production in the U.S. is directly attributable to the application of fertilizer. It's that simple. In my judgment, what we are dealing with is nothing short of a national emergency.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

You talk sex, but why do you wear such unsexy, cover-up-to-the-neck clothes?—Nora Wvcinski, Trenton, N.J.

● Clothes must fit one's own life-style. My life-style is one of communications, and my clothes ought not to distract from this. But my fashion image has changed a great deal in the past two years, and I've become much more style-conscious and appreciative of fine clothing.

FOR REX REED, film critic

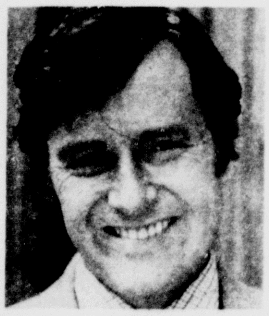
Some people consider Sam Peckinpah's "The Wild Bunch" about the bloodiest Western ever made. Do you approve of movies like that?—Tom Todd, North Highlands, Calif.

● I thought "The Wild Bunch" was sloppy, turgid, rhetorical and dull, with a slaughterhouse of carnage simmering underneath it all, like a rotting fungus, giving Peckinpah a good leer at the expense of a gullible public that likes to be outraged. Trash is still trash, even when the blood spurts in slow motion disguised as art.



FOR ORSON BEAN

What has become of you? I used to see you on TV all the time. Then you seemed to disappear.—Mrs. M. A. Palmer, Covina, Calif.

● What became of me? Well, I decided that there were more important things in life than pursuit of success. I still like to work on occasion (and have to work on occasion to eat), but mainly I'm with my wife and four kids—enjoying life, communing with nature and being a house-husband. And I appear most every evening in the kitchen doing the dishes after dinner.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

In my opinion, Ethel Merman is the greatest musical-comedy star ever. What's happened to her?—R. R., Morristown, Tenn.

● You don't hear too much about her now because she doesn't want to work in the theater anymore and is constantly rejecting offers for the stage. She prefers to make records and an occasional TV appearance. She recently cut two albums in London—"Miss Merman Sings Merman" and "Ethel's Ridin' High." And, although this is not publicly known (Miss Merman likes to keep it quiet), she works as a volunteer one day a week at a New York hospital, as a saleslady in the gift shop.

Old Socks, Chairs—Yes, Even String!

Our Political Leaders Economize, Too—Here's How...

By Frances Spatz Leighton

> "I have to force myself to buy new razor blades. I keep thinking, 'I know I can get more shaves out of this.'"
> —Rep. Claude Pepper (D-Fla.)

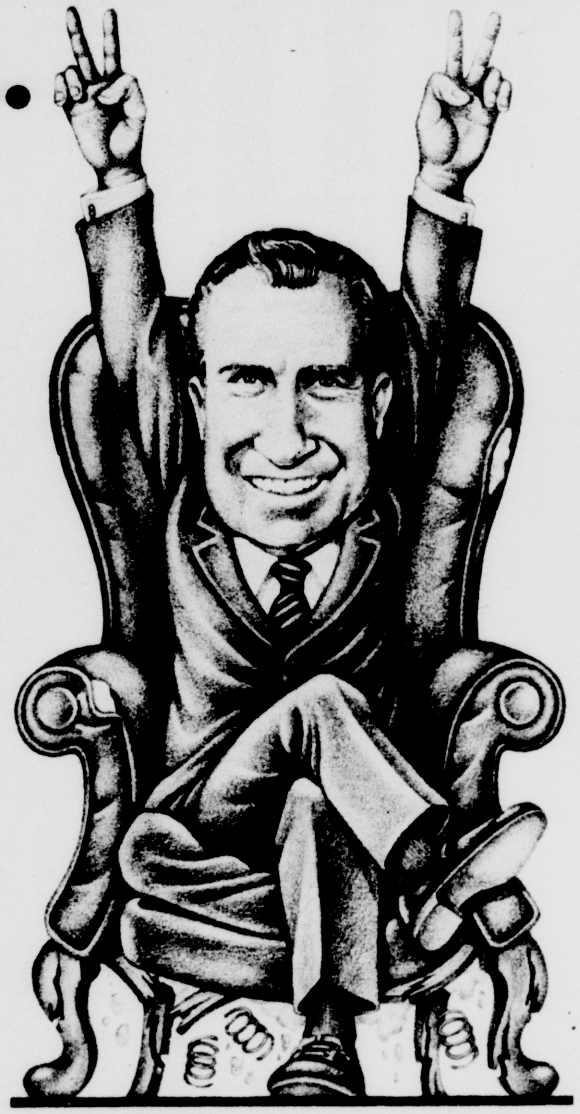
Kissinger: "If I wait I can use the suit again."

Henry Kissinger: Saving suits is the favorite economy of the Secretary of State. Henry Kissinger is loath to throw away a suit just because he has "outgrown" it. "If I wait I can use the suit again when my weight fluctuates back to that size. Since my weight goes up and down and up and down again, it would be wasteful to let my waist – spell that w-a-i-s-t – dictate my clothes budget."

Pat Nixon: It just wouldn't be practical for Mrs. Nixon to turn the frayed collars on her husband's shirts as she used to do years ago. But there is one special economy that Pat Nixon does insist on, and that is to reuse envelopes. "I hate to see envelopes going to waste," she says, "especially since paper is in such short supply and wasting it means wasting one of our natural resources." Pat Nixon keeps a supply of masking tape on her desk and pastes it on top of the old address. Then she writes the new name and routing on the masking tape.

Richard M. Nixon: As for Mr. Nixon, he hates to see good furniture thrown out to make way for the new. There is one beat-up old chair that he has hung on to for years. "Every time that Mrs. Nixon has wanted to get rid of it," says an aide, "Mr. Nixon says, 'No, no, there's still a lot of good wear left in it.' At this point in time it's sitting in one of the upstairs rooms, looking as respectable as it can, covered in brownish-olive velvet."



Richard Nixon guards a beat-up old chair that "still has a lot of good wear in it."

Caspar W. Weinberger: The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is not at all embarrassed by the fact that his wife still turns his frayed shirt collars to get that extra wear. And his wife Jane, hearing that Mrs. Nixon used to turn her husband's collars in the pre-White House days, laughed and exclaimed, "Heavens, doesn't everybody? I wouldn't dare throw away my husband's shirts until the collars and maybe even the cuffs had been turned and worn out. I had excellent training to be the wife of an economical man like Caspar. My grandfather was Angus Fraser, a devout Scotsman. You had to pry that man away from his old clothes. I grew up learning economy." Secretary Weinberger also points out that his wife "can make an 'Everything-But-the-Kitchen-Sink Soup' out of any and all leftovers.

"In fact," he adds, "Jane could write a book called 'Gourmet Leftovers.'"

Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina is a rabid paper saver. According to his aide, Pat Shore, "Senator Sam" has ordered that outdated stationery never be thrown out, but instead be cut into quarters and used for taking telephone messages. He has special little boxes on every desk that serve as paper holders for these cut-up letterheads of previous Congresses.

Sen. Frank E. Moss of Utah: "Shoes are my favorite economy. I could wear one pair forever. I have them soled and resoled, and I have patches on the patches. I get very fond of my shoes. To me, having them patched is a luxury. When I was going to law school, in the height of the Depression, I did my own patching. I would get patches at the drugstore and stick them on myself. And you know something? I still have shoes I bought 25 years ago."

Sen. Frank Church of Idaho: Cars are also the pet economy of Senator Church, who helps safeguard the nation's environment from his seat on the Senate Interior Committee. So much so that he has to take a ribbing not only from his wife but from his gas-station serviceman. Says his wife Bethine, "My husband had the last Kaiser automobile extant in the United States. He couldn't part with it. He can never part with any car. That Kaiser looked so strange and way out that when he'd drive it somewhere, the attendant would say, 'What's that?' Then he had a ten-year-old Chevy that developed strange noises. He drove it into the service station and asked the man to look at it. The mechanic said, 'Senator, I think it's totally gone.' My husband looked as if someone was trying to throw his child away. He said, 'How much would you charge to rebuild it for me?'"

At this point, Senator Church breaks into his wife's story, "Right. And I had it rebuilt. Fine job. It's better to pay $200-300 than $2,000-3,000."

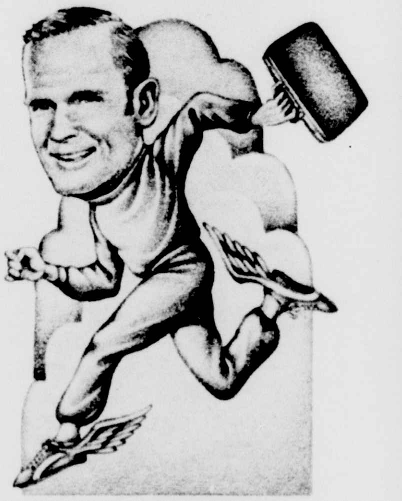
that." Thereupon, he turned his Senate office thermostat as low as it can go – 60 degrees – and that's where it remains. "We all wear sweaters around here," says a secretary, "and sometimes a sweater on top of a sweater. But we're with the Senator in anything he thinks will help our country."

Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida has a thing about razor blades: "I have to force myself to buy new razor blades," he told this reporter. "I keep thinking, 'I know I can get more shaves out of this.' I'm the perfect man for the Wilkinson ad. I will go the greatest number of shaves possible on a blade and then I will have to strain myself to get up to the counter and get some more." According to his aides, Representative Pepper also saves everything else, even old license plates. "He loves to save," confides an assistant, "and he tells himself that it's justified because it helps make a complete record of one man's life in public service."

Albert: "I won't be back, will you turn out the lights?"

Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma: The Speaker of the House is a different kind of ecology hound. The man who was just a heartbeat away from the Presidency after the resignation of Spiro Agnew goes through the office turning off all things electrical. He turns off all lights that are not actually helping anyone and he turns off all electric typewriters he hears buzzing. And as if that doesn't make his point, he never fails, when leaving the office early, to turn to his secretary and say, "Well, I won't be back, so will you turn out the lights?" With his wife, he practices another economy—bulk buying, actually accompanying her to the grocery store to help her figure out the best buys.



Proxmire: "I save $1,200 by walking and jogging."

Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin: "My favorite economy is walking several miles each way to and from work," says the slim, trim Senator, who keeps a set of hiking clothes both at home and at the office. "I once figured out that I save $1,200 a year by walking and jogging instead of taking cabs. It's an economy that I'd like to see spread because it cuts down on the consumption of gasoline and protects health by keeping the body in good tone."

Gerald Ford is another man who makes a point of turning out unused lights, including those in halls, but he has another pet economy that intrigues his office staff—he uses a pencil right down to the stub. "That comes of sending kids to school," he explains. "If you want to raise thrifty kids, you have to set the example."

Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, amazes his staff and all who know him by bringing his lunch to work. "Yes, I brown-bag it every day," he smiles. "I get exactly what I want—plenty of fruit, luncheon meat, the kind of bread I like, and I save a couple of dollars a day. But even more important is that I can sit and think as I eat and read, and do some work. It's a great time-saver." The Senator keeps a small refrigerator in his office.

RUSTY STAUB:

He's the "Galloping Gourmet" Of Baseball!

Baseball fans know Daniel "Rusty" Staub as the $100,000-a-year outfielder who helped the New York Mets win the National League flag. Gourmets, however, know him as the best cook in baseball. He has had as many as 80 people in at one time to enjoy his culinary skills and receives kudos for his service as well as his recipes. "I like to serve in the elegant manner," he says. "I favor Waterford crystal, Wedgwood china and, of course, sterling." . . . Staub, 29, is a redheaded native of New Orleans who developed into an amateur chef through his mother's coaching. He keeps a loose-leaf book titled "My Recipes" next to his kitchen stove. . . . When he signed his professional baseball contract out of Jesuit High School in New Orleans, Staub found he had to do a great deal of traveling. He didn't like to eat out so he started to cook for himself in his apartment. Teammates spoke so highly of his skills that girl friends and wives began asking him for recipes. . . . Staub was bedeviled by injuries in 1972 and 1973 but nevertheless sparked the Mets' comeback drive, which enabled them to win the division title on the last day. His shoulder was damaged when he crashed into a wall during the play-offs against the Cincinnati Reds, but despite this handicap, he batted .423 in the World Series. . . . Staub has the reputation of being a great "swinger" as well as a great chef but claims this is an exaggeration. "If I went out with as many girls as they say I do, I'd never have the time to play baseball," he tells you.

What Are the Dangerous Weight-Gaining Ages?

At what stages in your adult life should you be detective-alert to the possibility of putting on weight? For women, critical periods are during a first pregnancy and after menopause. This is due to hormonal factors. Another critical period for women is just after the age of 21, because a girl begins to exercise less and doesn't lower her caloric intake to compensate. Men? A critical period is between the ages of 25 and 40, when men generally decrease their activity, but don't change their adolescent big-eating habits. Both men and women inadvertently tend to gain weight after 50 because of a lowered basal metabolic rate and decreased exercise—unless they adjust their calories accordingly. If you're in one of these susceptible periods, increase your activity and cut down calories. Even if the susceptible period is a temporary stage (as in pregnancy) you can later go back to former habits—but you may happily find yourself adjusted to staying on the slimmer (and healthier) side.

Group Marriages: What Makes People Join?

Why do some young adults take so enthusiastically to experiments in group marriage or communal living? Some are idealists trying to remake society. But a new study suggests that many grew up in homes in which the parents did not present a "united front." Frequently the parents had markedly contrasting religious and political views. They also differed on what their children's life goals should be and didn't give them any pattern of values. Young men and women from such homes sometimes report that they obtained their life philosophy from TV or other media rather than from their families. They may be attracted to group marriage or communal living in hopes of finding "the acceptance, security and meaningful relationships" they've failed to find in their original families.—By Shirley Sloan Fader

Sinuses: Why on Earth Do We Have Them?

Did Nature goof when she made sinuses? Many sinus sufferers have thought so. Actually, there are about 25 sinuses, or air cavities, in the body. The ones that bother us are those called the paranasal sinuses that are located in the forehead and on each side of the nose. We do know that they do two things: give resonance to the voice and help to make the skull lighter. It is also believed that they act as a reservoir to make air moist and warm. Sinus trouble—or sinusitis—is caused by an inflammation of the lining of the sinus, usually through germs but sometimes through allergy. How can you fight it? First, shrink the tissues, either through the use of tablets or a vasoconstrictor nose spray. (One word of caution: Overuse of these products—particularly the nose sprays—can cause a "rebound" effect.) Second, do try to breathe through the nose. This helps ventilate the sinus passages. Finally, drink fluid and take aspirin to reduce the headache. In some severe cases, it may be necessary to have your sinuses drained by a doctor.

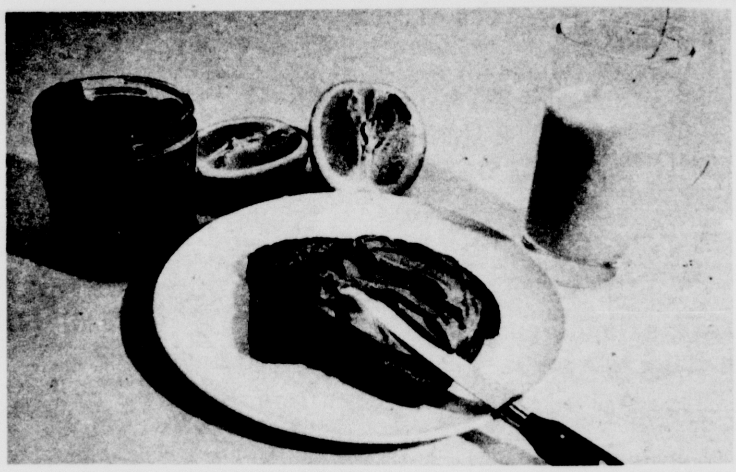
Kids in the Kitchen

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen talks about peanut butter. Says Marilyn, "Feeding the kids a peanut butter sandwich comes in handy. It's quick, easy, right at your fingertips, and kids love it. What Mother may not know is just how nutritious peanut butter can be!"

"The Do-It-Yourself Complete Peanut Butter Sandwich Meal"



Elizabeth Gee

A peanut butter sandwich, a glass of milk and an orange will provide 30 percent of all the nutrients experts say you need for a full day.

THE DO-IT-YOURSELF COMPLETE PEANUT BUTTER SANDWICH MEAL

2 tablespoons peanut butter
2 slices whole wheat bread or enriched white bread
1 (8 ozs.) glass of milk
1 orange, quartered

1. Spread peanut butter on one slice of bread. Top with second slice of bread, cut in half. Place on plate.

2. Serve sandwich with milk and orange.

Makes 1 complete peanut butter sandwich meal

A sandwich made with two tablespoons of peanut butter and two slices of whole wheat bread provides 30 percent of a child's Recommended Daily Allowance of protein, 40 percent of the niacin and 15 percent of the iron, along with other vitamins and minerals. Vitamins A and C are about the only "notable absences." Drink an eight-ounce glass of whole milk with the sandwich, and there is a jump in all three major nutrients plus vitamin A, calcium, phosphorus and riboflavin. A peanut butter sandwich with whole or skim milk is close to being a nutritionally balanced meal. But where do you find vitamin C? In an orange, of course! So make an orange the "dessert"! Such a "meal" will bring all the nutrients to good energy levels, with most of them at 30 percent or more of the Recommended Daily Allowance.

PEANUT BUTTER SNACK BARS

¼ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons plus ⅓ cup peanut butter
¼ cup honey
⅓ cup brown sugar, packed
3 cups natural cereal
½ cup semisweet chocolate pieces

1. Line a 9-inch-square baking pan with foil.

2. In 1-qt. saucepan combine butter, 2 tablespoons peanut butter, honey and brown sugar. Heat over low heat, stirring occasionally, until smooth and sugar is melted.

3. Pour hot mixture over cereal in large bowl, stir well. Turn cereal mixture into foil-lined pan, press down evenly. Cool completely.

4. Make frosting: Combine chocolate pieces and ⅓ cup peanut butter in top of double boiler over hot (not boiling) water. Stir until chocolate melts and mixture is smooth. Spread over cereal mixture. Chill until firm. Cut into bars.

Makes 3 dozen bars

"We're looking for people to write children's books."

If you ever wanted to write...for pleasure or profit...here is your opportunity.

by Francis R. Gemme

We need writers. There are over 200 publishers of books for children and more than 400 magazines for young readers . . . that need writers.

We know that many people could help fill this void in children's literature, if they could only get started. Are you one of these people? Do you have the urge to write and the ambition but are unable to get professional training or are tied to your home or job? Perhaps you are too unsure of yourself to start.

Have you ever read a children's story and said, "I can do better than that"? Have you ever deplored the lack of good new literature for young readers? Do you love children? Do you want to do something important with your life? And earn the rewards and satisfaction of writing for children? That very attitude may be the signal that you can do it. For the desire and interest must come first.

Stories only you can write.

Once you understand and utilize the basic techniques, writing for children may be easier than you think. Your personal experiences, fantasy, human nature, nature itself, hobbies, all lend themselves to good subjects. Many of these have been written about – plainly and simply – and have been published. You probably have within yourself many children's stories only you can write.

A new kind of school.

The Institute of Children's Literature was founded to encourage more and better writing for young readers. Top writers and publishers have worked together to create this professional course to teach you to write for children and teenagers. People like Lee Wyndham, a teacher and author of forty-eight books, ranging from the picture book age into the high teens, and over two hundred short stories, articles and serials–Hardie Gramatky, author and illustrator of many famous children's books like his Little Toot – and John Ledes, President of Astor Honor Books, who has published many award-winning children's books. Together we have written and published hundreds of books and magazine articles for young readers. We know how to write – how to teach – and how to help you get your writing published.

Learning to write and sell.

The early success of the course has been repeated time and time again by people like yourself who knew in their hearts they could write good things for children.

This course will train you step by step, from writing an opening sentence through the writing and selling of a finished manuscript. Yes, you will have a completed manuscript when you finish the course.

Your own instructor.

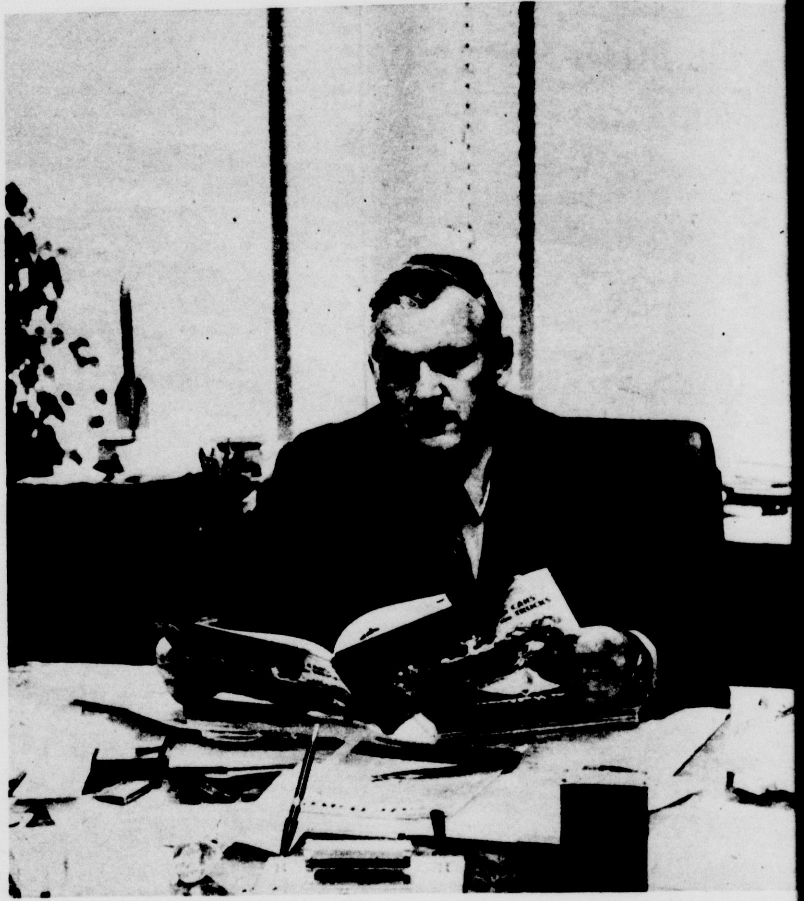
Because writing is such a personal profession, we believe that the teaching of this course must also be personal. That is why in addition to writing materials, text books, instruction and assignments, you will receive personal guidance from your own instructor on every lesson.

The instructor chosen for you will be a professional writer who will stay with you throughout the course. He will show you how to utilize your personal feelings, experiences, imagination and interest to write for children–in your spare time at home.

Work at your own pace.

A writing course is best learned at home when you feel like working. There is no bell to end the class, no interruption from other students. You and your instructor can work together at the pace and depth desired. This personal pace allows more time for each student than is possible in a classroom situation.

You mail your completed work to your instructor who carefully reads and edits each assignment. He then writes you a long personal letter explaining in detail his corrections and makes specific recommendations. You receive professional advice and guidance from the same instructor throughout the course. And you work where you want and when you want.



Francis R. Gemme, consultant to the Institute of Children's Literature is President and Publisher of Young Readers Press.

The rewards.

Although many writers of children's books earn $10,000 to $15,000 and more a year, the benefits of a writing career include the challenge, the excitement, and great satisfaction of doing something important with your life. When you complete this course you will be a qualified writer with a future. And what a future!

The market is unlimited. It is the constant cry of editors and publishers, of both books and magazines, that they need more good manuscripts for young readers.

More than 200 publishers of children's books produce over 3,000 books each year with total sales of $170,000,000! And over 400 periodicals for young readers have a combined circulation exceeding 80,000,000. Books and magazine articles for children are made into TV shows and movies. And there are twenty-four children's book clubs and a rapidly growing children's paperback market.

Writing is only satisfying when your work is published, and for writers of children's literature it is easier now than ever to find a publisher.

Will you take the first step?

You may be a teacher, be taking care of your home, or be a concerned grandparent. You may believe that you do not have the necessary background to become a successful writer. But as an author you will be judged by your writing ability, not your sex, age or education.

For instance, women writers are on the best seller list as often as men. And in the field of children's books and magazines there are as many women editors as men.

Free test.

To find qualified men and women with writing aptitude worth developing, the Faculty and Consultants of the Institute have prepared a special Aptitude Test. It is offered free and will be graded free by a member of our staff.

If you want to be a writer send in the coupon below for this free test and a free brochure which fully describes the Institute course and faculty, the current publishing market for children's literature and a new future for you. If you have writing aptitude, you will be eligible to enroll. Of course, there is no obligation.

Glenda Jackson:
The Quiet Woman Who Just May Be Our Greatest Actress

"You see, I am something of an ugly duckling. My eyes are too small, and I have rotten skin. As a matter of fact, I don't think anything about me is physically attractive!"

In 1971 Glenda Jackson won an Academy Award for her performance in "Women in Love." A year later she was an Oscar nominee for her part in "Sunday, Bloody Sunday." This year she won her second Oscar for her role in Mel Frank's sophisticated comedy "A Touch of Class." There is not much doubt about it. When I talked with Glenda, I was talking with the best actress in the world today.

FAMILY WEEKLY: How do you feel about winning a second Oscar?

GLENDA: Surprised. And flattered. I was very happy to win one. I didn't expect another.

FW: Your role in "A Touch of Class" was quite a change of pace for you, wasn't it?

GLENDA: Yes, and I enjoyed it immensely. It was my first chance to make people laugh.

FW: You appeared nude in "Women in Love," "Negatives," "The Music Lovers" and "Sunday, Bloody Sunday." Would you consider yourself a sex goddess?

GLENDA: I don't look at it that way. I analyze a scene only by the content of the script, of the story itself. Besides, I consider myself a "character woman."

FW: Then you don't mind nudity in films?

GLENDA: I don't.

FW: How does your husband feel about it?

GLENDA: He doesn't mind either—provided it's well played and an integral part of the story. I look upon myself as the actor side of the actor-director partnership. I thought what I was asked to do was valid, so I did it.

FW: Is there anything you would not do for a film?

GLENDA: I can think of nothing I would not do in a film if I thought it was valid, apart from murder or something cruel.

FW: How long have you been acting?

GLENDA: For over 20 years, 15 of them in the theater.

FW: Do you enjoy it?

GLENDA: No, I don't. I savor it. I don't know if that's the right way to put it, but there are so many insurmountable

Can YOU Collect $1,000's In Free G.I. Veterans Benefits?

Amazing Facts Revealed – 265 Free Benefits For Qualified Veterans Of Vietnam, Korea, WWII – Up To 30 Years After Discharge!

by Paul Michael

© Copyright 1974, Good News Publishing Company

You don't know me from Adam, but I have dug up some absolutely startling facts and information that can mean thousands of dollars in YOUR pocket!

Here is the inside story of a bonanza —just waiting for you to claim it.

You gave some of the best years of your life to Uncle Sam—in the service.

You served honorably to protect your country in time of great national emergency—in World War II, Korea, Vietnam!

But, when was the last time YOU got something from your Government? Last week? Last month? Last year? Never?

If you are like most of us, you believe that you are not entitled to any free G.I. benefits and services—or, that all your benefits ran out a long time ago.

NOT TRUE!

For example, did you know that . . .

- If YOU are a World War II veteran YOU are entitled to up to $12,500 in G.I. loans to purchase, construct, refinance or improve your home—to buy a farm, farm machinery, supplies, equipment!
- If YOU are a Korean veteran YOU are entitled to borrow up to $10,000 to buy a mobile home—up to $17,500 if the site is included!
- If YOU are a Vietnam veteran YOU are entitled to up to $210.00 a month for 36 months to pay for your education or retraining.
- If YOU are the wife, son or daughter of a soldier who was killed or wounded in Vietnam, Korea or World War II—you have $1,000's in free benefits and services owed to you right now!

And, as a veteran or dependent, you may well be entitled to FREE medical treatment, FREE dental treatment—FREE education for your children—FREE job-finding assistance—Civil Service preference—special low-interest loans and mortgages—thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of benefits and services!

I made this discovery quite by accident. A friend of mine down in Miami told me that I was entitled to $210.00 a month in educational benefits, even though I was discharged over 20 years ago. He was right!

It started me thinking and digging into the mass of confusing rules and regulations on free G.I. benefits due to all veterans. Here are some of the things I found out:

- Free G.I. benefits and services DO NOT come to you automatically. You will NEVER get a letter from the Government or the V.A. telling you about them. YOU must know about them—YOU must qualify for them—YOU must apply for them!
- You are probably being "cheated" out of $1,000's in these free benefits and services.
- You are entitled to these free benefits and services—whether you have been out of the service for 30 days—or even 30 years!

No matter what your branch of service—whether you've been a veteran for 30 days or 30 years—start collecting your free G.I. benefits immediately!

- The money to pay for these free services has already been set aside by Congress. It is just sitting there waiting for you and/or your dependents to claim it.

It's a darned shame that you haven't been told until now. The veterans' rights mess is such a scandal that some Congressmen are calling for an investigation!

But, it's not too late. The important thing is that NOW you can claim your rightful share—the share you "paid for" with your time in service. Last year alone it added up to a $9 billion bonanza! Don't be too surprised to learn that you may be entitled to:

- G.I. Bill aid worth up to $8,000 during four years of enrollment in a qualified college or educational institution!
- The nation's best buy in life insurance that offers real protection!
- Fulltime or outpatient medical care in a VA hospital!
- Pensions as high as $130.00 per month even when the disability is not connected with military service!
- Preference in competing for and retaining a job with the federal government!
- VA guaranteed or direct loans to buy, build or improve a home in which you intend to live or a farm which you plan to operate!

These free benefits and services could fill a book. And now, with the help of a friend, that's exactly what I've done. I call it "How To Get What The U.S. Government Owes Veterans And Their Dependents!" It shows over 265 benefits and services available to qualified veterans of Vietnam, Korea and World War II. But it doesn't just list them, mind you, it tells you how to get them. It tells you what to do to qualify, who to contact (including all necessary names and addresses) and what to say. And perhaps most important of all, the editors have taken out all the technical language and have cut through the usual red tape to make it easy for you to apply for and get all the free benefits and services you are entitled to without problems or hassles!

Although this book can mean hundreds and perhaps thousands of dollars to you, it is priced at only $4.95. Remember, it is not enough to qualify for veterans benefits and services—you must know exactly how to apply for them.

2 Extra Reports—Free!

Yes! When you order right away, you get 2 Extra Reports—Free! Free Report #1: "How Veterans Can Get All The Help They Need From Veterans Organizations!" Free Report #2: "How Veterans Can Get All The Help They Need From The Red Cross!"

In fact, you have a double, 100% no-risk guarantee. If you don't like the book when it arrives, return it for an immediate refund of your $4.95, no questions asked. Or, keep it and use it for a full year. If you don't collect at least $100.00 in free benefits and services, send it back next year. You still get your $4.95 back!

Can YOU Collect $1,000's In Free G.I. Veterans Benefits?

Amazing Facts Revealed – 265 Free Benefits For Qualified Veterans Of Vietnam, Korea, WWII – Up To 30 Years After Discharge!

by Paul Michael

© Copyright 1974, Good News Publishing Company

You don't know me from Adam, but I have dug up some absolutely startling facts and information that can mean thousands of dollars in YOUR pocket!

Here is the inside story of a bonanza —just waiting for you to claim it.

You gave some of the best years of your life to Uncle Sam—in the service.

You served honorably to protect your country in time of great national emergency—in World War II, Korea, Vietnam!

But, when was the last time YOU got something from your Government?

Last week? Last month? Last year? Never?

If you are like most of us, you believe that you are not entitled to any free G.I. benefits and services—or, that all your benefits ran out a long time ago.

NOT TRUE!

For example, did you know that . . .

- If YOU are a World War II veteran YOU are entitled to up to $12,500 in G.I. loans to purchase, construct, refinance or improve your home—to buy a farm, farm machinery, supplies, equipment!
- If YOU are a Korean veteran YOU are entitled to borrow up to $10,000 to buy a mobile home—up to $17,500 if the site is included!
- If YOU are a Vietnam veteran YOU are entitled to up to $210.00 a month for 36 months to pay for your education or retraining.
- If YOU are the wife, son or daughter of a soldier who was killed or wounded in Vietnam, Korea or World War II—you have $1,000's in free benefits and services owed to you right now!

And, as a veteran or dependent, you may well be entitled to FREE medical treatment, FREE dental treatment—FREE education for your children—FREE job-finding assistance—Civil Service preference—special low-interest loans and mortgages—thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of benefits and services!

I made this discovery quite by accident. A friend of mine down in Miami told me that I was entitled to $210.00 a month in educational benefits, even though I was discharged over 20 years ago. He was right!

It started me thinking and digging into the mass of confusing rules and regulations on free G.I. benefits due to all veterans. Here are some of the things I found out:

- Free G.I. benefits and services DO NOT come to you automatically. You will NEVER get a letter from the Government or the V.A. telling you about them. YOU must know about them—YOU must qualify for them—YOU must apply for them!
- You are probably being "cheated" out of $1,000's in these free benefits and services.
- You are entitled to these free benefits and services—whether you have been out of the service for 30 days—or even 30 years!

No matter what your branch of service—whether you've been a veteran for 30 days or 30 years—start collecting your free G.I. benefits immediately!

- The money to pay for these free services has already been set aside by Congress. It is just sitting there waiting for you and/or your dependents to claim it.

It's a darned shame that you haven't been told until now. The veterans' rights mess is such a scandal that some Congressmen are calling for an investigation!

But, it's not too late. The important thing is that NOW you can claim your rightful share—the share you "paid for" with your time in service. Last year alone it added up to a $9 billion bonanza! Don't be too surprised to learn that you may be entitled to:

- G.I. Bill aid worth up to $8,000 during four years of enrollment in a qualified college or educational institution!
- The nation's best buy in life insurance that offers real protection!
- Fulltime or outpatient medical care in a VA hospital!
- Pensions as high as $130.00 per month even when the disability is not connected with military service!
- Preference in competing for and retaining a job with the federal government!
- VA guaranteed or direct loans to buy, build or improve a home in which you intend to live or a farm which you plan to operate!

These free benefits and services could fill a book. And now, with the help of a friend, that's exactly what I've done. problems in each picture, in each scene, that when one is done well I get satisfaction out of it. Well, maybe even that isn't the right way of putting it. Let us say it is continually interesting.

FW: Are you ambitious?

GLENDA: I'm lazy by nature, so I really don't want to work hard unless I'm interested in something. Yet every time I accept a script I'm immediately sorry about it because I have to devote so much time to it and away from my family.

FW: What does your family consist of?

GLENDA: My husband Roy [Editor's note: Roy Hodges] and our four-year-old son, Daniel.

FW: Is your husband an actor?

GLENDA: He used to be. Then he became a director. Now he's an art dealer.

FW: How did you two meet?

GLENDA: After I graduated from school I went through a period of semi-starvation in repertoire. It was during this time that I met Roy. We played opposite one another in "Jane Eyre," and he was so bad that I had to stick pins into my hand to keep from breaking up. Besides, I can't act with someone with whom I'm emotionally involved. Like when my mother is in the audience when I do a play, everyone else might as well go home.

FW: Did you always want to become an actress?

GLENDA: No. When I was little I wanted to be a ballerina.

FW: What made you change your mind?

GLENDA: I just got too bloody big! There wasn't anybody around who wanted to lift me! And one can only do so many dying swans!

FW: And you went directly into acting after that?

GLENDA: No, I left grammar school when I was 16 with no special ambitions and for two years I worked at a pharmacy. It was at that time that I joined the local amateur-theatrical society because I thought there must be more to life than the chemist's shop. And then I applied to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts and they accepted me. I am not very adventuresome, but when something comes up that I like I become very tenacious.

FW: I understand you have been married only once, yet you have had four wedding rings. Isn't that a bit unusual?

GLENDA: The first one was very cheap, really. It simply broke. The second one wasn't much more expensive and dissolved when I washed some diapers in too much bleach. The third one slipped off my finger and down the drain. [She showed me a beautiful wide gold wedding ring set with diamonds.] I hope this one will last!

FW: Do you like jewelry?

GLENDA: I wore earrings once, but somehow they weren't me. I'm not much for jewelry, or for that matter, fancy clothes. If I don't have to get dressed up for official functions, I prefer wearing plain trousers. They're the most comfortable, and I'm all for comfort.

FW: What is your biggest problem as far as acting is concerned?

GLENDA: To find the proper material. That's how you end up doing revivals of plays and films—and some of them are done very well. It's depressing and boring. As I said, I am a "character woman" and there are not that many good parts about. You see, I am something of an ugly duckling. My eyes are too small, and I have rotten skin. As a matter of fact, I don't think anything about me is physically attractive!

FW: Is that why you did "Mary, Queen of Scots" a few months after portraying Queen Elizabeth on TV in "Elizabeth R"?

GLENDA: Yes. But I did it a second time because I wanted to play opposite Vanessa Redgrave. And besides, after years of sex stuff and playing neurotic ravers, I thought it would be nice to play a part my mother could see in the cinema and say, "That's my Glenda."

FW: One last question: How do you feel about the fact that within a comparatively short time you have become the most sought-after movie star in the world?

GLENDA: I wouldn't say I am surprised—STUNNED is the word! FW

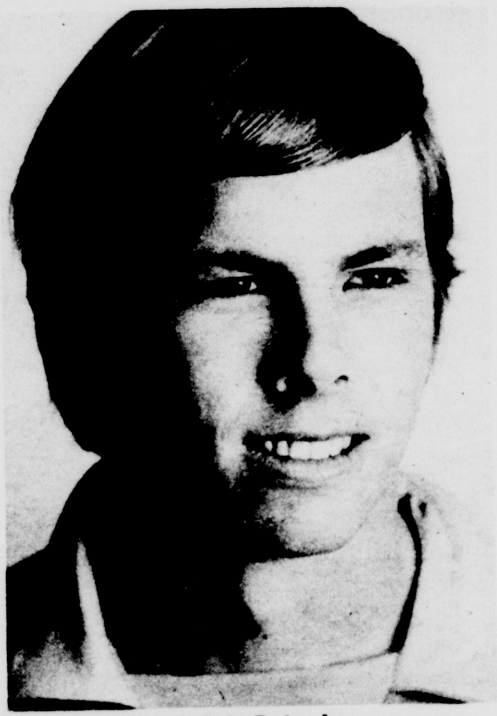
Kyle Rote Jr.: / The Unknown

"When the dust finally settled, one man stood alone in first place. It was not O. J. Simpson. It was not Seagren, Havlicek or Rose. It was Kyle Rote Jr."

By Larry Bortstein



Soccer star Kyle Rote, Jr. . . .

. . . and some of the "Superstars" events he competed in.

Last February, a group of the greatest athletes in the world gathered in Rotonda, Fla., to compete in the "Superstars" competition. O. J. Simpson was there. So were Bob Seagren, John Havlicek and Pete Rose. Each was required to compete in seven of ten events—not including their own specialties. A lot was at stake. Not only would the winner get more than $50,000—but there were all the intangibles of pride and ego.

When the dust finally settled, one man stood alone in first place. It was not O. J. Simpson. It was not Seagren, Havlicek or Rose. It was a relatively unknown young man with a very well-known name: Kyle Rote, Jr.

The name Kyle Rote, of course, is synonymous with football. Kyle Rote, Sr., was an All-America halfback at SMU and fashioned an excellent 11-year NFL career with the New York Giants before retiring to enter the field of sports broadcasting.

It seemed a sensible route for his son to follow—except it wasn't the one Kyle Jr. wanted to pursue. First, after graduating from high school in Dallas, he accepted a football scholarship to Oklahoma State University. "I know people at SMU were disappointed," Kyle says, " and quite a few other people were upset by my leaving Texas and the Southwest Conference."

But young Rote's biggest decision was yet to come. After a year, he questioned the relevance of big-time collegiate football. "I was the type of student who had to avoid distractions in order to get good grades. The atmosphere for football players at Oklahoma State wasn't conducive to classwork. I had to find a small school where I could get along and do what I wanted."

Kyle found his answer at the tiny University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn. Once a major football power in its own right, Sewanee now nestles quietly atop the plateau of the Cumberland River, far from the glamour and crowds of big-time athletics. There were no athletic scholarships for Sewanee students. But Kyle Jr. would have had to search high and far to find any college with a scholarship in the sport he decided to embrace.

The sport was soccer, and by the time he enrolled at Sewanee in 1969, Kyle had played it only two years, and then only on a rudimentary level. Soccer has long been a stepchild of American sports, appreciated mostly by immigrants from nations where it is the sport. Kyle barely knew of its existence until he and several high school football teammates tried it as a summer conditioner. Then one

> "When the dust finally settled, one man stood alone in first place. It was not O. J. Simpson. It was not Seagren, Havlicek or Rose. It was Kyle Rote Jr."

By Larry Bortstein

Last February, a group of the greatest athletes in the world gathered in Rotonda, Fla., to compete in the "Superstars" competition. O. J. Simpson was there. So were Bob Seagren, John Havlicek and Pete Rose. Each was required to compete in seven of ten events—not including their own specialties. A lot was at stake. Not only would the winner get more than $50,000—but there were all the intangibles of pride and ego.

When the dust finally settled, one man stood alone in first place. It was not O. J. Simpson. It was not Seagren, Havlicek or Rose. It was a relatively unknown young man with a very well-known name: Kyle Rote, Jr.

The name Kyle Rote, of course, is synonymous with football. Kyle Rote, Sr., was an All-America halfback at SMU and fashioned an excellent 11-year NFL career with the New York Giants before retiring to enter the field of sports broadcasting.

It seemed a sensible route for his son to follow—except it wasn't the one Kyle Jr. wanted to pursue. First, after graduating from high school in Dallas, he accepted a football scholarship to Oklahoma State University. "I know people at SMU were disappointed," Kyle says, " and quite a few other people were upset by my leaving Texas and the Southwest Conference."

But young Rote's biggest decision was yet to come. After a year, he questioned the relevance of big-time collegiate football. "I was the type of student who had to avoid distractions in order to get good grades. The atmosphere for football players at Oklahoma State wasn't conducive to classwork. I had to find a small school where I could get along and do what I wanted."

Kyle found his answer at the tiny University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn. Once a major football power in its own right, Sewanee now nestles quietly atop the plateau of the Cumberland River, far from the glamour and crowds of big-time athletics. There were no athletic scholarships for Sewanee students. But Kyle Jr. would have had to search high and far to find any college with a scholarship in the sport he decided to embrace.

The sport was soccer, and by the time he enrolled at Sewanee in 1969, Kyle had played it only two years, and then only on a rudimentary level. Soccer has long been a stepchild of American sports, appreciated mostly by immigrants from nations where it is the sport. Kyle barely knew of its existence until he and several high school football teammates tried it as a summer conditioner. Then one afternoon, they learned what the game really was all about.

Ron Griffith, an Englishman from Blackpool who was a sports correspondent for a Scottish newspaper, came upon Kyle and his friends kicking a soccer ball around one hot summer afternoon. Griffith offered to teach them the finer points of the game.

"At first we were offended by this guy butting in," recalls Kyle. "But we soon realized he could help us a lot. Pretty soon we formed a team called the Black Bandits and we scrimmaged other local teams."

Though he continued to play football, Kyle finally succumbed to the lure of soccer when he entered Sewanee.

Armed with a degree in psychology and a new wife, Mary Lynne, of Rossville, Ga., Kyle returned to Dallas in June, 1972, uncertain of his future. The Dallas Tornadoes of the North American Soccer League offered him a playing contract that, by their own admission, was more of a public relations ploy than a serious attempt to recruit a new player.

"I had a lot of local appeal," Kyle concedes, "and I had played soccer, so it was a logical move on their part. Except they didn't really feel I would ever be an important player. The job they offered me was a combination player-public relations director."

Joining the Tornadoes with the 1972 season more than half completed, Kyle only played in practice, but his potential for the game began to emerge.

"My size [six feet and 185 pounds] is bigger than average for soccer," he points out, "and I learned how to use it to good advantage." Rote also discovered he had a natural aptitude for "heading" the ball. Since the use of arms and hands is prohibited in soccer, except by goaltenders, players must pass the ball either by kicking it or hitting it off their heads.

"It's mostly a matter of timing," Kyle explains. "You have to time the movement of your head with the flight of the ball."

When the 1973 NASL season began the following April, Kyle was a regular member of Dallas' playing roster. He quickly proved that Tornado Coach Ron Newman was correct in his judgment of the young Sewanee graduate by scoring a goal in the first game of the year. By the end of the season Rote was the league's scoring champion (ten goals, ten assists) and rookie of the year.

Playing center forward, a position analogous to center in basketball and hockey, Kyle helped the team go all the way to the championship final of the NASL, before bowing to the Philadelphia Atoms.

That Kyle is a "different breed of cat" is illustrated by the fact that he is using part of his "Superstars" prize money for his tuition at the Perkins School of Theology. Kyle plans to be ordained in two years.

He isn't certain if he will go into active preaching. He intends to remain in soccer for several more years. His rise to stardom in the sport comes at a time when soccer may be experiencing its long-awaited boom in the U.S. In Dallas alone, the number of people playing soccer on all levels has risen from 192 five years ago to more than 40,000 today.

"I'd like to be remembered," Kyle says, "as a pioneer in soccer in this country. I think the public is waking up to how great a game it is. Before I leave it, if I ever do, I want to be sure I've done something for the sport."

I spent my life on a "starvation" diet, then I ate and lost 72 pounds.

By Mary Gioia — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

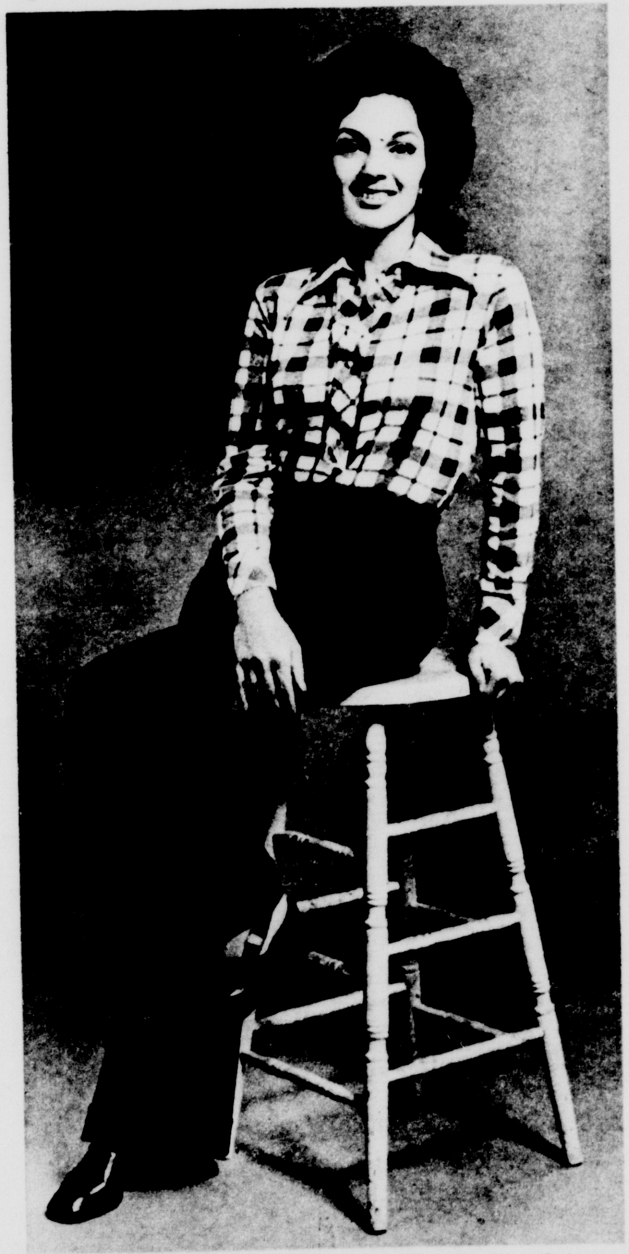
When I say I "starved" myself, the menu for my day went like this. No breakfast. But as soon as I got to work, I'd have diet soda and a piece of coffee cake. Twenty minutes later, coffee to wake me up, with cream and sugar. Then, about eleven thirty, maybe a bite of cake someone's mother made. At lunch-time? I took just a skinny sandwich. But since I didn't have breakfast, I figured I could afford a little scoop of ice cream. Then, mid-afternoon, so I wouldn't cave in, I ordered a malted. Never anything solid. Too many calories! Naturally, by evening, I was starved. I couldn't wait for my first meal of the day. A good healthy Italian dinner. Of course, when my mother put dessert on the table, I didn't want to hurt her feelings, so I ate it. And that, quite frankly, is how I dieted up to 205 pounds.

Now in between all this hunger, I would also take reducing pills. But they always made me very nervous. So eventually I'd give them up until I couldn't stand hearing any more comments, like: "You've got such a pretty, rosy-round face. Too bad you can't lose any weight." Then off I'd go again on my crazy "starvation" diet and add a lot of pounds.

As I talk about it now, I wonder how Carmine, my husband, ever married me. Maybe because, basically, I had a happy disposition. Still, I used to get hurt by remarks. I remember once we were dating and Carmine saw a girl with a beautiful figure. Suddenly, he turned to me and said: "If your head was on that girl's body, you'd be great."

In an effort to make his dream come true, I turned to diuretics, followed by about every reducing pill in the drug store. But they made me feel so sick, I finally broke down and said: "I can't lose weight, Carmine. You have to accept me as I am." And, thank goodness, he did!

At 205 pounds, I stayed on the shore, because I was so afraid that no lifeguard could ever save me if I were drowning.



Now that I'm 133 pounds, I love checks, plaids and pants – especially after years of wearing a blue and black wardrobe.

After we were married, I ran my kitchen like my mother's — with lots of good food which, unfortunately, only added more fat to my hips and thighs. It was too bad, because Carmine always wanted to buy me clothes. And I was so hard to fit.

I think he would have died if he'd known that the pants suit I wore on my honeymoon had a maternity top. Of course, I wasn't pregnant, but it was the only one that was fashionable and a good fit.

Actually, it took another clothes crisis in my life to finally make me reduce. You see, I was to be a bridal attendant at my brother's wedding and I wanted desperately to look nice.

Luckily, I'd been reading those ads about people who'd lost weight on the Ayds plan. But, quite honestly, I thought the whole thing was a gimmick. Then I saw a cardboard stand of an Ayds plan loser in the drug store and the girl looked so terrific I said to myself: "It's probably money down the drain, but here goes." I read the ingredients on a box of Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy and learned they contain vitamins and minerals, but no drugs, so I went home with the chocolate fudge kind.

I started on the Ayds plan the very next day, taking one or two Ayds with a hot drink like the directions say, and the results were astounding. They really helped curb my appetite. What's more, for the first time in my whole life, I began to eat sensibly. Three meals a day and none of the garbage in between.

I also came to realize that there is no magic anywhere when it's a matter of reducing. Maybe I knew it before, but somehow I could never face the fact — or help myself — without the Ayds plan.

In the end I went down to 133 pounds on the Ayds plan. I was so thrilled when I had finally done it that I went out and bought the clingiest orange dress I could find. And I wore it to a big family affair in my hometown, Bayside, Long Island. And guess what? My husband had to re-introduce me to one of my very own cousins.

Believe me, you only have to have something like that happen to you to know that there isn't a "starvation" diet in the world to compare with being able to eat three meals a day on the Ayds plan and still lose weight.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

The Two Basic Personality Types: Which Is Better?

True or False: Introverts have better memories than extroverts. (See number 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women tend to be much more introverted than men.

2. If a person is a nonsmoker, the odds are better than even that he's an introvert.

3. Introverts not only differ from extroverts personality-wise, but even their body chemistry is different.

4. Introverts are more fearful than extroverts.

5. Introverts have better memories than extroverts.

6. When life hands the introvert more pressures, stresses and emotional conflicts than he can handle, he reacts in an entirely different way than the extrovert.

ANSWERS

1. False. In a recent psychological survey, men and women subjects were asked to indicate whether they considered themselves introverts or extroverts. More than three times as many men as women rated themselves as introverts. And studies also show that women, much more than men, tend to share such extroverted traits as sociability, impulsiveness, talkativeness, interest in the personalities of others, etc.

2. True—according to studies conducted by the Economic and Social Research Institute, which show smoking to be definitely associated with extroversion, and that "in nations where the level of extroversion is high, the population's consumption of tobacco is high also."

3. True. Studies at a leading university showed that introverts' body temperatures increased more during the morning hours than did the extroverts'. The opposite was true for the afternoon. Tests also showed that each personality type tended to be most alert during the times of the day when their body temperatures were elevated.

4. True. Consensus of studies shows that "introverts are predisposed to develop conditioned fears, and take less readily than extroverts to potentially dangerous activities." It's interesting to note in this connection that research has shown that it is much harder to teach introverted children to swim, and it is more difficult for them to overcome their fear of the water.

5. True—as demonstrated by psychological studies at the University of London. While extroverts did better on short-term memory tests (retaining learned material better for brief periods), it was found that "after 24 hours, introverts remember almost twice as much as extroverts."

6. True. Studies at Britain's Institute of Psychiatry have shown that introverts in such situations are predisposed to become neurotic, while extroverts are more likely to become involved in some form of antisocial behavior. To put it another way, when the introvert is under greater pressures than he can cope with, he tends to explode inwardly. But the extrovert explodes outwardly—and lets the chips fall where they may!

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

The Two Basic Personality Types: Which Is Better?

True or False: Introverts have better memories than extroverts. (See number 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women tend to be much more introverted than men.

2. If a person is a nonsmoker, the odds are better than even that he's an introvert.

3. Introverts not only differ from extroverts personality-wise, but even their body chemistry is different.

4. Introverts are more fearful than extroverts.

5. Introverts have better memories than extroverts.

6. When life hands the introvert more pressures, stresses and emotional conflicts than he can handle, he reacts in an entirely different way than the extrovert.

ANSWERS

1. False. In a recent psychological survey, men and women subjects were asked to indicate whether they considered themselves introverts or extroverts. More than three times as many men as women rated themselves as introverts. And studies also show that women, much more than men, tend to share such extroverted traits as sociability, impulsiveness, talkativeness, interest in the personalities of others, etc.

2. True—according to studies conducted by the Economic and Social Research Institute, which show smoking to be definitely associated with extroversion, and that "in nations where the level of extroversion is high, the population's consumption of tobacco is high also."

3. True. Studies at a leading university showed that introverts' body temperatures increased more during the morning hours than did the extroverts'. The opposite was true for the afternoon. Tests also showed that each personality type tended to be most alert during the times of the day when their body temperatures were elevated.

4. True. Consensus of studies shows that "introverts are predisposed to develop conditioned fears, and take less readily than extroverts to potentially dangerous activities." It's interesting to note in this connection that research has shown that it is much harder to teach introverted children to swim, and it is more difficult for them to overcome their fear of the water.

5. True—as demonstrated by psychological studies at the University of London. While extroverts did better on short-term memory tests (retaining learned material better for brief periods), it was found that "after 24 hours, introverts remember almost twice as much as extroverts."

6. True. Studies at Britain's Institute of Psychiatry have shown that introverts in such situations are predisposed to become neurotic, while extroverts are more likely to become involved in some form of antisocial behavior. To put it another way, when the introvert is under greater pressures than he can cope with, he tends to explode inwardly. But the extrovert explodes outwardly—and lets the chips fall where they may!

For a "5" Minute Exerciser — it sure does a lot.

*EXPOSING EFFORTLESS EXERCISERS

Reader's Digest (Sept., 1971), New York Times and Good Housekeeping, among others, exposed sauna wraps, inflated belts, weighted belts and effortless exercisers as frauds. Scientific researchers, medical and fitness experts all agree...there is only one way to firm, shape and trim up your body...you must work the inches off!

Because you may have been fooled in the past by "Effortless Exercisers," we are giving you our no-nonsense Free Trial Offer as shown in the coupon below. We want to prove to you — at our risk — what these customers and thousands of others accomplished — So Can You!...Safely...comfortably ...in the privacy of your own home.

Proven results are already verified by the thousands. The guarantee is in writing. Now, can you think of a reason for not ordering your "5" Minute Total Body Shaper and start looking and feeling like a million...in just 3 days?

'5' MINUTE BODY SHAPER

We Care About The Shape You're In — DON'T YOU?

Results in just 3 days!

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it...If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

The Weider "5" Minute Body Shaper plan is based on doing ONE CONTINUOUS, RHYTHMIC CO-ORDINATED EXERCISE, twice daily. That's all you do. No dieting. Eat the foods you like—however, we suggest you consume 20% less food, while on this plan, for maximum results. This one five-minute exercise is designed to attack the Waist and Hips (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look)—as well as burn off excess fat fast by speeding up stored calories and reshaping your chest, abdomen, firming up your legs and arms—your total body!

It's safer than strenuous workouts, beats the time consumption and dangers of gym workouts . . . or any other vigorous sport.

The unit weighs about 16 oz. and fits any wallet size case. You can carry it and use it whenever there's floor space—anytime. Even while watching television.

KEN WALLER writes to tell us that... CASE #136

"I lost 3 inches off my waistline, 6 pounds...and shaped up - in 5 days!"

Ken, out of shape, the day he started the Plan.*

Only 5 Days Later — Gut gone, and shaping up. Fast Enough?*

7 Months Later — Still in great shape — muscular, firm and rugged — Results that Stay!*

*EXPOSING EFFORTLESS EXERCISERS

Reader's Digest (Sept., 1971), New York Times and Good Housekeeping, among others, exposed sauna wraps, inflated belts, weighted belts and effortless exercisers as frauds. Scientific researchers, medical and fitness experts all agree . . . there is only one way to firm, shape and trim up your body . . . you must work the inches off!

Because you may have been fooled in the past by "Effortless Exercisers," we are giving you our no-nonsense Free Trial Offer as shown in the coupon below. We want to prove to you — at our risk — what these customers and thousands of others accomplished — So Can You! . . . Safely . . . comfortably . . . in the privacy of your own home.

Proven results are already verified by the thousands. The guarantee is in writing. Now, can you think of a reason for not ordering your "5" Minute Total Body Shaper and start looking and feeling like a million . . . in just 3 days?

'5' MINUTE BODY SHAPER

We Care About The Shape You're In — DON'T YOU?

Results in just 3 days!

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1936 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it . . . If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

The Weider "5" Minute Body Shaper plan is based on doing ONE CONTINUOUS, RHYTHMIC CO-ORDINATED EXERCISE, twice daily. That's all you do. No dieting. Eat the foods you like—however, we suggest you consume 20% less food, while on this plan, for maximum results. This one five-minute exercise is designed to attack the Waist and Hips (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look)—as well as burn off excess fat fast by speeding up stored calories and reshaping your chest, abdomen, firming up your legs and arms—your total body!

It's safer than strenuous workouts, beats the time consumption and dangers of gym workouts . . . or any other vigorous sport.

The unit weighs about 16 oz. and fits any wallet size case. You can carry it and use it whenever there's floor space—anytime. Even while watching television.

OPTACON
Can it replace Braille?

A new device will help the blind read without using Braille. It has been invented by three Stanford University professors—one of whom has a blind daughter. "I presume," says Dr. J. G. Linvill, "her unfortunate circumstance gave me the drive to find something for the blind." Called the Optacon, the electrical device converts an optical image to a tactile image on a vibrating rectangular field. The blind person takes the scanning machine (pictured) and moves it over the printed page from letter to letter. As the right hand scans the page, the left hand picks up a tactile image of the letter from a small vibrating device about the size of a portable tape recorder. The Optacon may be used with a small amount of training and is far less complicated than learning Braille, according to its creators. The machine now costs about $5,000 but will be cheaper when it is mass-produced. (For more information write to the Electronics Laboratories at Stanford University, Stanford, Calif. 94305.)

John Kennedy

QUOTE: The Russians idolize the late John F. Kennedy says Charlotte Y. Salisbury in her new book. "I don't believe there has ever been an American family that appealed so to foreigners as the Kennedys, and for many of the same reasons that they appealed to us. They were so exciting, so dashing, so young and idealistic, so hard-working and dedicated to their country. And it is always glamorous to be so rich. I was told that John F. Kennedy has become like an icon to many Russians; his picture hangs in many Russian homes. He is worshiped as the embodiment of intelligence, democracy and freedom, a god and a martyr." EDWARD ASNER
Father of twins

When Ed Asner is not playing Lou Grant on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," he is at home with his twins—a boy and a girl. Are twins harder to raise than one child? "Yes," says Asner, who is becoming something of an expert on the subject, "particularly if you want them to grow up as individuals, as we do. When there are two children, one usually intimidates the other. A parent can always reason with the older one, but with twins it's a constant problem. At first the girl was more dominant, but now it's the boy who's loud-mouthed. We also make sure they don't dominate each other by keeping them in separate schools." Sounds like the proverbial battle of the sexes to us!
